ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 6, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 20th Dec.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 18th Dec.; and from Calcutta to the 18th Dec.

THE first meeting of the Legislative Council was held on Dec. 13th, when the two Central Provinces Bills and the Lunatic Asylum Bill were passed.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR will be the guest of the Nepal Government during his shooting trip in the Terai, the Durbar making all arrangements, both for sport and supply.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS is now at Meerut, where he will stay throughout the Central Rifle Meeting.

LORD CONNEMARA pays a visit to Hyderabad shortly after Christmas. He is expected there about Dec. 31st, and will make a stay of four or five days at the Basheer Bagh Palace as the guest of the Nizam.

THE Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Provinces, accompanied probably by Major-General Sir John Hudson, will proceed to Benares on Dec. 20th to attend the installation of the Maharaja. Sir Auckland purposes spending Christmas at Rurki, but will return later to Benares to receive Prince Albert Victor and entertain him whilst in the North-West. For the remainder of the winter Lucknow will be the Lieut.-Governor's headquarters. His Honour neither purposes going into camp nor coming back to Allahabad this side of next summer.

SIR ALEXANDER WILSON has accepted the seat in the Legislative Council vacated by Mr. Robert Steel.

SIR GREGORY PAUL and the Hon. Mr. C. H. Moore have been reappointed to the Bengal Council, and Mr. Peacock has been appointed in the place of Mr. Colman Macaulay, who has been granted five months' extension of furlough.

THE RIGHT HON. HUGH CHILDERS, M.P., has just started on a short visit from Bombay to Baroda and Ahmedabad.

MR. H. S. KING, M.P., arrived in Lahore, and remained only a day or two. There was an informal dinner at the Punjab Club on Dec. 12th in his honour.

MR. AMIR ALI will take his seat as Judge of the Calcutta High Court after the Christmas holidays, having been appointed provisionally, pending the receipt of letters-patent from England.

MR. QUINTON will visit Calcutta during January if the Bengal Government consider it necessary to consult with him then regarding the course of events in the Lushai country.

MR. HARVEY JAMES has resumed his duties as Secretary in the Legislative Department.

MR. A. P. MACDONELL has arrived in Calcutta from Rangoon, and will shortly resume his duties in the Home Department.

MR. COTTERELL TUPP's resignation of the Civil Service is gazetted, with effect from Oct. 17th last.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. B. NORMAN, on vacating the Assam command, proceeds to England on one year's furlough.

COLONEL DEANE will be confirmed in his appointment as head of the Remount Department, vice Colonel Ben Williams.

COLONEL S. B. MILES, Resident in Meywar, has again been incapacitated for work, and now contemplates taking furlough to England. Colonel Peacock, who acted for him last September, will officiate in Meywar.

MAJOR ROWAN HAMILTON remains on the Viceregal Staff as extra A.D.C. until the close of the Calcutta season.

CAPTAIN BRASIER-CREAGH, A.D.C. to the Viceroy, has met with a serious accident at Calcutta. He was thrown from his pony while playing polo and picked up insensible, in which state he was carried to Government House. There it was found that his thigh was broken. He is now doing well.

THE MAHARAJA OF ULWAR, who has been dangerously ill from pneumonia, is improving.

RAO BAHADUR SRINIVASAROW, Chief Justice of the Gwalior State, died on December 14th, after some months' illness.

It is now considered certain that the Amir will winter in Afghan-Turkistan. He has not yet named a permanent Agent to the Government of India.

SIR R. SANDEMAN started on a tour to the Zhob country and the Gomal Pass on Dec. 19th, and has arranged to take the troops moving from Biluchistan in relief to India with him as escort, namely, one mountain battery, one cavalry and one infantry regiment. He will proceed down the Zhob river till it joins the Gomal stream, and thence through the pass. The work he goes to settle will take two months, for he means to establish posts on the route to be held by the local tribesmen.

MR. LYALL has left Calcutta for Chittagong, having received final instructions regarding the Lushai Expedition.

MR. NEY ELIAS was still at Fort Stedman on Dec. 9th, but was ready to start for the Siam boundary.

IF the pending negotiations with China regarding the Tibet frontier should be satisfactorily concluded the majority of the troops in Sikkim will probably be withdrawn in January. Major Pulley with his party of the 3rd Gurkhas has explored the Niti Pass and found no traces of the Tibetans having entered British territory. He is now returning to Almora.

ABOUT 1,000 remissions of sentences upon prisoners from Upper Burma have been granted during the last five months.

THE revenue of Upper Burma for the current year is expected to reach one crore, though the original estimate was only 88 lakhs. That of Lower Burma will approach three crores, thus giving a handsome surplus for the whole Province.

MORE stringent rules to prevent the smuggling of rubies from Upper Burma are likely to be enacted, as illicit traffic, mainly by means of the post-office, is found to be assuming large dimensions.

THE young Raja of Kapurthala is about to visit his extensive estates in Oudh for the first time. His name heads the list of Talukdars, and he is the leading Sikh Chief north of the Sutlej. He is described as a youth of great promise, learned in several languages, including French and Italian, and taking a keen interest in all that concerns politics in and out of India. He will come of age next year, and the management of his thriving State will pass out of English hands after a guardianship extending over sixteen years. Raja Jagatjit Singh has a full treasury, and his administration is in perfect order. The Marquis of Dufferin honoured him with a visit a short time back, and now he is to have the distinction of receiving Prince Albert Victor and taking him over what is probably the best pig-sticking country in India, close to Kapurthala. The Raja's stay in Oudh will extend over six weeks, and he will have the good fortune of being introduced to Sir Auckland Colvin at Lucknow early in January.

NOTES.

POLITICAL sympathy as a general basis of criticism is all very well (says the Pioneer); but it should not go too far. The Daily News, as is only natural, lashes itself into wrath at the appointment of Lord Harris to Bombay. Lord Harris is a Conservative, and, what is more, his selection gives an opportunity of attacking the Government which has chosen him. For which reason we hear much of his inexperience and lack of qualifications. His career is without achievement and without promise. "It is really scandalous," concludes the article, after putting together all the considerations which did not demand Lord Harris's appointment, "that so deplorable a choice should be made by a Government which continually boasts of its Imperial instincts." But the effect of this diatribe would have been considerably stronger if the writer had not endeavoured to couple it up with a eulogy upon the present Liberal Governor. A great many people who would think Lord Harris quite strong enough for the post in ordinary times yet believe that it requires a longer experience than his, and a more tried judgment, to undo the mischief that has been caused by Lord Reay.

As some doubt seems to exist in Bombay regarding the proposed change of mail-day the Pioneer explains how the case stands. Towards the end of October the home authorities intimated that they were prepared to accept a Saturday departure from Bombay all the year round, as suggested by the Indian Post-Office, subject to certain conditions which were specified. The principal of these was that the P. and O. Company should not be fined for late delivery in England. The Government of India telegraphed their acceptance of the terms, and there is no reason to believe that anything has since happened in England to vitiate the conclusion thus arrived at. But, as we explained the other day, arrangements have to be made between the Postmaster-General at home, the P. and O. Company, and the Australian Colonies, and these take time. The official notification fixing the date on which the change is to be made cannot be issued until the Government of India have been informed of the completion of all the necessary preliminaries.

IN connection with another postal matter, the carrying of a portion of the overland mails by the Karachi-Aden route, the same journal states that only informal inquiries have so far been made by the Indian Post Office on the subject. There is no intention of establishing a new mail service in the ordinary meaning of the term between Karachi and Aden; but if one or other of the great ocean companies take to running weekly steamers between the two ports the Postal authorities may arrange with them to carry part of the mails. Some few years ago the Karachi Chamber of Commerce moved in the matter, proposing, we believe, that Government should by a mail subsidy induce one of these companies to put good steamers on the Karachi-Aden route. The renewal of the contract with the P. and O. Company by the authorities at home, practically without the consent of the Indian Government, effectually prevented this project being carried out. Already the cost of the regular service between Bombay and England is a heavy charge upon the Indian exchequer, and a further outlay on a large scale is impossible. But Karachi is a growing port, and it has drawn some passenger traffic from Northern India since the Hall line offered its special terms for the journey to and from England. This development is likely to excite healthy competition, and Karachi may soon boast of a weekly steamer service. In view of this the Post Office have made the inquiries mentioned. If a steamship company, having started a passenger service, should be willing to carry the mail bags to and from Aden for a fair consideration, an arrangement might be come to with them by the Post Office; but the latter obviously cannot take upon themselves the responsibility of creating a new line by offering a large subsidy at the outset. The mail service will really be the outcome of the passenger service.

At present the mails for Karachi are sorted on the P. and O. steamer, made up into bags, and transferred direct in Bombay Harbour to the Karachi steamer. They are finally sorted on the latter, and delivered in Karachi ready for transmission to their destinations. Under the new arrangement the bags would be handed over at Aden, and sorted after leaving that port by the sorting staff which now works between Bombay and Karachi. Under the existing arrangement letters for Sind and Beluchistan only are sent from Bombay to Karachi by sea, the Punjab being served by the railway mail service through Rajputana. As there is a gain of nearly twenty-four hours, however, by the Aden-Karachi route, as compared with the Aden-Bombay, it might be possible to serve the Punjab and even part of the North-West Provinces by the new line. This is a matter which would have to be taken into consideration in connection with the improved running of special trains when the English mails arrive late in Bombay. The zone in Upper India which is affected by the delay which now so frequently takes place in Bombay is a large one, and if it can be reached more expeditiously from Karachi, then the Government would be fully justified in encouraging the opening out of the Aden-Karachi route. Everything, however, depends upon the establishment by private enterprise of a weekly service of passenger steamers to and from Karachi; when this is an accomplished fact the new mail arrangement will become possible.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Commander-in-Chief the 10th and 11th Dec visited the artillery camp in the neighbourhood of Delhi, where eight batteries have been collected for combined practice. After seeing two days' work His Excellency held a parade, at which he addressed the men in one of those clear and incisive speeches which appeal to the understanding and feelings of all his hearers, from the field officer down to the youngest private, on the bearing and lessons of the work they had been taking part in.

THE recent Army Order prohibiting in the severest terms communication between officers at promotion examinations has been republished with a supplement by the Commander-in-Chief, to the effect that there is little doubt that a similar laxity has sometimes prevailed in India. "All officers concerned are therefore warned that any such misconduct in the future will be visited with the severest penalty, and Boards of Examination are reminded that their duties are very important, and any neglect or perfunctory performance of these duties will incur the severest censure." It is well that this should be widely known, says the Pioneer, for the next committer of what has come to be regarded as a venial sort of transgression is pretty certain, in vulgar language, to catch it hot.

ON the 9th of December new colours were presented at Rajkot to the regiment by the Duchess of Connaught. The Duke made the following remarks on the occasion:—"Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught desires me to say, in presenting these colours, the pleasure it gives her to have the opportunity of doing so during my term of command of the Bombay Army. It is close on 70 years since the regiment was first raised, and, you bear on your colours the names of Aden, Central India, and Afghanistan 1879-80. For five years the regiment did good service in the Persian Gulf, and formed the left column of attack in the taking of Aden, and afterwards in its defence when attacked by a large body of Arabs in 1839. The distinguished services of this regiment, which was one of the Bombay Army that served with the Deccan Field Force under Sir Hugh Rose, tested the bravery and endurance of all ranks. The regiment took an honourable part in the siege of Jhansi, passage of the Betwa, the den of Koonch, Jolowlee, and capture of Kalpi, as also in many minor engagements. It was highly complimented for its service and conduct during this campaign. The march of the regiment up the Bolan Pass during the hottest time of the year reflected the highest credit on the discipline of the battalion. The old colours that you are now taking leave of were presented by that distinguished soldier, Lord Napier of Magdala, under whose eyes you served in Central India. In giving over to your charge these new colours, Her Royal Highness feels she is giving them in the hands of those who know how to honour and defend them, and who will loyally do their duty to their Sovereign and country whatever may be the dangers and hardships to which they may be exposed.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 5.

For the moment Prince Albert Victor's visit to Calcutta is the all-engrossing topic here. The capital has bestirred itself to give a Royal welcome, and for some days preparations have been proceeding on all sides. The scene at the reception on Friday conclusively showed that the mob of unruly school-boys, who made a fiasco of the Town-hall meeting last month, were no true representatives of the loyalty of all classes and races in Bengal. The steamer Kristna, conveying the Prince from Rangoon, anchored at the mouth of the Hooghly on Thursday evening, and proceeded up the river on Friday. Long before Calcutta was reached signs of welcome began to manifest themselves, crowds of people assembling from the villages on both banks, while the shipping in the port and in the river was gaily decorated. About four o'clock the Kristna anchored opposite Prinsep's Ghant, the spot where the Prince of Wales landed fourteen years ago, and was immediately boarded by a deputation from the Viceroy. Here the scene was very striking. A dais and blocks of seats had been erected on the ghant for the accommodation of high officials, Native nobles, and other spectators. Every seat was occupied, and the applications for tickets were about twice as great as the number of seats. The chiefs, dressed in gala attire, and the civil and military officers, in their varied uniforms, made a brilliant show.

Outside the enclosure was a dense mass of all races. The road to Government House across the great open plain known as the Maidan was crowded on both sides, and the river was gay with boats of all descriptions carrying flags and devices of every conceivable kind. Calcutta has witnessed no such demonstration since the visit of the Prince of Wales, and many persons who remember that event say it was surpassed by the scene of Friday. Prince Albert Victor repeatedly expressed his gratification, and certainly he could not fail to be struck by such a remarkable display of loyalty to the Throne. About half-past four o'clock the Prince landed under a Royal salute, and was received at the steps by the Viceroy and the Lieutenant-Governor. Native nobles, representing the leading families of the province, were then presented in order of precedence, after which a deputation from the Municipal Corporation read an address.

His Royal Highness, in reply, said that ever since his arrival in India he had been immensely struck by the intense feelings of affection and devotion to the Throne and the person of the Queen-Empress animating all classes, and by the splendid manner in which he had been received everywhere. His journey so far had been one of continual pleasure, wonder, and instruction, and nowhere was this more the case than in Upper Burma, from which he had just returned. He was now looking forward with equal interest to his tour in Northern India. He would carry away a lively interest in all the Queen's Indian subjects, and, as he knew was the case with his father, these sentiments would ever find the foremost place in his heart. In conclusion, he thanked them for their cordial welcome, adding that since the steamer dropped anchor he had received no fewer than 116 messages of welcome from communities, municipalities, and associations of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, and Assam, of the value of which he was deeply sensible.

His Royal Highness then drove to Government House, escorted by the Calcutta Volunteer horse and by native cavalry. Yesterday the Prince spent a quiet day. He will have a busy time this week. Illuminations, fireworks, and an Oriental fete are to take place on Tuesday. On Wednesday he will be entertained at dinner by the Bengal Club. Balls and other festivities will fill the remaining time.

The Duke of Connaught is expected on Tuesday, but makes a very short stay.

The Native Congress having now finished its sittings, the Press has been summing up its results. The Indian Mirror, the chief organ of the Congress party on this side of India, considers that a great success has been achieved, and points triumphantly to the fact that subscriptions have been promised amounting to Rs.63,000 towards establishing a permanent native agency in London. This, it is maintained, is a crushing answer to those who asserted that the agitators were not prepared to give a material guarantee of their sincerity by losing their purse-strings. The other striking features of the Congress, according to the same journal, were the presence of Mr. Bradlaugh and, for the first time, of several Native ladies. It goes on to suggest that the Congress should now proceed to establish a regular constitution and rules for its meetings.

The Times of India says the interest in the Congress this year is chiefly of a personal nature, centring in the presence of Mr. Bradlaugh and in Sir William Wedderburn's attack on the service to which he once belonged. The national character of the whole affair, it adds, has disappeared. Last year the Mahomedans held aloof; this year they have been followed by the Parsees—a significant fact, seeing that the meeting was held in Bombay. The proceedings were conducted in a minor key—sometimes, perhaps, in a falsetto—while the scheme of representative government put forward was purely Utopian.

These two expressions of opinion may be taken as fairly representing the views of the Congress party and of the general public respectively.

Mr. Bradlaugh left India on Friday, after a visit of barely a fortnight. His few public speeches, as well as his replies to the questions of numerous interviewers, have been marked by moderation and caution. He described himself as favourably impressed by the Congress, but added that he dealt with it from a purely Parliamentary point of view. If its supporters were disposed to resort to illegal methods it would prevent his dealing with it at all, but he saw no signs of that. He thought the movement had the enormous advantage of having attracted English attention to Indian questions. He did not think all official government bad, but when the executive control was kept within narrow limits, that class considered itself infallible and was jealous of criticism. Mr. Bradlaugh generally avoided expressing an opinion on questions of finance and on military matters, pleading want of sufficient knowledge when questioned on such subjects. Replying to an address presented by the Bombay Secular Society, he said he understood that in India the law relating to oaths and religious questions was very reasonable and fair to all. They had only to wait for the growth of education, and the truth or falsity of his opinions would be gradually established.

The first forecasts of the wheat crop in the Punjab and the Central Provinces have just been published. Owing to the want of rain the sowings were not completed in the Punjab when the return was made up, but the large trade of last year has stimulated cultivation, and it seems likely that the area under wheat will fall little, if at all, short of last year. From the Central Provinces the reports are good, although there also unfavourable weather retarded the sowings. More rain is wanted in many places, and the chances seem to point to some reduction in the outturn.

The Indian trade and navigation reports for November show a small increase in the imports and a somewhat larger increase in the exports as compared with the corresponding month of the last two years. A similar result is shown by the aggregate for the eight months which ended on Nov. 30th.

Mr. Childers, who has been staying in Calcutta lately, has left for Darjeeling. He proposes to visit Peshawar, Quetta, and the North-West frontier before leaving India.

THE CHIN FIELD FORCE.

RANGOON, JAN. 5.

Fever is very prevalent among the Chin field force, a large proportion of the troops under Brigadier-General Symons's command being disabled. It is hoped that the sickness will diminish as the country dries up. Little progress has yet been made in the advance against the Tashons, who continue defiant. Some minor chiefs of other smaller Chin tribes show willingness to negotiate. The Saggilaund chief offers to visit the camp, provide coolies, and accompany the column advancing against the Tashon Ywama (capital), if he is paid, and hostages are given for his safety.

The column from Bhamo sent against Tonhon has had some fighting with the rebels. Tonhon, which was strongly stockaded, was captured by the Hampshire Regiment and the Goorkhas after the village had been shelled. One private of the Hampshire Regiment and a Native officer were killed. Four men of the Hampshire Regiment and three Sepoys were wounded. All the roads round Tonhon are infested with rebels.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 5.

A telegram from Tonhon announces that a column of the Chin field force, under Major Blundell, captured that place on the 24th ult. after a slight resistance, with the loss of one Sepoy killed and some few wounded.

RUMOURED AFGHAN TROUBLES.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

ODESSA, MONDAY.

There are rumours current in military circles at Tiflis, emanating apparently from Transcaspian sources, of coming troubles on the Afghan frontier. These rumours are also afloat among military men here, but they are of an undefinable nature, and I am unable to trace them to any distinctly authoritative source. Without attaching any particular importance to rumours of this kind, it is as well to remember that they are not unfrequently the forerunners of coming events in Central Asia. The recruits now being shipped hence by the steamers of the volunteer fleet to the Caucasus number in all about 7,000 men. At least two-thirds of this number are Poles. It is customary to draft nearly all the conscripts from Poland proper into the army of the Caucasus. The remainder are sent into the northern provinces of the Empire.

THE CHIN EXPEDITION. (THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.)

RANGOON, DEC. 30.

Intelligence has been received here from the Southern Column of the Chin expedition, dated Kan, December 20th, announcing that the third stage of the road to Tokwa had been accomplished. The difficulties of transport had been much under-estimated. Nothing had been seen of the Yokwas, though it was believed that they intended to surrender. Much sickness prevailed among the coolies.

LORD CONNEMARA'S TENTH INDIAN TOUR.

Mr. J. D. Rees and Mr. C. Vincent, the private secretaries to the Governor of Madras, have penned a most entertaining description of the remarkably extended tour which his Excellency and his suite completed two months ago. Apart from the literary merits of Mr. Rees's and Mr. Vincent's pamphlet, which are considerable, the journey deserves notice for the varied changes of scene and civilisation through which the party passed, and which comprised such widely dissimilar regions as the alluvial plains of Bengal, the Sikkim Himalayas, the North-West Provinces, Simla, the Indus Valley, the highlands of Beloochistan, Kurrachee, and Bombay. In all, the tour extended over no less than 5,700 linear miles of route by sea and land.

Leaving the capital of the southern Presidency on the 21st of September last, Lord Connemara and suite proceeded in one of the vessels of the British India Steam Navigation Company to the entrance of the Hooghly, where, the tide failing, they had to anchor for a while, during which a visit was paid to the lighthouse and telegraph station, whence the arrival and departure of vessels are signalled to Calcutta. A strong palisading round the group of buildings recalls the time when the frequent attacks of tigers from the neighbouring jungles necessitated these defensive measures. Thence Calcutta was easily reached, but as the Governor was not due at Simla till the 5th of October, he availed himself of the opportunity to make due north for the picturesque Himalayan hill station of Darjeeling, where the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Sir Stuart Bayley, was staying. At Silliguri the plains are left behind, and a remarkable little railway, with 2ft. gauge, take passengers for Darjeeling, ascending 7,000ft. in 50 miles. The engines weigh only 10 to 15 tons, and are very powerful, dragging up a train of 15 or 16 carriages at a good speed. For the most part the line follows the old cart road, but various ingenious devices, such as spirals and reversing stations, have had to be resorted to in order to get it over some of the more difficult portions. The views from the railway are lovely; sometimes it passes through an artificial avenue of forest trees; sometimes it traverses dense jungle, diversified by huge tree ferns and the broad leaves of the wild plantain and calladium, while colour is given by the purple clusters of the so-called Sikkim rose. At Darjeeling Lord Connemara was cordially received by the Lieutenant-Governor and the Maharajah of Cutch Behar, while even the fickle weather lent a welcome by consenting to reveal a view of the grand snowy peaks of the Himalayas, which though barely 50 miles distant, are often obscured for weeks together. A visit was paid to Senchal Hill, 1,600ft. above Darjeeling, a former sanatorium for British troops, now deserted on account of its rainy and generally depressing environments. Here a mountain battery of artillery went through some mimic warfare, and the visitors were regaled with some of the experiences of the troops in the late Tibetan campaign. One story was characteristic. The Tibetans had announced themselves as prepared to exterminate all the British forces, and by way of emphasising this boast they built a strong stone wall, and awaited the attack. A short, sharp engagement ensued, and the Tibetans were soon in full flight, whereupon remarked a native of Sikkim to a captive Tibetan, "If you cannot stop the British when you are behind such defences as that, what is the use of your expecting to stop them anywhere?"

Darjeeling bazaar is a busy scene on market day. Crowds of Bhutias and Lepchas, who are the local inhabitants, and a good many Tibetans attend in their brightest and best clothes, the women gay with coin necklaces, silver ornaments, and bracelets cut out of a single shell, bearing some apparent affinity to our marriage ring. The natives of Darjeeling are a pleasant, good-humoured set of people, fond of a joke, and always with a smile on their faces. They are not handsome, but many of them are almost as fair as Europeans, and have a high colour, while many of the younger women are passably good-looking. Here, on the confines of Tibet, Lama prayer wheels, dealing out prayers when turned in one direction and curses when reversed, and other emblems of the Buddhist faith, are common. The party departed from Darjeeling by the undignified but novel medium of a trolley, which is left to descend by its own weight, and, soon acquiring momentum, hurries the passenger round sharp curves and along the edges of precipices at a breakneck pace. It is described as a fascinating method of travelling, though in spite of powerful brakes, accidents do happen, and an ominous note on the ticket states that the company will not be responsible for injury to passengers.

The approach to Simla from the plains, though not particularly interesting, was pleasant after sleepless nights engendered by the discomforts of travelling in the lowlands. The new Viceregal lodge is built on the top of one of the highest hills, and is approached through a wooden gateway of a Buddhistic form, with Mongol-faced Goorkhas mounting guard. These naturally salute in military fashion, but the Buddhist priests met by Lord Connemara welcomed him by wagging their heads and lolling with their tongues, a customary mode of salutation out there, and made familiar to us in England by the toy figures of Chinese priests.

After a charming stay of five days at Simla the Governor and his party left for Lahore, where the interesting armoury of Sikh weapons, comprising almost every variety of implements of mediæval warfare, from the little "crows' feet," thrown on the ground to lame cavalry horses, up to the most ponderous maces and battle-axes, attracted attention. Thence the party travelled through the sandy plains of the Punjab to the new Lansdowne bridge over the Indus at Rohri, which, though rather thrown into the shade of late by the still grander proportions of the Forth-bridge, must yet be reckoned as a most marvellous piece of modern engineering. The eastern span between the island of Bukkur and the shore is 820ft. long, and the whole structure, including the girder bridge which connects Bukkur with the western shore, cost 38 lakhs of rupees. Beyond, the railway, which leads from the Indian plains up into the Iranian plateau, passes at first through a succession of bare and rocky hills; but the eventual appearance of such fruits as the apple, nectarine, peach, &c., together with a crisp coolness of the air and a corresponding elevation of the spirits of the travellers, all served to remind them that India was left behind, and that they were approaching Central Asia.

At Quetta a formal durbar was held, and many of the leading Afghan and Belooch inhabitants were presented to Lord Connemara. Mr. Rees says most of these gentry were of tall stature, with fair faces of a Jewish cast, long black hair and curly Assyrian-looking beards. They wore fur robes and ample turbans. After the presentations, Lord Connemara made a speech, in which he explained that he was visiting the country merely in the capacity of a private individual, but that, as the Queen's representative in the Southern Presidency, he had frequently met Afghan and Belooch merchants, who wandered as far south as Cape Comorin to sell their horses, fruits, and other merchandise. Sir Robert Sandeman, the Government agent in Beloochistan, does his utmost to encourage trade in the district, and by his order the leading merchants are given seats in durbars.

Lord Connemara and his party travelled as far as Kilah Abdulla, the last station to which the line towards Afghanistan is open. Here a survey was going on, but it appears that the surveyor is as unpopular here as he is in the other parts of British India. The Natives have a fixed idea that the theodolite is a photographic machine, possessed of the virtues of Mr. Weller's microscope, including the capacity of seeing through the walls of dwelling-houses and photographing the ladies of the household standing on their heads. Lord Connemara had a conversation with one of the miners engaged on the tunnel which is being constructed through the Kwaja Amran range. The man had been previously employed on the Severn Tunnel. He said he had had to use his revolver here occasionally, and summed up the merits of his neighbours by saying that the "Punjabs are good chaps, but Pathans (Afghans) are bad 'uns." An instance of the extraordinary innate savagery of the Pathans is given by Mr. Rees. Only a few days before the arrival of Lord Connemara, a Pathan came up to see one of the contractors of the railway works, alleging he was owed Rs. 30 for some work he had done a year before. He was referred to the local authority, but, being disappointed at this, and shortly afterwards meeting a mule-driver belonging to the works, he shot and wounded the man and made off with his mule. The alarm was given, and the frontier police were about to start in pursuit, when Captain Harris, commanding the Royal Engineers, and Lieutenant Rooke, of the Bombay Lancers, outstripping the police, came up with the Pathan and pointed a pistol at him. The robber then fired two barrels and missed, whereupon both the officers replied with their revolvers, but unfortunately missed also.

The Pathan then fired again, shooting Captain Harris through the heart and Lieutenant Rooke through the shoulder-blade and throat, both officers falling on the sand. The frontier police soon came up, and after some fighting the man was captured. His defence, though, was characteristic. He said he had killed two Englishmen in single combat, and the two Sahibs pointed pistols at him, that he had made as good a fight as he could for his life, and would leave the rest in the hands of God. Soon after he died of his wounds.

The railway connecting Southern Afghanistan with the plains of India offered exceptional difficulties to the constructor. In Scinde work had to be conducted in a climate where the thermometer often registers 124 deg. in the shade. Higher up in the mountains and valleys it frequently falls to 18 deg. below zero. In addition to the exceptional difficulties of the ground, floods and landslips had to be encountered, and out of six contractors, one died of cholera, two of fever, and one was murdered. In face of all these discouragements the line was completed, and is now a financial success, in spite, too, of the scantily-inhabited region through which it passes and the competition of Brahui caravans, whose camels may be seen marching along by the side of the iron road. After a visit to Kurrachee and to the famous alligator tank in its neighbourhood, described by Captain John Wood in 1837, the party steamed to Bombay, where Lord Connemara was received by the Duke of Connaught with all honours. At Poonah the Parsee contractor, who supplied the party with an excellent dinner, informed them that his people had just beaten the Europeans at cricket at Bombay, an incident that supplies Mr. Rees with the reflection that the Parsee does well everything that he attempts to do, for (raison de plus) there is no place to which our troops have penetrated in Afghanistan at which a Parsee has not already arrived with tinned provisions, bottled beer, wine, and whisky. At Quetta, our outermost frontier post of civilisation, an enterprising Parsee has been granted the title of Khan Bahadur for his services as contractor for railways, founder of mills, provider of stores, discoverer of coal, distiller of spirits, and possessor, in short, of boundless and indescribable enterprise.

On the 27th of October the party reached Madras, after travelling in all 200 miles by road, 4,230 by rail, and 1,270 by sea.

SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN AND THE RUBY MINES OF BURMA.

(Times.)

We are informed that Sir Lepel Griffin, at the urgent request of the board and principal shareholders of the Burma Ruby Mines Company, has consented to visit and inspect the property of the company in Upper Burmah, and that with this object he will, accompanied by Lady Griffin, leave England by this week's Indian mail.

The work that Sir Lepel Griffin will have to perform may be thus described:—He will have to inspect the property, to supervise the organisation of the staff who are already engaged and at work, to arrange any matters which may be under discussion with the Government, to look to the working of the rules to put down smuggling under the special regulations, and generally to see what has to be done to make the concern a profitable one as speedily as possible. It must not be supposed from this statement of what has to be done that nothing has yet been accomplished towards realizing the expectations formed of the ruby mines district, or that the affair remains still in embryo.

The most important piece of work done is the completion of the road from the Irrawaddy to Mogok, a distance of sixty miles. This road is now in perfect working order, as may be inferred from the fact that a lady contemplates travelling by it to visit a remote part of our Burmese territory. Moreover, heavy machinery has been conveyed along it to the mines. It is also important to note that a great quantity of machinery—cranes, steam pumps, and other implements, whose use has been proved by mining experience in America, Australia, and Africa—has already reached the spot, is on its way to the mines, or has been ordered in England. A considerable staff, under the direction of Mr. Lockhart as chief superintending engineer, and Mr. Atlay, as company's agent, has been organised, with its headquarters at Kyatpyen, while Major Adamson, the Deputy Commissioner at Mogok, has, on behalf of the Government, actively co-operated in all the efforts to improve communications, and to put an end to the dacoities which still occur fitfully and on a small scale. The co-operation of the Burma administration has been assured, and is essential for the successful arrangement of all matters with the native miners who hold licences. Rules for the grant of licences were drawn up on November 1 last, and these provide, among other things, that licences shall only be given to bond fide miners who have worked since the British occupation, that a fee of eight rupees a month for each workman shall be paid, that a licence shall be for only six months and not transferable, and that all fees on stones found go to the Company, which, moreover, possesses the first claim on all stones dug up, and of these a careful register is to be kept, at the miner's risk of forfeiting his licence for not doing so.

These rules, excellent and comprehensive as they seem to be, may be found on further trial to require some modification, as it will be not the least important part of Sir Lepel Griffin's task to closely supervise them, so that while regard is paid to the interests of the Native miners every means will be employed to insure for the company its legitimate advantages, and for the Government the increased rent to which the company's success will entitle it.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

Mr. Thomas Sutherland, M.P., presided on December 30th, over a special general meeting of the proprietors of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company, held at the head office of the company, 112, Leadenhall-street, for the purpose of confirming, in accordance with the provisions of the company's original deed of settlement, the resolutions which were passed by the requisite majority at the special meeting held on the 13th ult. Notwithstanding the dense fog which prevailed, there was a good attendance.

The Chairman said: Gentlemen, it is unnecessary for me to make any observations with regard to the resolutions which I shall presently move, because the whole matter was dealt with at our extraordinary meeting. Therefore, in now moving the adoption of these resolutions, which confirms our proceedings at that extraordinary meeting, I have only to say that we are extremely obliged to you for coming here on this very dark and depressing day in order to sanction a proceeding on our part in your interests. He then moved a series of resolutions dealing with the Seventh Supplemental Charter sanctioned by Her Majesty in Council, the reduction of the capital of the company, the conversion of the company's shares into stock, and other matters.

Lord Leven seconded the motion.

Mr. Wards: When is the money to be paid, sir?

The Chairman: It will be posted as late as possible, seeing that the Bank Rate has gone up to 6 per cent. on the 31st Dec—(laughter). The resolutions were then unanimously confirmed en bloc.

Replying to a hearty vote of thanks, moved by Mr. Robertson, and seconded by Mr. James,

The Chairman observed that for himself he could say, as he felt sure he could for the directors, that they were very grateful for the compliment which had just been paid. The Board had done everything in their power to promote the prosperity of the company, and this end had been attained by the confidence which the proprietors had always reposed in them, and which, he hoped, they would continue to receive in the future. (Hear, hear).

The meeting then separated.

A NEW SOCIAL REFORM MOVEMENT.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Social Conference which it is intended to hold in Bombay a few weeks hence will demonstrate, if it demonstrates nothing else, that political reforms do not entirely monopolise the attention of Native publicists. Endeavours are being made to give a definite character to the deliberations of the Conference, and to show those who take part in it how the course of reform can be translated from phrases into facts. A few days ago there reached us from Poona a circular, the object of which is to prepare for the formation of a Social Reform Association, whose members shall be pledged to certain specific courses of action or of restraint in the ordering of their domestic affairs. Accompanying the circular was a schedule of names of gentlemen of influence and respectability in the Native community—nearly all of them Brahmins and professional men—who have undertaken to further the cause of social reform in one or more ways. At the head of the list is the Chief of the South Mahratta State of Miraj, who has consented to become president of the Association, while the Gaekwar and Holkar have promised to give the movement their countenance as patrons. Amongst the other members are Mr. S. N. Tagore, a civilian of acknowledged ability; Mr. Luxman Jagonath, Dewan of Baroda; Mr. Mahadeo G. Ranade; Professor Bhandarkar, the eminent Sanscritist; Mr. H. H. Dhruva, the District Judge of Amreli; and Mr. H. R. Chiplokar. The presence of their names in the schedule commits each of these gentlemen to one or more reforming obligations. Signature in one column binds the signatory not to incur more than half a year's income in the marriage expenses of a son, and one year's in the case of a daughter. In another column the member binds himself not to marry his children under a specified age, the alternative ages in the case of sons being sixteen, eighteen, or twenty years, and in the case of daughters ten, twelve and fourteen years. Then there are undertakings not to marry a second wife in the lifetime of the first, not to marry after fifty years of age, not to drink liquor except under medical advice, and finally to do the utmost to further the education of daughters. An analysis of the table yields some very interesting results, not the least noteworthy being the proof it gives that those who have taken pledges upon themselves have done so with enough independence of judgment to denote the sincerity of their resolution. The Chief of Miraj, for example, while he pledges himself not marry his daughters below the age of ten, declines to accept sixteen as the minimum age for the marriage of his sons. Mr. Tagore, on the other hand, will not endorse what may be called the teetotal column of the schedule, but he undertakes all its other obligations, pledging himself to the highest minimum age—twenty and fourteen respectively—for the marriage of sons and daughters. Only eight others of the seventy-two are so advanced in this respect as the learned Judge of Sholapur, the majority of them taking sixteen as the minimum age for the marriage of sons, and nearly fifty naming ten as the minimum age for the marriage of their daughters. There are scarcely half-a-dozen who decline the limitations proposed upon marriage expenditure, and only ten withhold their signature from the teetotal column. Only four signatories decline the pledge not to marry a second wife in the lifetime of the first, and the same number, though not the same persons, refrain from submitting themselves to an ordinance, which may prove self-denying, not to marry after fifty years of age. The old conservative spirit in regard to the intellectual status of women still lingers even amongst social reformers, for no fewer than ten of the seventy-two decline to pledge themselves to do their utmost to further the education of their daughters. Such, at least, is the explanation which at first sight suggests itself, though it is conceivable that some of the members have passed the column by for the sufficient reason that they have no daughters to educate.

THE PROPOSED REDUCTION OF THE MADRAS ARMY.

(Madras Mail.)

The Government of India having again to face the disagreeable fact of increased military expenditure, has, as usual, determined to redress the balance at the expense of the most peaceful Presidency. The policy of trying to lengthen your blanket by cutting a strip off the top, and sewing it on to the bottom, has been practised too often by the Indian army administration to provoke more than a mild remonstrance. The Madras Army is used to reductions, as the eels are to skinning. It is necessary to take some steps to provide against a possible advance of the Russian armies from Central Asia upon India; the North-West frontier has accordingly to be fortified; the fortifications must be paid for; and the money is to be found by reductions somewhere. The process is not a patent of the Simla Staff, nor peculiar to the Indian Army. The British Government lately broke up batteries of Horse Artillery to make an ammunition train, very much after the fashion of the Chinaman who set fire to his family mansion to obtain the luxury of roast pork. The wealthiest nation in the world cannot afford the few extra millions necessary to place its Liliputian Army in a condition of efficiency, while relatively poor countries, like Germany and Italy, add to their already enormous burden of military expenditure, rather than allow a single weak spot in their defensive armour to remain unguarded. Bengal copies Westminster, and provides for the defence of the Empire by fortifying the approaches and disbanding the garrisons. The penny wise pound-foolish policy will no doubt be continued until a serious reverse brings home the lesson already so dearly learned by the French in the Franco-German War.

If any real economy were to be effected by the reduction of the Madras Regiments now proposed, one could not reasonably object to the measure. But when it is known that the money so saved (what little there is saved at all) will be spent on frontier fortifications, and will, as likely as not, in the long run be wasted, we do object strongly. The great object of the reductions is to get rid of ten or twelve regiments before the end of the financial year so as to show a surplus for military purposes available for frontier schemes. When the money has been secured, it will be time enough to think about raising fresh regiments to take the place of those now reduced, as was done in 1885 when all the Bengal regiments broken up in 1882 by Lord Ripon were raised anew. What has been the result of that Viceroy's reductions, and where is the saving effected by them? The only difference is that non-effective charges have been seriously increased, and that the Bengal Army has been strengthened at the expense of the Armies of Madras and Bombay. The result of the reductions now proposed will probably be the same. The raising of new local corps to garrison Burma, or Police battalions, or whatever they may be called, will no doubt furnish a fruitful field for the exercise of patronage; but we do not think that its extension would furnish ground for congratulation to the Bengal Army. The pensions to the sepoys, the bonuses, enhanced retiring allowances, and compensation paid to the English officers of the disbanded regiments, added to the expense of the new levies, which must necessarily replace them, will probably leave the Indian Exchequer with a balance on the wrong side after the whole transaction; but the object of the measure is not to effect any real permanent economy, but to manipulate the military budget for 1890-91.

The reasons for selecting the Madras Army for reduction are obvious. The Head-quarters Staff of the Bengal Army, and the Head-quarters Staff of the Indian Army are identical, and it is only natural to human nature that men should prefer their own interests to those of others. If the Bengal Army were to share proportionately in all reductions made, we should hear nothing more about them, or the necessity for them. When the Government of India proposed the reduction of part of the Madras Army in 1870, on the ground of financial necessity, the Secretary of State firmly insisted that whatever reductions were made should be made proportionately from all the three Presidency Armies; the Indian Government then withdrew its proposal. But the Simla authorities profited by experience, and in 1882 they met the objection of the Secretary of State by making a corresponding reduction in the Bengal Army, thus obtaining his consent to the disbandment of a number of Madras and Bombay regiments. But the Bengal regiments then broken up were raised again three years afterwards! We have little doubt but that some similar method will be resorted to on the present occasion, and local corps, officered from the Bengal Staff Corps, will be raised to garrison Burma. It is easy to give a dog a bad name and hang him; and the Madras Native Army having had its efficiency impaired by the action of the Supreme Governments, its impaired efficiency is made the pretext for getting rid of it. During the past thirty years the Madras Army has suffered three reductions of twelve, four, and eight regiments at a time, respectively; and these reductions have discouraged recruiting, checked promotion, and impaired esprit de corps. The regiments remaining were filled up with old soldiers and strange officers from the disbanded corps, who remained a class apart, and never amalgamated with their new comrades. The Madras regiments now marked for disbandment are as well behaved as, and better disciplined than most regiments of the Bengal Army; and we hope that the Secretary of State may not prove quite so compliant as is expected in Bengal. It is high time that some check should be put on the officers of the Simla Military Secretariat, who seem to have inherited the peculiar talents of their predecessors of pre-Mutiny times for making a mess of military matters.

EDUCATION IN INDIA.

(Englishman.)

Lord Lansdowne's firm grasp of the educational problem, as evinced by his important speech at the Convocation of the Lahore University, has been widely recognised throughout India. The sound sense of the address was indisputable, and was bound to command the assent of all who have given the least thought to the curious medley of social, religious, and racial notions which go to make up the educational question of India. But perhaps even more notable than the Viceroy's clear insight into the difficulties by which the educational question is beset are the perfect candour and resistless logic which his Excellency applies to the various issues which we have been too apt hitherto to regard as evils. The speaker at once places what may be called the official employment evil in true perspective. Even now, he says, the proportion of the number of appointments in the public service is infinitesimally small as compared with the total number of graduates. That phrase, "infinitesimally small," is as close fitting and eloquent if meaning as Lord Dufferin's "microscopic minority." It places the supposed evil in a true light, and brings into relief the paltry character which is given to our Universities by those who would regard them as mere stepping-stones to official employment. As Lord Lansdowne had the courage to declare, this so-called evil is not likely to diminish, for the simple reason that while graduates are rapidly increasing, the measure of employment cannot be indefinitely extended. Even if every appointment in India were thrown open to students the number would bear a very small and insignificant proportion to the number of Native lads who, at the present rate of increase, will possess a University degree ten years hence. It is, however, among the possibilities of this big question that the rate of increase may not be maintained when it is once clearly understood that official employment is not to be counted upon as the crown of a University career.

BENGAL.

(Dec. 18.)

A LARGELY-ATTENDED meeting of the elite of the European and Native community of Calcutta and the mofussil met in the rooms of the British India Association, and resolutions were passed, appointing a general committee for the purpose of giving H.R.H. Prince Victor an entertainment on the maidan, comprising as many form of Native amusements as possible. Telegrams and letters had been received from the leading Nawabs in the mofussil supporting the movement.

THE Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, which the other day declined to uphold the Congress meeting, passed a resolution that they would join any public body to give a fitting reception to the Prince.

MORE than fourteen thousand rupees were subscribed on the spot. The Maharajah of Vizianagram stated that, as he is not a noble of Bengal, he subscribed rupees one thousand only, but following the example of the Maharajah of Durbhanga, he will guarantee, if necessary, whatever fund may be required to make the movement to entertain his Royal Highness a complete success.

Mr. CROSTHWAIT, in moving that the Bill as amended by the Select Committee on the organisation and administration of municipalities of the Central Provinces be passed, remarked that it was found necessary to legislate, not with the intention of materially changing the constitution of municipalities, but because the existing Act of 1873 was no longer sufficient to meet the requirements of administration by that Act. A great deal was left to be done by Government; but now conditions were changed, and it was expedient that the responsibility of governing towns should rest more extensively on municipal committees, and their powers should be capable of more independent exercise.

— In regard to the suggestion by some whose opinion was asked that, owing to so much progress being made by municipalities, alteration should be made in their constitution by providing that a larger proportion of the members of the Committee should be persons other than salaried officers of Government, the Select Committee decided against it. The law is that not less than two-fifths of the members of the Committee shall be persons other than salaried officers of Government. If people wish to elect a majority of such officers, they should be allowed to do so within certain limits. In the present Bill this rule applies in every case, whether appointments are made by election or nomination. Considering the circumstances in the Central Provinces, it is considered inexpedient to enact that non-official members of the Committee shall in all cases be more than two-fifths of the whole committee.

The speaker then went on to observe that as municipalities will now be relieved of the obligation of maintaining police, whether in part or wholly, on condition that the municipality shall apply to legitimate objects a sum not exceeding the cost of such police establishment.

In regard to the provisions regarding the powers of a committee for sanitary and other purposes, and regarding offences against municipal law, the speaker said that it is expedient to confer those powers by express enactment, and not leave them to be provided for by rules, as municipal committees would necessarily seldom be equal to the task of framing rules in such matters. The same with respect to definition and punishment of offences under the Act.

Mr. Crosthwaite, in moving that the Bill to make better provision for conservancy in villages in the Central Provinces be passed, said that it is based on the principle that village sanitation can best be carried out with the co-operation of the villagers themselves, and the measure has been framed with a view of enabling the authorities to enlist on the side of sanitary reform, local knowledge, and popular sympathies, and to make use of the power of Local Self-Government which has always existed amongst village communities.

Both Bills were passed.

MADRAS.

(Dec. 18.)

THE Prince and party, accompanied by Lord Hamilton, embarked, Dec. 16 at 8.30 on board the steamer Kistna for Rangoon. Madras made a brilliant demonstration in his honour, and everything went off well. At the last moment the hour of departure was altered from 5 P.M. to 8 A.M., thus causing some inconvenience, which, however, was amply made up for by the cheerfulness and perseverance with which everybody was concerned in the work. To get everything into order the work had to be continued till late at night. Lord Connemara drove the Prince from Government House, Guindy, to the pier in a victoria, escorted by the full complement of bodyguard under Captain Kerrich. The entire route, about seven miles long, was decorated very gaily, several triumphal arches of magnificent workmanship being set up at intervals. All the houses along the route were also decorated. Thousands upon thousands of people crowded the roadsides, enthusiastically cheering the Prince as he passed. Near Popham's Broadway, Black Town, the children belonging to the various schools in the city—European, Eurasian, Hindu, and Mahomedan—were massed together, over ten thousand being present. This was a striking scene, and must have impressed the Prince much. The Prince's carriage halted a few minutes here to hear the children sing the National Anthem and receive bouquets and garlands. As the carriage moved off the children loudly cheered the Prince, who acknowledged by bowing repeatedly. The scene at the pier was highly picturesque, and one not to be easily forgotten. Thousands of people crowded along the sea-shore on both sides of the pier and on the harbour, and cheered enthusiastically. All the offices on the beach road were dressed in flags and bunting, as also several steamers in the harbour. On his arrival at the pier the Prince was received by Admiral Fremantle, Flag-Lieutenant Watson, Captain Williams, Aide-de-Camp to the Governor, who had preceded the party from Government House, and by Captain Street, Port Officer, Mr. McWatters, Chairman, Harbour Trust Board, who conducted the Royal party to a shamiana, where a brilliant gathering of civil and military officers awaited the Prince's arrival. A large number of ladies were also present. The Prince shook hands with the Members of Council, the Commandier-in-Chief, and the heads of departments, and then walked along the pier. At the landing stage Lord Connemara bade him farewell, and the Prince stepped into a steam-launch belonging to the Boadicea, with Admiral Fremantle and Captain Street, and proceeded towards the steamer Kistna, under a double Royal salute, fired by the Boadicea and the battery on the shore. The crews of the vessels in harbour manned the yards. The steamer sailed at 8.50 under another salute from the Boadicea. The surf was very high, and the weather showery, but nothing serious occurred to interfere with the proceedings. The troops, including the volunteers, lined the roads from the Wallajah Gate, near the Fort, to the pier. The first salute, announcing the approach of the Royal party, was fired by the Volunteer Artillery. The guard-of-honour on the pier was furnished by the Cornwall Regiment under Captain Verschöyle.

The Marchioness of Waterford subsequently embarked for Calcutta on board the steamer Nepaul.

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 20.)

THE result of the ballot at the Chamber of Commerce for the Chairman of the Chamber for the ensuing year was that Mr. A. F. Beaufort, of Messrs. Lyon and Co., was elected.

A PUBLIC meeting of the citizens of Ahmedabad was held in the Hemabhai Institute, when it was unanimously resolved to raise subscriptions to perpetuate Lord Reay's name in Bombay in connection with the Guzerat College.

COLONEL PEAT proceeds to England on furlough by the middle of February. His locum tenens has not been appointed yet. He has won the esteem and respect of the Natives and Europeans for his impartial and even-handed justice.

CAPTAIN MEADE has left for Sirdarpore to assume the office of Political Agent, Bhopawar Agency, from Colonel Burne. The Bhopawar Agency includes many important Native States like Dhar, Alirajpore, and others, and Captain Meade's appointment is welcomed by all of them, as they knew him as First Assistant, Indore, and his father, Sir Richard Meade, was Governor-General's Agent, Central India.

MESSRS. KUTCHLER & Co., dye manufacturers and merchants of Germany, and having an establishment also in London, have presented an application, through their solicitors, Messrs. Little, Smith, Frere, and Nicholson, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley, praying for an injunction to restrain Messrs. Finlay, Muir and Co. from importing into, or selling in, Bombay, a certain description of aniline dye, in boxes or packets bearing labels which were a colourable imitation of those used by them (plaintiffs) to cover their special manufacture, and which they asserted were being fraudulently used to deceive intending purchasers. His Lordship granted the order as applied for. Among other business his Lordship also issued directions, at the request of the Company, for the winding up of the Prince of Wales' Spinning and Manufacturing Co., Limited, appointing Mr. Limjee N. Banajee official liquidator, on his furnishing Government securities, his remunerations to be fixed hereafter; all costs of, and incidental to, the petition being paid out of the assets of the company, other than the mortgaged assets.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain during the week in one taluka of Belgaum: more needed for late crops in Ahmednugger and parts of Khandeish, Nassik, Poona, Satara, Sholapore, Bijapore, and Belgaum. Standing crops in two talukas of Hyderabad slightly damaged by locusts, in one of Poona withering for want of moisture, and in two of Poona and Sholapore diseased. Exotic cotton in one taluka of Dharwar blighted. Crops otherwise good. Cotton prospects good, except in three talukas of Broach. Harvesting of early and sowing of late crops, including opium in Baroda, progressing generally. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Khandeish and Dharwar, and two of Nassik. Water insufficient in one taluka of Nassik.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

The most readable paper, to our thinking, in the current number of the National Review, is J. Conan Doyle's just and impartial appreciation of Mr. R. L. Stevenson's "Methods in Fiction," though the post of honour has been assigned to Commander Lovett Cameron's exposure of the hollowness of Portuguese pretensions in Nyassaland and the Shiré Highlands. Mr. H. C. Trill hardly does justice to himself in his laboured attempt to fix the exact position held by Robert Browning in English literature. It was, no doubt, a difficult task to estimate the precise merits of a dual personage, one-half of whose work was singularly luminous, while the other half was clothed in obscurity—"dark with excess of light," his admirers may perhaps affirm. On the other hand, Mr. Alfred Austin has no hesitation whatever in placing Lord Tennyson in the sovereign throne of British poesy. A little less of indiscriminating eulogy, a little more of careful analysis, might possibly have been preferable. Mr. Charles Pickering's notice of "The Persian Poetry of Avicenna" errs only in its excessive brevity. As the founder of the Aristotelian school, alike in Arabia and in Spain, Ibn Sina may be sufficiently well known, but it may be questioned if he is often named as a poet, and as one scarcely, if at all, inferior to Omar al Khayyām. Captain Willoughby Verner must also be credited with having contributed a very interesting paper on the past and present condition of Romney Marsh, with most valuable notes on its strange Flora and rapidly diminishing bird-life. It is clearly a district to be visited at various periods of the year, and with infinite enjoyment. The remaining articles in this number have each some merit of their own, but, collectively, they belong to the category of "padding." As old Fuller once quaintly remarked, "Without a fair proportion of chaff in his feed, the horse is apt to bolt his oats."

A THOUSAND MILES ON AN ELEPHANT IN THE SHAN STATES.†

If perseverance really deserves to be crowned with success, Messrs. Colquhoun and Holt Hallett are entitled to the best wishes of their fellow-countrymen for the attainment of the object they have so long had in view. Their constancy, moreover, has not been founded altogether on selfish motives. Rather would it be true to affirm that they have throughout been actuated by a sincere patriotism in their energetic efforts to rouse the British and Indian Governments to a proper sense of the duty that lies before them. The south-western provinces of China, Yunnan and Szecheun, are known to constitute the richest portion of the Celestial Empire, though, owing to their geographical situation, they are cut off from direct commercial intercourse with the civilised world. The hopes temporarily entertained of throwing the Yang-tse river open to navigation have been darkened for the moment, but it is simply a question of time—or, rather, it mainly depends upon the insistence of our Minister at Peking. Of late years the influence of an English ambassador at Foreign Courts has become "une quantité négligeable," though in China it might be reasserted without undue loss of time. In the meanwhile Messrs. Colquhoun and Holt have for the last ten years been striving to "tap" the two fertile provinces already named by means of a railway starting from Siam and running through the Shan States. The idea has only one object—if it be one. The project is, we fear, too grandiose to be, for the present, successfully carried out into form and substance. The expenses are certain to be enormous, while the profits must be extremely exiguous until the line is completed from beginning to end. The commerce of Siam is respectable, but the larger portion of it already finds its way to the sea coast. At the same time, if the king should prove sufficiently liberal-minded to afford substantial aid to the projected line, its construction might be accomplished without a ruinous outlay. When the Shan States, however, are reached, the greatest difficulties will have to be encountered and mastered. The local trade is comparatively worthless, and the country is altogether "obstructive." It is rugged and mountainous, inhabited by rude, warlike tribes, owing only a nominal allegiance to any overlord, and quite content to adhere to the experience of their forefathers. It is, of course, possible that they may be gradually won over to withdraw all active opposition to the construction of an iron road through their inhospitable territory, but no dependence could ever be placed upon the permanence of their friendly attitude. The Indian Government is, for all that, bound to incur considerable expense and to accept still greater responsibility, with a view to prevent the intrusion of French adventurers. The conquest of Tonking has proved such a barren enterprise that almost any scheme which promises a prospect of financial advantages is sure to be hailed with acclamation at the Quai d'Orsay. Besides, a dog-in-the-manger policy, as directed against this country, is always popular with the Parisian Press, and to be the first to open business relations with the Celestial Empire would certainly score in favour of French smartness. In any case, Tonking, rather than British Burma, would have the upper hand in the Shan States, with corresponding loss of influence to England in Siam, China, and its own Burmese Provinces. The line in question, however, can never be completed without the aid of a substantial subsidy from the Indian—or, rather, it should be from the Imperial Government. There is not sufficient inducement for capitalists to invest their money in a speculation over which they can exercise no control, and which for many years can yield no tangible results. In the first instance, then, might it not be more prudent to be content with good roads laid out by English surveyors, and not on the old Roman principle, supplemented, perchance, by tramways for the short distances over level ground and between towns not too far remote from one another? There are no engineering difficulties which cannot nowadays be overcome, but it does not follow that profits will ensue, and men of business minds do not usually care to expend their money upon a sentiment. But, whatever may be our uncertainty as to the commercial success of Mr. Holt Hallett's railway, we have none whatever as to the value of his book. It is a mine of really useful information. The engravings, if not highly finished, give an excellent idea of the country, and of the subjects they are intended to illustrate. The general reader, of course, might cheerfully dispense with the appendix, which, on the other hand, to commercial men may be worth more than Mr. Hallett's most lively descriptions of his varied experiences. He has written a book that should interest all classes of the community, even those little disposed to venture their hoardings upon Eastern enterprises.

THIRTY YEARS OF COLONIAL GOVERNMENT.*

"Governors and Legislatures should speak by their actions." Such is the standard which Sir George Bowen, the hero of these goodly volumes, himself sets up as the touchstone of his own career and assuredly few will gainsay either the wisdom of the maxim—albeit; in these times much talk is the order of the day—or the praise due to its author when the latter is judged by the code which he himself has proclaimed.

When Tasmania demanded its own Legislature as apart from the rest of the Australian Empire, the delicate and difficult task of forming and inaugurating a new Constitution for the "fledgling" devolved upon a young man who, on more occasions than one, had showed the metal of which he was made, though he had won his spurs, and was new to Colonial work. The chance was a rare one—for to create history instead of following in the beaten track of precedent and experience falls to the lot few. Sir George Bowen made ample use of his brilliant opportunities, and on his retirement left to his successor the easy task of giving a Colony which, though young in years, yet under the new designation of Queensland became rich in reputation, and still stands foremost amongst the leading States of our Colonial Empire.

Scarcely less trying, though the scene was entirely different, was the Governorship of New Zealand, just at a time when the Natives were giving an immense deal of trouble to Great Britain—at a time when massacre and murder impregnated the air of this portion of England's fair domains—at a time of which the dangers can scarcely adequately be realised in these peaceable days of quiet and security in the Settlement in question.

Transferred to Victoria Sir George Bowen, after the course of a few months, found himself face to face with a deadlock as unfortunate as it was unavoidable by any action on the part of the Governor. What he did to avert the storm, and how he lulled the waves of discord which at one time threatened to disrupt the Empire, must be read in extenso in the volume under review. That he triumphed over all difficulties is, perhaps, only another way of saying that he was probably one of the ablest administrators who ever quitted the charms of home life for the triumphs of the Antipodal World.

If the Mauritius, to which he next repaired, offered perhaps less scope for high capacity and unrivalled talents, Hong Kong was a dependency which called into play just at this time the highest statesmanship and diplomacy. France and China were engaged in a quarrel which, if not deadly, was at least dangerous to the peace of the East, though Russia, too, was on the verge of war with England. Hong Kong was all the while in a state of utter defencelessness. Sir George Bowen set himself with right good will to steer clear of the quicksands and shoals which might at any moment wreck the ship of State, and when he quitted this, the last of his great administrations, not a ripple disturbed the face of the ocean of peace.

Truly, in all these portions of the Empire Sir George Bowen did much and well; and the record of his career is alike interesting and instructive. But at the present juncture, when there are not wanting persons, who, to serve their own selfish purposes, are seeking to disintegrate the finest Empire that the world has ever seen, it cannot be otherwise than important to find that in the Colonial World consolidation is the order of the day, and we commend to all who wish their country well to peruse the most interesting and valuable essay (at the close of the second volume), entitled "Imperial Federation." If this should open the eyes of England's sons to their duties and their danger not in vain would Sir George Bowen have strutted on this stage of life, and not without good result would the present instructive volumes have seen the light of day.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL SIR HENRY YULE.

Colonel Sir Henry Yule, C.B., K.C.I.E., R.E., lately a member of the India Office Council, died on the 30th ult. Sir Henry Yule was the youngest son of the late Major William Yule, Bengal Army. He was born in May, 1820, at Inveresk, a residence of his family, near Edinburgh. He was educated in Scotland, and, being destined for an Indian military career, entered Addiscombe in Feb., 1837. He passed out in Dec., 1838, for the Bengal Engineers, and reached India early in 1840. Although the first Afghan War was then in progress, he was not sent to the front, his earliest employment being in connection with the canals in the North-West Provinces. His first war experience was gained in the Sutlej and Punjab Campaigns. On the outbreak of war with Burma he was sent to the Arracan frontier and ordered to make a full survey of the borders between that province and Upper Burma. During this work he attracted the attention of the late Sir Arthur Phayre, and when that officer was sent, in 1855, on a special mission to Ava, Colonel Yule accompanied him as his private secretary, and afterwards wrote an account of the embassy. After his return to India the mutiny broke out, and during 1857 he was employed on defensive works at Allahabad, Benares, and Mirzapore. In 1858 he was attached to the Railway Department, having previously acted as Under-Secretary in the Public Works Department, and from 1857 to 1862 he held the appointment of Secretary to the same office. In 1862 he retired from the service with the hon. rank of colonel. After an interval of 13 years he returned to official life as member for the India Council, to which he was appointed in 1875. The state of his health compelled his retirement from that post six months ago, and Lord Cross paid a handsome but well-deserved compliment to the excellent work he had done during his 14 years' stay in the India Office. His influence on the many literary and geographical matters submitted to the Library Committee of the India Office was always discriminating and beneficial, and on public work questions he spoke with the experience of one who had treated them in a practical form. But it is not as an official, however respected and efficient, that Col. Yule will be best remembered. The engineer officer and member of the India Council sinks in comparison with the geographer and writer. In the earlier years of his career his literary feats were confined to technical subjects connected with his profession. His narrative of the mission to Ava, already referred to, and published in 1858, was his first attempt in the wider field of letters. The most active period of his literary career began after his return from India. In 1866 he published, under the title of "Cathay and the Way Thither," a masterly account of the attempts to reach China overland in the Middle Ages. Excellent as was this work, it was in turn eclipsed by the edition he brought out in 1871 of the "Book of Ser Marco Polo." The journal of the gossiping Venetian had been published several times, both before in English and in French, but it was at once admitted that Col.

Yule's edition superseded every other. Col. Yule's next task was, in conjunction with the late Mr. Burnell, to make a collection of curious and out-of-the-way words and terms—an operation which naturally extended over many years, and at last resulted in the appearance of "Hobson Jobson; or, a Glossary of Anglo-Indian Terms" in 1886. This work is as remarkable in its way as either of its predecessors. Before "Hobson-Jobson" had issued from the press, Col. Yule was busily engaged editing the "Diary of William Hedges," which made its full appearance last year in three volumes under the auspices of the Hakluyt Society. In addition to these important works, Col. Yule was the author of a large number of fugitive writings in the journals of the learned societies, and in works in which he took a friendly interest, as, for instance, in the late Capt. Gill's "River of Golden Sand."

COLONEL SIR EDWARD BOSC SLADEN.—We have to announce the death of Colonel Sir Edward Bosc Sladen, which took place on Saturday after a short illness from pneumonia. The late Sir Edward was the son of Mr. Ramsey Sladen, late Physician-General of the Maaras Presidency, and was born at Madras in 1830. He was twice married; first, in 1861, to Sophie Catherine, eldest daughter of Mr. Richard Pryce Harrison, C.S.I., late Comptroller-General of Accounts, Bengal (she died in 1865); and secondly, in 1880, to Katharine, eldest daughter of Mr. Robert Russell Carew, of Carpenter's park, Herts. He entered the Madras Staff Corps in 1849, served in the Burmese war of 1852-53, and was present at the relief of Pegu in 1852, and at the second investment of Pegu in 1853. He conducted two successful expeditions against rebel hill tribes of the Yonzalee district, Martaban Provinces, in 1856-57, where he was dangerously wounded. For this service he received the thanks of the Supreme Government. With his regiment, the 1st Madras Fusiliers, he served in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny from February, 1858, until the return of the regiment to Madras. He was present with Sir James Outram's Corps of Observation at the Alumbagh and at the capture of Lucknow, served in the Oude campaign from June to December, 1858, was appointed Brigade-Quarter-master to Sir A. Horsford's force on the march to and capture of Sultanpore, and also with the same force at the affair and capture of guns at Dacoopore. He was Commissioner of Arakan from 1876 to 1885, and Chief Civil and Political Officer of the Burma expeditionary force in 1886. The late Sir Edward was in receipt of a good service pension for distinguished and meritorious services, had the Indian Mutiny medal with clasp for Lucknow, and the Burma medal with clasp for Pegu. He was knighted in 1886.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL PATRICK THEODORE FRENCH, whose death was announced on Saturday, entered the service of the Honourable East India Company in 1821, and was posted in 1822 to the 23rd Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, of which he subsequently became adjutant. He left it for the command of the Ahmednugger police (a Bheel corps). In 1841-42 he served in Scinde as political agent at Sibi, in Upper Scinde, and in 1844 was acting political agent at Jodhpore, in Rajpootana. In 1845 he was transferred to a similar post in Nimar, vacated shortly before by Sir J. Outram. He left it in 1847 to join Sir G. Clerk, then Governor of Bombay, as private secretary, was subsequently town major at Bombay, and lastly, in 1851, officiating Resident at Barod. This concluded his thirty years' continuous service. On returning to England he set himself to work to found the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, and to his care as chairman for nearly thirty years its present flourishing condition is owing.

In next year's Budget it is probable that the requirements of the army in India as regards re-armaments—the artillery with breechloading guns, the British Infantry with magazine rifles, and the Native Infantry with Martinis—will receive special attention.

A Committee of medical and other officers, recently appointed by the British Resident to inquire into the sanitary condition of Bangalore, report very unfavourably and in strong terms on the municipal slaughter-houses, which are condemned as being in a scandalously and dangerously bad state. Veterinary Surgeon Durand considers that at least one-third of the animals he saw slaughtered were unfit for human food. He thinks the animals inferior in quality, and in one instance he saw a diseased liver presumably intended to be eaten. The Committee urge the appointment of a permanent veterinary officer to superintend the slaughter-houses and check the traffic of diseased meat. They also advise the removal of the shambles outside the station limits, and propose framing rules indicating the characteristics for distinguishing healthy animals.

INDIA IN 1889.

THE year which has just passed away has been one of peace, prosperity, and progress for India. There has been nothing of the sensational element for the historian to record. The evils which certain pessimists prophesied would follow upon the annexation of Upper Burma have not yet come to pass; but the grandson of the Queen-Empress of India has eaten his Christmas dinner at Mandalay amidst demonstrations of loyalty and goodwill towards British rule. The shadow of a Russian invasion of India may still disturb the dreams of Viceroys, but precautions have been taken, and are still going on, to lay that ghost if possible. Strategic railways and frontier defences have been costly "necessaries," and it may be an open question whether it was wise to let all India know that we stood in any fear of a rival Power contesting the supremacy of our rule over her; but the result has been so far satisfactory that India has unanimously declared in favour of British supremacy against all comers. All the Native chiefs and nobles have come forward, offering men or money to protect the British power against outside assault. Notwithstanding, however, all that has been said and written regarding Russia's designs upon India, we have taken the liberty of doubting for ourselves whether the danger was so very imminent as the Russophobists tried to make out. We have always held that if Russia really contemplates contesting the possession of India with England she has a great deal to do in the way of preliminary arrangements before she can make a step in advance towards the desired end. The battle for India, if it ever is fought, will be fought, we imagine, nearer London than Cabul. But is is excellent diplomatic policy on the part of Russia to keep that "raw" on England's side—that India is in imminent danger of attack. Englishmen seem to be strangely ignorant of Russia's real weakness. She never had such an opportunity of striking a blow against us as she had during the Mutiny time of 1859; yet she refrained, not from any moral compunctions, but simply because she had not the men or the means for the purpose. Although she has been pushing her way since then very rapidly towards the frontier of Afghanistan, we do not hold that we have any particular cause for alarm. It might, perhaps, have been better for India had some of the millions of rupees which have been expended to guard against this Russian scare been expended to develop the internal resources of India itself in a more peaceful and more commercially profitable direction. This, however, is a matter of opinion. The strong man armed keeps, we are told, his goods in peace; and certainly, so far as defence works can protect an Empire, we seem to be excessively fortunate on our North-West Frontier of India should the wave of Russian aggression ever break against the barriers we have put up there.

A DREADFUL accident occurred at Trichinopoly on Dec. 9 when some men were manufacturing fireworks for the Prince's tamasha on Wednesday. In one of the rooms of the old, Nawab's palace, now used for public offices, a lot of gunpowder lying about, ready to be converted into fireworks, an explosion took place, and one man was killed, and another seriously wounded. The disaster took place behind the rooms allotted to the Sub-Registrar's office. One of these was completely wrecked, the rest of the rooms were considerably damaged. Fortunately a majority of the workmen had left the room at the moment to witness the passing of the Rajah of Pudukotta, otherwise much more serious damage might have occurred.

THE INDIAN AYAH.

[A SKETCH FROM LIFE.]

"Oh, lub! of my heart! my oshweet! don't crei! don't crei!" are the shrieking words put into the mouth of the portly figure like that of a domestic duck in high condition, which "Eha," the author of the interesting sketches entitled "Behind the Bungalow," introduces to his readers as the Indian Ayah, and who he further on describes as engulfing in her voluminous embrace, with great bare pachydermatous arms loaded with silver and glass bangles, which jingle with a warlike sound, a little cherub with golden curls and blue, dewy eyes. "Eha" has, however, pictured only one phase of the Ayah's existence. It is the purport of this paper to picture the other. Of course the Ayah is generally noticed as saying she will never part from her charge, the "Missy baba" and "Sunny baba," until they grow up and become mem-sahab and dipty quat-master adjant lad saheb with plenty of pay, when they will pension her and take care of her in her old age. This is, of course, by way of saying, and maybe there is a touch of sincerity about it, especially if she happen to be an old servant of the household. But the main current which influences her whole existence runs in a different channel altogether, not perceptible to the ordinary eye, but which, if once detected, renders her further existence in the household an impossibility. She is waging perpetual warfare with the other domestics in the house, and her principal enemies are the "bootalair," "mussaul," and the head cook Domingo, regarding all of whom she carries all manner of tales to the Memsahab. Was the dinner cold last night when the dipty lad saheb came down to dine? The cook Domingo was drunk and incapable, and the work had to be done by a substitute. Were the furniture in the hall not well dusted and in disorder, the hamal had taken a little more toddy than was good for him, and which toddy he obtained by bartering some of Madam Sahib's supply of kerosene oil at a petty shop round the corner at the end of the street. Did the neighbouring shib logue come to know of the words that passed between Madam and Sahib last night; it was the mussual who communicated news to the dog-boys the following morning, and that was how the rumour got abroad. The consequence of these tale-bearings is that Madam Sahib is down upon all the servants for some days, and the result is soon felt. Domingo, the cook, receives a letter from Goa stating his mother is in a dying condition, and forthwith sails for his native country. Gopal, the mussual, is going to get married, and must go to his native country also, and so he, too, disappears. Canji, the hamal, has suddenly got racking pain all over his body, and asks for his ruzzah, which, whether given him or not, he also soon becomes non est. New hands are engaged to fill the places of the old ones, and so days pass on. By-and-by Domingo, the cook, is seen serving in a neighbouring household, so also the massaul, Gopal, and the hamal, Canji. Gradually Madam Sahib comes to learn with astonishment the rumour that has got abroad about herself that she is given to making kut kut and tukrar-tableau. Then follows explanations, and quick interchange of letters between the Sahib logue and the Madam Sahib logue of the different bungalows, animadverting more or less on the perversity of servants, and then Domingo, Gopal and Canji suddenly vanished together, and are heard of no more in the locality—the Ayah all the while watching with evident satisfaction the result of her masterly tactics, to which she gives expression by fondling with more than ordinary gusto the curly head of “Sunny baba,” who in her eyes now appears to be already the great dipty lad sahib. Cooks after cooks leave the service in quick succession. Pedro is succeeded by Jao, and Jao by Caitan, and so on, until Jacky makes his appearance on the scene, and then the changing of cooks ceases. Rumour vaguely has it that the last incumbent is a sort of fifth cousin to the Ayah’s brother’s brother-in-law, which seems to account for the cessation in the change of the persons which was proceeding with such rapidity of late in the post of head cook of the establishment. Similarly the hamals, the mussauls and even the dog-boys are observed to give place to newcomers at short intervals, until some are found sagacious enough to confirm their ways of thinking to that of the Ayah, when further change in the domestic servants finally ceases, and peace and harmony reign supreme in the household. Then days, months and years pass below the stairs merrily as a wedding bell. But hold, watch the Ayah if you can closely. Why does she go daily with stealthy steps by the back door, when her mistress is having her after-dinner nap, to a neighbouring chah—a low range of building where all sorts of non-descript people live? Why does she hesitate when any one approaches that low window in the cook-room looking out into a bye-lane in the locality? Dear readers, if you were to examine that window a little closely you will find all its bars are loose and removable at will. Those bars, instead of preventing as originally intended, offered an outlet to your monthly supply of rice, sugar, tea, coffee, ghee, and even your firewood, which you so often used to wonder were reported to you as being exhausted before the stipulated time, notwithstanding that you took good care to provide for a sufficient supply to cover the month and some odd days more. That window also offered exit on the nights of big khanas you gave on your birthday, or on receiving a promotion, which is very grateful in these days of the depreciated rupee, to half of your dishes of fowls and turkeys, of which not even a vista could you see the next morning. Now, let us transfer ourselves to that small room in the chah above referred to. There is an old hag, a countrywoman of the Ayah, who is the farmer’s niece, and another young girl who has come out to be married, and is at present engaged to a sixth cousin of hers, who is serving as a second-class steward on board H.M.’s Unconquerable in the Persian Gulf. There are jars in that room of different sizes and shape, and if you have any idea of cause and its effect and the continuity of motion you will find in those self-same jars your missing quantities of rice, sugar, ghee, &c., the loss of which you so bitterly deplored, but could not understand how. The long and short of the whole story is that your Ayah has been all the while maintaining her aunt, her niece, and securing for the latter a nice little dowry in the bargain, to be given on her marriage at your expense. “Eha,” as I have said, has not touched on this phase of the Ayah’s existence. Nevertheless, it is universally felt in almost every household where there is a large family, with a too trusting Madam Sahib, whose attention is otherwise engaged after the children, especially if any of them happened to be sick, and in attending to her duties as the mistress of the house, when her husband’s numerous acquaintances pay her domestic visits, which, unfortunately, are not few and far between as the proverbial one of the angels. The evils regarding the domestic servants are necessary evils, however, and all that can be done is only to minimise them as much as possible. Please to bear in mind every trade has its knacks, and the calling of the Ayah is no exception to the general rule.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show, likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.
You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, LONDON, S.E.

BROAD ARROW
AND
NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1838.
EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER—

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE.

In fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 13, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 27th Dec.; from Allahabad to the 25th Dec.; and from Madras and Calcutta to the 24th Dec.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Dec. 19th the only business was the introduction of a Bill amending Act XXV. of 1867, respecting the delivery of books to Government by printers.

THE Indian Railway Bill was to be taken up at the end of December, all information necessary for legislation having been now collected.

THE Leper Bill introduced this Session will deal only with vagrants and those willing to be treated in hospitals. A wider measure will probably be delayed until after the Royal Commission has reported on the subject.

THE MAHARAJA OF BENARES was formally installed on Dec. 21st by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces in the presence of a large gathering.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN'S expedition to Zhob and the Gomal Pass left Loralai on Dec. 19th for Mina Bazaar.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE means to take up at once the question of a possible reduction of the military police in Upper Burma. The numbers of the force are not likely, however, to be reduced largely, pending the consideration of the scheme for converting the police battalions into local regiments.

THE actual surplus which United Burma is expected to yield this year amounts to seventy lakhs.

THE telegraph line into the Chin country is making good progress. An office has been opened at Kan, and the wire is being laid onwards.

THE vacancy on the Legislative Council due to Sir Dinshaw Maneckji Petit's retirement at the end of the year will be filled from Bombay.

MR. A. P. MACDONNELL resumed charge of the Home Secretaryship on Dec. 21. He will take furlough for nine months or a year from the beginning of March. Mr. C. J. Lyall, who will again act for him, has been placed on special duty for the next two months, which relieves him of the necessity of returning to Assam.

COLONEL WALTER, the Governor-General's Agent in Rajputana, retires on March 20th. The nomination of his successor has not yet been made.

COLONELS THOMAS and Rowlandson have been confirmed as Controllers of Military Accounts.

COLONEL CONWAY-GORDON, Director-General of Railways, will shortly furnish a report regarding the alleged excessive tariff charges on frontier railways.

MR. J. L. O'CALLAGHAN, Consulting Engineer for Railways, proceeds to Burma in January to examine the Mu Valley Railway route.

A SURVEY party under Mr. Horace Bell is now engaged in examining the country about Midnapore, with a view to the possible building of a line direct from the Bengal-Napur Railway to Howrah.

MR. BUCKLEY, lately Under-Secretary in the Public Works Department, is posted to Arrah as Superintending Engineer.

ON the retirement of Colonel Mallock, Mr. Luke will again join the headquarters of the Telegraph Department in the grade of Directors.

MR. BROOKE was to take three months' leave to England early next month, Mr. Lane officiating as Deputy Director-General of the Telegraph Department.

MAJOR J. BROADBENT, R.E., Assistant Secretary in the Military Department, proceeds home on leave in the spring.

CAPTAIN M. J. MEADE, on return from furlough, assumes charge of the Political Agency of Bhopawar, Central India.

MR. HART, the Chinese representative, will probably visit Calcutta shortly in connection with the Sikkim-Tibet negotiations.

LIEUT. ROOKE, 6th Bengal Cavalry, who was shot at Chaman in the throat by the Pathan who killed Lieut. Harris, has almost completely recovered.

CHOLERA broke out among the road coolies on the line to Lungleh. There were thirty cases and fifteen deaths, and work on the tramway was suspended to isolate the parties among whom the disease appeared. Later accounts show that the steps taken resulted in the disappearance of the cholera.

THE Bengal Presidency Rifle Association Championship has been won this year by Private Flynn, Connaught Rangers, with 272 points out of a possible 315.

HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJA HOLKAR has sanctioned one lakh and a-quarter of rupees for the construction of bridges, dharamsalas, girls' schools and orphanage in his territory. In February next a Horse Show is to be held at the city of Indore, when prizes for the best country-bred will be awarded by the State. The Show is the first of its kind in Central India.

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT laid the foundation-stone of the Bholanath Literary Institute for Women at Ahmedabad on Dec. 20th.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY AND LADY REAY spent Christmas at Jeypore.

THE sentence of the court-martial who recently tried Captain Moberley, Adjutant of the Royal Artillery, Bombay District, on charges of embezzling public money, has been made public. The accused is dismissed from Her Majesty's service, and put under stoppages of pay until he shall have made good the sum of Rs. 7,123.

It is intended to place such guns as are now available in position along the Quetta line of defence, pending the receipt of heavy ordnance from England.

THE RAJAH OF KAPURTHALA has been suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY, Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, has accepted the post of Honorary Captain in the Calcutta Naval Volunteers.

A NEW PATENT BOTTLE STOPPER.—This interesting little invention, of which we had a private view at the offices of the company, 96, Queen-street, Cheapside, last week, bids fair to be a success. It is very simple, effective, and inexpensive. It is in the form of a seal, and is forced into a mortice-shaped groove in the neck of the bottle by means of a machine, which for soda or aerated water will fill the bottle and seal it in one operation. The seal, when in the bottle, assumes an internal arched shape, so that the pressure of the gas in the bottle cannot remove it, while on the other hand a child can remove it by means of any pointed instrument. It is also claimed to be not nearly so dangerous an operation as the present system of corking and wiring. We understand it is now being largely used in America.

NOTES.

As the Times correspondents are evidently of opinion that the news from India which is mostly desired by the people of England must be what concerns the tour and doings of Prince Albert Victor, all that the Indian papers to hand by the Overland Mails have to say in the matter—and they say a great deal—is anticipated by the weekly wire which on Sunday is at the disposal of the Times at Calcutta. It would be an insult to the intelligence of our readers to give them cuttings several weeks old, when the Times telegram which we reproduce gives the latest intelligence up to yesterday.

BUT there may be readers who, like ourselves, would like to have a little more solid "intelligence" from India than that which concerns the young Prince's "junkettings" and merry-makings. It is good to learn that his Royal Highness has been received all along the routes he has taken with demonstrations of loyalty and welcome; but surely it is cloying us with sweets to send by wire that the Prince was greatly gratified at the illumination of certain transparencies which, "being reflected in the water of a large tank in front, presented a striking and beautiful spectacle." And surely the British public could wait for the post instead of receiving by telegram the information that "a group of Hindoo temples at a little distance might have been interesting had they stood alone, but they suffered from the splendour of the Mahomedan palace"—viz., the transparency in question.

THE most important news is that telegraphed by the Times correspondent from Rangoon, telling of the terrible sickness which prevails amongst the troops of the Chin Field Force under Brigadier-General Symonds. Officers, men, and camp-followers seem to have suffered alike. Fever and pestilence are the real foes which we have always had to encounter in all our "little wars" in India, where troops have to march and encamp in pestilential swamps and fever-breathing jungles. This Expedition threatens to imitate in a smaller way that Walcheren one which still holds its melancholy place in the memory of the British army. The question may be asked, "Is the venture worth the loss?"

A HOME contemporary has taken alarm at a letter to an Indian contemporary as follows:—"Recruiting for the French colonial army has been introduced in French India. Every family residing in French territory, and enjoying the right of voting, will, on and from the 1st prox., be required to send a member for enlistment in the colonial army. Such recruits will be taken to some other colony, say Saigon, and be drilled there in the art of war. After three years' service they will be sent home and form the reserve, who will be called out in case of war. Thus, in the course of some years, Pondicherry will be the home of several thousand soldiers. The British Government cannot look at this movement with indifference. It is a real source of danger to the British Empire. Till now we had no cause to be afraid of our neighbours at Pondicherry. But the colonial army system will convert Pondicherry into a strong French military station. Though the colonial army does not contravene the letter, it affects the spirit of the treaty between England and France respecting India." Well, what of it, if all this be true, which we take the liberty to doubt? "We won't run Sir Lucius, will we?" Not, let us hope, so long as we can turn the French to-day out of all their possessions in British India with an army which need not greatly exceed that which General Bombastes commanded.

THE Government of India, says a Bombay paper, being beaten on its own ground in the matter of the Official Secrets Act, for "Official Secrets" have managed to ooze out in spite of the threats offered to the "thief" and "receiver" thereof, are now striking out a new path for themselves, but more in a conciliatory than hostile spirit. We learn that a circular letter has been issued by the Financial Department to all Secretariats, intimating that clerks and subordinates should, in the first instance, take the permission of the Chief Secretary, as well as of the head of the department to which they belong, before acting as correspondents of a newspaper. No provision, however, so far as we are aware, has been made in the case of the secretaries themselves who contribute to favoured journals on their own authority without leave or license from any one. The rule is too flimsy even for the intelligence of the average clerk to be taken in by it. The very fact of asking permission would mark him down as the "thief," and in cases where he has grievances against his official superiors to communicate to the Press to show his hand would be inconvenient.

MR. A. O. HUME's lamentation to the National Congress Agency in Craven-street concerning the want of pecuniary help rendered by the Congress members to push their own agitation is thus commented upon by the Pioneer, once Mr. Hume's "guide, philosopher, and friend":—

"Few people probably have realised hitherto how entirely Mr. Hume is the Congress. We knew that he directed, managed, organised, suggested; that he conducted its correspondence, framed its manifestoes, and wrote its pamphlets, even to the leaflet distributed to the Bengali villager; but we were not prepared for the extent to which he has had to find the concern in funds from his private pocket—that final proof of sincerity. The accounts, however, of the Craven-street Agency betray this very clearly. Mr. Hume, it is known, lays the greatest stress on this portion of the movement. He has repeatedly expressed himself as regarding the agitation in this country of subsidiary importance in the matter of practical results; and he has announced that he requires about £4,000 a year to carry on the Agency effectively. It appears that during the year 1888 £1,538 was actually collected in India, and of this Mr. Hume himself gave £644. The only other individual subscription separately entered is Mr. W. C. Bonnerji, £200. Apart from these two gentlemen, then, the collective Indian nation contributed just short of £700 toward its political emancipation. Some of the amounts are fairly ludicrous; the N.W.P. contributes all told £40—let us say one pound per million persons. Oudh gives the same amount, the Punjab has taxed itself to the extent of £30 and from the Central Provinces has been extorted a similar sum. Bombay—the rich, the open-handed—had promised £100, which it had not, up to the date of Mr. Hume's writing, paid. And, trivial as these amounts are, it appears that they were only raised at all by the most unwearied canvassing and importunity. No wonder that poor Mr. Hume should say that it were easier to get blood out of a stone."

Surely one so experienced in Native character as Mr. Hume should have known that Baboodom always measured sincerity by one test only—that of the rupee.

WE quote from the Civil and Military Gazette:—"So far as we can ascertain, there is no immediate likelihood of the British India Steam Navigation Company starting a weekly mail service between Kurrachee and Aden, as announced by a contemporary. Those who are most concerned in the matter know nothing about it; and for our part we doubt whether the British India have the necessary resources in the important matter of boats to undertake such a service all at once. An important boon, however, to the Punjab in the matter of through communication and through booking of goods via Kurrachee to Europe, which we have recommended, has become an accomplished fact. The Secretary of State has given a five years' contract to the Hall Line, but they are to run quick monthly steamers in connection with the North-Western Railway, so that passengers and goods may be booked through from any station on the North-Western Railway to England. The North-Western Railway undertake to take coal from the Hall Line at Kurrachee, thus enabling the Line to afford to bring their steamers to the port. The present contract with the Hall Line would have expired in April next. The new contract is for five years, from January, 1890."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 12.

During the past week Calcutta has been busily employed in welcoming Prince Albert Victor. All classes and races have vied with one another in testifying their loyalty to the throne by the heartiness of his reception. The festivities began on Monday with a ball given by the Lieutenant-Governor and Lady Bayley, at which the Prince, the Viceroy, and Lady Lansdowne were present, as well as the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, who arrived in Calcutta that morning. The principal feature of Tuesday's programme was an entertainment on the Maidan, or public park, by the reception committee. A large space had been enclosed, which was brilliantly illuminated, while the trees along the approaches were lighted with Chinese lanterns and festoons of coloured lamps. On the arrival of the Royal and Viceregal party they were conducted along a road lined with stalwart Punjabee Sepoys, bearing torches, to an enormous tent, where they sat for some time witnessing the performances of nautch girls and native jugglers. A move was next made to another tent fitted as a theatre, in which a company of native actors played scenes from the Sanscrit drama of Sakuntala, or the fatal ring. Close at hand, under a huge shamiana or canopy, a number of Thibetans, Bhootas, and Lepchas from the hills beyond Darjeeling, clad in gorgeous dresses, with their heads hidden by fantastic masks of all kinds, performed their national dances to the weird music of horn trumpets and clashing brass cymbals. But by general consent the most interesting feature of the evening's entertainment was the Kattaki sword-dance. A company of Sepoys belonging to the Kattaki tribe—a wild tribe on the Afghan border—arranged themselves in a circle round a blazing bonfire. They were dressed in long flowing white robes, and each man carried a naked sword. They began with a slow stately movement around the fire, keeping accurate time to music strangely like that of the Highland bagpipes. Gradually the music became faster, till at last the living ring whirled round the fire apparently in a state of mad excitement, waving their swords in dangerous proximity to one another's heads.

After seeing these performances the Royal party and the other spectators wandered about the enclosure, in various parts of which attempts had been made to illustrate features of Oriental architecture and life. The most successful of these undoubtedly was an imitation of the ancient palaces of the Nawabs of Bengal, at Moorshedabad, which was brilliantly illuminated, and was reflected in the water of a large tank in front. It presented a striking and beautiful spectacle. A group of Hindoo temples at a little distance might have been interesting had they stood alone, but they suffered from the splendour of the Mahomedan palace. On the whole, however, the fete must be pronounced highly successful and creditable to the committee who organised it. Prince Albert Victor repeatedly expressed his gratification, while of the crowd of spectators who attended few, if any, went away dissatisfied. Wednesday was a busy day. In the afternoon the Prince attended a garden party at the residence of the Lieutenant-Governor. In the evening he and the Duke of Connaught were entertained at dinner by the Bengal Club. Afterwards a State ball was held at Government House. This last was a brilliant scene, the only event which occurred to mar it being the absence of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, who were prevented attending by the receipt of a telegram announcing the death of the Empress Augusta. On Thursday the Royal party were present at an assault-at-arms given by the garrison and the Volunteers of Calcutta. Friday was a comparatively quiet day, the only incident being a drive through the Native quarter of Calcutta, including a visit to the burning ghaut and some public buildings. Yesterday was devoted to snipe shooting at Kancharapara. To-day is being spent quietly at the Viceroy's country residence at Barrackpore.

The programme of his Royal Highness's further movements is as follows:—He reaches Benares on Tuesday and remains there three days, two of which will be devoted to shooting with the Maharajah. He arrives at Lucknow on the 18th and at Cawnpore on the 20th. Then he goes to Bhurtpore for a day's black-buck shooting. He arrives at Agra late on the 21st and remains till the 24th, when he starts for the Punjab.

It is expected that the Calcutta reception committee will have a large surplus in hand after defraying all the expenses of last week's entertainments, and already there are signs of differences of opinion regarding its disposal. Some of the Native papers strongly urge that it should be devoted to the proposed leper hospital as a permanent memorial of the Prince's visit. The European Press, on the other hand, suggest handing it to Lady Dufferin's fund. Other claims are likely to arise, and probably there will be a sharp struggle for the money. An article in the Bangabasi, a Calcutta vernacular journal having a large circulation among the orthodox Hindoo party, affords a remarkable proof of how little the recent Native Congress was justified in arrogating to itself the title of national. It unhesitatingly condemns almost every item of the Congress programme, and is especially severe upon the suggested introduction of elective institutions. The writer says:—

"The introduction of the elective system into the Legislative Council will make that council more dangerous than it now is. Any one who can canvass more than his fellows will be elected. He who can flatter and walk abroad and spend money profusely will be elected. The introduction of the English system of election in India will do great harm. The sample of election as seen in municipalities is not very hopeful. Under this system in some places butchers, in others coolies, bearers, and milkmen have been elected; only the sweepers and undertakers have not as yet been elected. A competent man will never condescend to beg from door to door for votes."

The article ends with these words:—

"We beg to tell you (the Congress) we will hear everything you say or do, but we cannot listen to what you say as being said in the name of the Hindoo race and of the whole of India with a view to realise your own ends. If you have not done anything in the Congress in the name of the whole Hindoo race, well and good; if you have, then we beseech you not to do such act any more."

The Financial Department has issued a proposal to increase the reserve held against the note circulation, and has invited an expression of opinion from the Chambers of Commerce of the three Presidency towns. The proposal is marked by great caution. Since 1870, when it was last fixed, the maximum limit of the reserve has stood at 6 crores of rupees invested in Government securities, but since that year the note circulation has increased from 8½ crores to nearly 16 crores of rupees, and there is no reason to anticipate any great decrease. It is therefore suggested that the Government should take power from the Legislature to increase the invested reserve to the maximum limit of 8 crores, but it is not intended for the present to increase it by more than 1 crore.

The Mahomedan Educational Congress, a non-political movement started by the leaders of that community in Upper India, has lately held its fourth meeting at Aligarh under the presidency of Sirdar Mahomed Hyat Khan. A large number of the most influential men of the Punjab and the North-West Provinces attended, and the meeting passed off most successfully. Sir Syed Ahmed Khan, the venerated leader of the Mahomedans in Upper India, delivered a long address, in the course of which he said his first lesson in national sympathy was learnt after their first meeting. He then came to the conclusion that the two main causes of the want of national sympathy in India were the want of sound education among the Mahomedans, and the fact that there was no social intercourse or friendship between them and the English, whom God had sent to govern them. He set himself to remove these causes by making every effort to cultivate friendship between the two races, and by founding an institution which has now attained prosperity under the name of the Mahomedan College of Aligarh. The address was warmly received. A number of questions of educational and social interest were discussed, and resolutions in favour of promoting education were passed. The speeches were marked by a tone of loyalty and by a keen perception of the necessity of raising the standard of culture among the Mahomedans to enable them to hold their own with the Hindoos.

The Bombay Government has resolved to limit the tenure of office of its secretaries and under-secretaries to a period of five years. Hitherto it has been too much the custom for all the Presidencies to select under-secretaries from the most promising young civilians of two or three years' service, and to keep them in the secretariat for perhaps nearly the whole of their Indian career, thus depriving them of all opportunity of acquiring familiarity with the people and the details of the district work. The Punjab Government was the first to recognise the evil, and instituted this useful reform three or four years ago. It is to be hoped that all the other local administrations will now adopt it. The Bombay Government has also ordered the Divisional Commissioners to reside in future within their respective divisions, instead of spending a great portion of the year at Poonah as heretofore.

The Calcutta Turf Club, a body occupying in India a position analogous to the Jockey Club of England, has given its decision in a case which has excited much interest in general as well as racing circles, and which is known as the Presto case. The question was whether in the race for the Walter Locke Cup at Lucknow a horse named Presto was or was not deliberately pulled by the jockey in order to lose the race. The stewards unanimously found that the horse was not pulled, but that the jockey ceased to persevere far too early in the race. They severely censured the jockey, but entirely exonerated Lord William Beresford from any imputation under which he might be supposed to rest in connection with the running of Presto, of which horse he had the management.

Colonel Durand, the British Agent at Gilgit, has held a durbār, at which the Governor and all the chiefs attended. The festivities extended over a week, and the chiefs are said to have returned to their homes much pleased with their visit, and impressed with the importance of keeping on friendly terms with the British Government. Sir Robert Sandeman's Zhob expedition has so far had peaceful progress through the country, and is doing good work in introducing order.

THE CHIN FIELD FORCE.

RANGOON, JAN. 11.

The health of the Chin Field Force under Brigadier-General Symons continues very bad. Fever is extremely prevalent amongst the troops. The King's Own Scottish Borderers, the Goorkhas, the Sappers, the 2nd Madras Infantry, the Departmental Corps, and the followers have all suffered severely. Captain Gramshaw, 5th Battalion Royal Fusiliers, is dead. According to the official returns the following officers have been invalided and sent back:—Colonel Carleton and Lieutenants Hope and Marshall, K.O.S. Borderers; Captain Oldfield and Lieutenant Hallen, R.E.; Captain Carnegie and Lieutenant Hamilton, 4th Goorkhas; Lieutenant Morris, 2nd M.I.; and sixty-two privates of the K.O.S. Borderers. Seven privates of the K.O.S. Borderers are dead. The detail of the deaths and the invalids in the other regiments is wanting. It is also officially announced that Colonel King Harman, Lieutenant Malcolm, and Dr. Reid, of the 4th Goorkhas; Captain Swayne, R.E., and Captain Barton, D.S.O., have been disabled by sickness. The Rangoon Gazette announces that Major Edge, of the Cheshire Regiment, and Major Hingston, of the 10th Bengal N.I., have been invalided. The Rangoon Times states that all the officers of the 4th Goorkhas being disabled the regiment is in charge of Lieutenant Stewart, orderly officer to Brigadier-General Symons. The same journal states that out of 400 K.O.S. Borderers at Kan, barely 200 are fit for duty.

General Gordon is taking vigorous steps to restore the efficiency of the column. Reinforcements have been despatched to replace the casualties, and India has been requisitioned to make good the losses where the local resources are unequal to the strain.

Brigadier-General Symons is starting with a small force to occupy Kawon, about thirty-five miles from Kan. The resistance of the Chins so far has been feeble. The Bounghse tribe have made overtures of submission.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 12.

The news from the Chir Lushai force is chiefly confined to accounts of the unhealthiness of the country and the great sickness amongst the troops. The active opposition is slight, indeed almost contemptible.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 12.

The Chinese Amban was expected to reach Darjeeling last week to meet Mr. Hart. This event may be considered to mark the practical settlement of the Sikkim difficulty. The terms of agreement between England and China only remain to be formulated.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 12.

Aziz Ahmad Khan, grandson of the late General Ameer Ahmed, who is carrying on the duty of the Ameer's agent with the Indian Government till the successor to the late General is appointed, arrived here on Monday. It is believed that the Ameer proposed to send Abdulla Jan Tokhi, late Governor of Badakshan, as permanent envoy to India.

Rumours from Native sources have reached the Punjab that the Ameer is busy preparing to attack Kafiristan in the spring.

SIAM.

RANGOON, JAN. 11.

The Siam Frontier Commission have arrived at Sawlon, and have been well received by Sawlawi, who has cleared the roads and provided supplies.

SIR R. SANDEMAN'S MISSION. (FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY NIGHT.

News from the Zhob Expedition, dated Dec. 31, states that the leading men of the Haripal and Kapeep tribes and the Sheranis have come in, and that the political negotiations with them had proceeded smoothly.

Steady progress is being made with the road from Apazai to the Gomal Pass.

In connection with Sir Robert Sandeman's visit to the Zhob country, it has been thought advisable to revive the old plan of opening the Gomal Pass and pacifying it by negotiations with the tribes from the mouth of the Zhob Valley to where it debouches into the Dera Ismail Khan District. Mr. Bruce, Deputy Commissioner of that district, has been allowed to join Sir Robert Sandeman's party for the purpose of conducting these negotiations, and the young Nawab Tonk and a few other Native gentlemen of the district have been permitted to accompany him.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

ADMINISTRATION IN KASHMIR.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The State Council of Kashmir has published its quarterly report with exemplary promptitude. The report covers almost the entire area of administration during the months of August, September, and October; and within a month from the close of the quarter the Council has been able to issue a most complete and interesting record of its proceedings during that period. Promptitude like this is a good sign, but better still is the spirit which breathes through the report, telling, as it does, of hard and multifarious work done, of old grievances redressed, of the material interests of the country being consulted, and of measures set on foot to securely establish the different branches of the Government. Numerous facts detailed in the report show that the Council has had no easy task. The mismanagement of several lakhs of rupees by the Military Member, Raja Ram Sing (whom his colleagues very frankly reprimand); the story of the pashmina contractor, Sardar Lalman, who received pashmina cloth worth six lakhs for deposit in the Government warehouses, and allowed bags of pashmina rags to be substituted for them while the genuine cloth was disposed of elsewhere, and the discovery that under the existing Stamp law an unfortunate pauper in an appeal regarding property worth Rs. 20 had to pay a duty of Rs. 5, which for the solvent appellant was under Rs. 2—these things, and others like them spoken of in the report, only slightly indicate the sort of conduct that was making Kashmir a by-word for maladministration. Besides isolated evils of the kind we quote, there were others of greater importance to the people. The judicial Member complains of the dilatoriness of tahsildars in disposing of judicial work, the delay being caused by these officers deputing their functions to irresponsible clerks, they themselves being illiterate or otherwise disqualified. Petty jagirdars are mentioned as unlawfully claiming the privilege of trying civil and criminal cases, and as utterly setting at defiance the State police; while the Military Member reports the existence of an army of half-starved sepoy employed in the collection of State dues and on a miscellaneous assortment of civil duties, who were recompensed, not by payment of salaries when due, but by grants of land assigned to still their clamour.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

(Pioneer.)

We lately commented on the hardships inflicted on the senior executive officers of the Indian Medical Service in civil employ in being compelled to accept promotion to the rank of Deputy Surgeon-General against their will, and often to their great pecuniary injury. Since then we have been favoured with a printed statement, from which it would appear that quite as much discontent exists in the military branch of the Department, especially among the Deputy Surgeons-General, who complain that their services are entirely overlooked, and that in fact once they accept promotion in the military line all further advancement is debarred them. The proportion of administrative medical officers for the three Presidencies, by which it appears that for Bengal one Surgeon-General and nine Deputy Surgeons-General are allowed, five of these latter being in military, and four in civil employ. No notice, however, is taken of the other civil administrative appointments, such as Sanitary Commissionerships, Inspectors-General of Jails, Examiners of Medical Accounts, Medical Storekeepers, and the like, which add largely to this administrative list, and for which appointments there are no parallels in the British

Medical Service. As the case lies, therefore, both branches of the service labour under a sense of grievance. The senior civil executive officers complain that they are promoted against their inclination, and often to their serious pecuniary loss; while on the other hand the military senior executive officers grumble because men who have passed a quarter of a century in civil employ, sometimes in one station and with large capabilities of amassing a competency, are promoted back into military employment, and take the bread out of their mouths in the shape of the Military Deputy Surgeon-Generalships which they (the military branch) consider should be their reward for long military service. It certainly appears an anomaly that officers of one class should be forced to accept promotion into a line for which they are evidently unsuited, while the officers of the other class—military men who have passed many years in the performance of military work—are injured by the promotion of the other class against their will. A system of selection is a good system if fairly carried out; but when officers have worked their way to the top of their grade with satisfaction to the State and honour to themselves, it seems worse than hard to supersede them in a wholesale manner, as has been done in the present case. One cannot, therefore, help sympathising with the superseded officers in question, notwithstanding the fact that we know the selection for the vacancy to be an excellent one. It would appear that the only fair way to adjust this question of promotion in the Indian Medical Service will be to entirely separate the civil and military branches on the lines we indicated in a former article. A discontented service can never be an efficient one, and there is plenty of evidence of deep discontent in ranks of the Indian Medical Department.

THE STATUTORY CIVIL SERVICE.

(Madras Mail.)

Lord Cross's recent dispatch certainly showed that he shares the Government of India's objections to the continuance of the Statutory Civil Service; yet the Gazette contained a notification stating that the Madras Government has been requested by the Government of India to submit the names of three qualified candidates for appointment to the Statutory Civil Service in this Presidency, one of whom will be selected by the Governor-General in Council. The Madras Government has resolved to base its recommendations on the results of a competitive examination. The examination will be restricted to twenty-five selected candidates, each of whom must be under twenty-five years of age on the 1st of April next, and must have graduated in Arts in the Madras University in either the first or the second class, under the old system, prior to 1886-87, or have taken a first class in either the Language or Optional Branch at examinations since held under present rules, or have proceeded to the M.A. Degree. Candidates who fulfil these conditions are to send in their names, with evidence of age and qualifications and information as to their place of birth, caste, and family and means, to the Chief Secretary to Government not later than the 15th proximo. Candidates must present themselves for examination by a Medical Board, which will reject all candidates not possessed of an exceptionally good physical organisation, and not especially fitted for the active duties of a Revenue Officer. The twenty-five candidates who will be invited to compete will then be selected from those who have passed the medical examination, subject to the production of satisfactory certificates of character and conduct, and they will be duly informed of the nature and date of the examination. The names of the three who obtain the highest number of marks at the examination will be submitted to the Governor-General in Council in order of merit.

JUDGES AND CRITICISM.

(Times of India.)

It is absurd to suppose that because a man attends a public dinner he endorses all the opinions of the chief speakers. The Judges attend the dinner given to the Ministry by the Lord Mayor, but all men know that a Judge lives in an atmosphere too pure and serene for politics to enter. A Judge is the grace and ornament of social life. The only opinions he holds and delivers are those which come from the Bench. The high officials who attended the dinner came as guests of men with whom they are on terms of personal friendship. There are barristers and merchants who consider all pensions are wrung from a strictly economic point of view. But this did not prevent them from attending the dinner as guests of a body of men who wanted to repay in some small measure a debt of gratitude which they undoubtedly owe to a Member of Parliament for advocating their cause in the House of Commons. It is absurd to suppose that every guest who attended the dinner meant by his presence to testify that he entirely agreed with every claim put forward by the Uncovenanted Service. There is, however, no doubt that there are many men in the Covenanted Service who, like Mr.

Proper, the father of the Bombay Civil Service, feel that the Uncovenanted Service are suffering from certain real grievances, which ought to be remedied. To testify to this feeling does not imply disloyalty to Government. But sensible men have come to the conclusion that the sooner the matter is settled by some compromise the better it will be for the State, for nothing is more expensive to a Government than a body of discontented public servants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES IN INDIA.

(Englishman.)

It is difficult to realise that little more than seventy years ago the Honourable East India Company was so averse to the entrance of missionaries into the country that the authorities actually went the length of deporting them back to England on their landing. When Carey arrived, in 1793, he promptly established himself at Serampur in order to be beyond the reach of the Company, and it was owing to this fact that Serampur became so celebrated as a missionary centre. But since 1812, when the opposition of the Company was removed by charter, Indian Missions have witnessed many turns of fortune, and perhaps nowadays the Americans are the most vigorous and prosperous workers in the Indian field. The new College at Lahore which the Viceroy opened recently is only one of many recent signs of the successful enterprise of the American Presbyterians. In the Punjab alone, it seems, the Missions has seven thousand pupils, while in different parts of the world it employs sixteen hundred missionaries. The Americans have favourably distinguished themselves in India by scholarly works in translating and publishing the Scriptures, and by their zeal in the cause of education. Lord Lansdowne touched very happily upon the bond of race that links America and England together. "Although those who were carrying on this work were not subjects of the Queen-Empress, yet they belonged to the same brilliant race of which we were all proud to be members, and this was a further illustration of the good which always resulted from the co-operation of the members of that race, in whatever part of the world." His Excellency did not omit to add that he had been a near neighbour of America for five years, and could speak to the goodwill that prevails on both banks of the St. Lawrence.

THE COLONISATION OF BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

The people whom it is now proposed to assist in acquiring comparative ease and affluence in Burma have all their lives been accustomed to nothing but chronic want. To keep body and soul together is all they have ever been able to attain to; and for generations they have scarcely aspired to anything beyond bare existence. They cannot come to Burma themselves, yet their coming would be a blessing to themselves and to this province, so they must be helped. But every effort should be made to make them clearly understand from the very first that, although Government will pay their passages, and will help them to live until they can reap their first harvest, after that they must sink or swim by their own unaided exertions. Moreover, care should be taken to keep them, during their first few months in Burma, in no better position than they were at home. They being supported by the Sircar should not be associated in their minds with the idea of riotous living; and as they have probably never known at home what it was to have enough to eat, there will be considerable difficulty in keeping the subsistence allowance down to a point which does not more or less suggest to them the idea of riotous living. The dread of starvation and unsatisfied hunger, which have been their constant associates at home, must not be lost sight of immediately on their arrival at Burma. They must be left to emancipate themselves from these stern taskmasters by dint of their own labour, which in such a country as this they should very soon do. Their settlement, then, would be a boon to themselves and to this country, and a few prosperous settlers would prove a powerful magnet to draw others. If, on the other hand, they are pauperised by too much, or injudicious help, then their coming will be a curse to themselves and to Burma, and will make any colonisation scheme all the more difficult to work in the future.

HARVEST AND PEACE IN BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

There is every prospect of a good harvest; from all parts of the country the reports are favourable. There has been scarcely any damage anywhere, and bumper crops are expected in several districts, while in the rest a full 16-anna crop is looked for, except in Prome, where a 15-anna crop only is counted on. The nett result, according to the present calculations of the Director of Land Records and Agriculture, will be 1,145,000 tons of cargo rice available for export in 1890. There is every reason to hope that the coming year may be one of very considerable prosperity to the people of Burma. Roughly speaking, a ton of cargo rice is worth above five pounds sterling in Rangoon, so that if the above estimate proves correct there must be £5,725,000 coming into the country in payment of rice alone, besides which, of course, there will be the income from timber, cutch and other exports. The five and three-quarter millions sterling from rice alone, however, is a very considerable amount of money, and though it does not all reach the cultivators, a great deal of it does, and with this money in their hands the people of Lower Burma should find themselves in a state of comparative ease and comfort during the coming year. As to the mercantile community, a year of bumper crops is not necessarily a year of prosperity to the rice merchants, but it does mean that the import merchants should do well. The money which passes into the hands of the Burmese is very quickly spent, and a considerable portion of it goes in buying imported goods; so when there is a bumper crop of rice, importing merchants can look forward with confidence to an active market and large sales. If they have over-imported there may not be much profit on their large sales; but when there is a brisk demand and goods are moving freely, importers are in a far better position than when the demand is slack, and their godowns become filled to overflowing with goods which they cannot induce any one to take off their hands. Another thing to be considered is that prosperity among the peasantry is the best antidote to discontent, and the best check to the machinations of those who are always endeavouring to stir up lawlessness and strife.

"NATIVE DANCERS" AT KANDY.

(Ceylon Observer.)

At this time, a brief description of some of the "Native dancers" in Kandy will, we are sure, not prove uninteresting to your readers who never saw them before, and are anxious to know something of those who amused the English cricketers at the club on a recent occasion. The men are most of them professional dancers, and some are of the ugliest one has seen. They are plentifully ornamented with strings of pearls and bangles; on their ankles, wrists, and necks are little cymbals, which make a rattling clinking sound. They dance in a peculiar fashion, and jumping would be a better description of their exercises. First, they spring forward, and then they fly back, then swirl round on their heels, shake their cymbals, strike the little tom-toms which they carry under their arms, and utter a yell. As a savage performance it, no doubt, has its merits.

The tom-tom beaters are themselves not dancers, but they supply the music on occasions. It is difficult to convey the sensation, which those who are not used to such a noise experience. Some dozen very large tom-toms, beaten with large sticks, make the attack. In advancing upon you the players have considerable advantage. They are celebrated for the clatter they make, and are incited to excel themselves on special occasions. Then they have in Kandy to aid them a beautiful echo from the surrounding hills, which greatly increase the din, and lastly they venture to come as closely as possible to you. One does not complain that his ear drums tingle—one does not think anybody dreams of mentioning the ear in connection with the terrible noise. Long before the tom-toms and their beaters have taken up a good position the sound has penetrated far beyond the ear, and is preying upon the vitals of the half-stunned listener; it strikes upon the cavity of the chest, it descends to the pit of the stomach, the ear gives up resistance as useless, and lets the sounds fly all over the body till the listener absolutely groans!

There was comparatively a small number of "devil dancers" and drummers engaged on this occasion, but it was exceedingly grotesque, novel and interesting to the newcomers no doubt. It would tax the best pen and pencil to give an adequate idea of all the others whom we have come across in our long sojourn in the Central Province—such combinations of forms, sounds, and figures, men in masks and painted faces, sufficiently hideous to give a timid person bad dreams for years to come! their contortions, performed to the tune of clanging brass, cymbals, and loud horns, presenting no feature of agility or grace which might not be easily rivalled by many a dancer elsewhere. But the recent performance quite served the purpose intended of giving our visitors an idea of what "Kandyan native dancers" are like and what they can do; and this purpose served—we are contented, if the newcomers spent a pleasant evening, and if they leave Kandy with the impression that their friends have done their little best to give them a night's entertainment.

PRIZES IN THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

(Englishman.)

The real prizes of the Indian Medical Service are undoubtedly those professional appointments at the different Presidency towns which carry with them the right of undertaking private practice. An officer who has been fortunate enough to secure one of these, and has succeeded in turning his many opportunities to good account, seldom, if ever, looks for anything more during his residence in India, or covets further official advancement. On the contrary, to promote him to the rank of a deputy surgeon-general would be tantamount to reducing suddenly and very seriously his actual emoluments, while the entire change in the duties forced upon him would, in most cases, be thoroughly distasteful. It obviously must take years of incessant industry and unflagging zeal to establish such an extensive and lucrative practice as is enjoyed by, for example, several of our service physicians in Calcutta; and the summary removal of one of them to an administrative post would be a loss to the community as well as to himself. Nor would such a transfer, we think, be really an advantage to the department, since it would require a man who has devoted himself amid exceptionally favourable circumstances and surroundings to the profession of medicine, pure and simple, and has probably become engrossed in and proud of it, to turn over a new leaf and busy himself with reports and red tape. The more unwilling such a man to accept the promotion the more probable his enthusiasm for his noble profession, the more certain his appreciation by the public, and the greater the public loss. At the same time we know that departmental requirements and administrative convenience cannot possibly be overlooked, and we should be the last to take exception to the orders referred to were their expediency clear and their raison d'être sufficient. But the circumstances point in an altogether different direction. The old arrangement has not hitherto, as far as our knowledge goes, resulted, unless it be in very exceptional instances, either in serious inconvenience to Government or in startling anomalies involved in a reversal of the natural and relative positions of members of the Indian Medical Service; and it is, therefore, difficult to conceive why the occurrence of such complications in the future should be anticipated. The prize appointments, at which the orders seem to be levelled, are but few, and if the few incumbents who consent to receive orders from their juniors, and to follow, instead of preceding them into dinner, are content to do so, we should be glad to learn how the department, or any one, or anything else, is likely to be really injured thereby. The loss to the large European population of the Presidency towns consequent upon the withdrawal of their best physicians is an aspect of the question to which Government can hardly have given due attention.

BENGAL.

LORD RADSTOCK and Canon Wilberforce are in Calcutta. The latter is very much of an invalid. Lord Radstock attended two meetings and addressed the audience.

THE Bishop of Mylapore, attended by his secretary, chaplain, and scholastic, has also arrived. His Lordship intends establishing an orphanage for girls at Bandel, near Hooghly, one of the oldest Catholic establishments in India, dating centuries back.

ON Friday the Calcutta Naval Volunteers had a capital field-day. A detachment of the Calcutta Light Horse, under the command of Sir Alex. Wilson, charged down upon the guns with a view of capturing them. The Naval Volunteers manœuvred admirably, and the General commanding the Presidency complimented the battery on their success.

SEWBURRUCK NAPIER, who was convicted of murder at the last Criminal Sessions, has been executed. He was very penitent, and acknowledged the justice of the sentence, and did not show the least sign of emotion.

YESTERDAY the Chief Presidency Magistrate granted a summons against a nawab at Moradabad, for criminally enticing the wife of a respectable Mahomedan merchant in Calcutta, and with the theft of a landau and three horses. It is a highly sensational case.

THE Darjiling planters have at last made a move in the right direction. They are about to establish an association, thanks mainly to the efforts of Mr. Johnston, of Morndokotee, with the cordial support of all the leading men. The first meeting has been called for the 28th inst. at the Darjiling Club, when a Secretary and a working Committee will be appointed.

THE Calcutta Trades Association have addressed a letter to the Government of India on the subject of the despatch from the Secretary of State, with reference to English silver-plate duties. While thanking Government for their past support, they solicit that the subject may once more be brought prominently to the notice of the Secretary of State, with a view to their repealing the impost and abolishing the obnoxious system of compulsory Hall-marking. The Association, in alluding to the statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that payment of drawbacks on the post cost the country a very considerable sum, quotes from Lord Northbrook's speech in the House of Lords July last, in which his Lordship says he could not for a moment believe that this question of drawbacks could interfere much with the revenue for the three years, which would only amount to £180,000, and in all probability the total sacrifice to the British taxpayers would not exceed one year's revenue, £60,000.

MADRAS.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR has left Madras on tour, accompanied by Mr. Rees and Lord Masham. His Excellency, replying to a municipal address at Coconada, said that he had often impressed on the Government of India that great injustice was done to the Northern Circars by delaying the East Coast Railway. He was glad that the survey of it was already in progress. He hoped it would be accomplished, in fact, in a few years, though it might not be within the remainder of his term of office. He referred to the recent grain riots at Tanjore, and assured his hearers that Government would take severe measures in putting down the disturbances which were due to the panic created by evil-minded persons. However, rain had fallen, and he had no doubt that affairs would improve in the south.

VISCOUNT MARSHAM, A.D.C. to Lord Connemara, will resign his appointment at the end of next month, and leave Bombay for Brindisi in the mail steamer of Feb. 7th.

MR. JUSTICE WILKINSON, of the High Court of Madras, will leave Madras in the Reva early next month for a year's furlough. Mr. Justice Parker will take eight months' furlough in March, and will then, according to his present intention, return to duty. Mr. J. W. Bost, District Judge of South Canara, will, as we have already intimated, act for the former; and Mr. T. Weir, District Judge of Salem, will, in all probability, be appointed to act for the latter.

At the annual meeting of the Madras Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday afternoon, the Hon. Mr. J. A. Boyson was re-elected Chairman; Mr. S. R. Turnbull was re-elected Vice-Chairman; Mr. W. S. Shaw, Mr. R. J. H. Arbuthnot, Mr. W. Gordon, and Mr. H. Scott were re-elected as Members of the Committee, and Mr. C. Slater was also elected to the Committee.

THE control of the South Andaman Volunteer Rifle Corps has been transferred to the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army.

THE coffee planters of Coorg are in a dilemma as to labour for their plantations. Mysore coolies can no longer be procured in sufficient numbers, so the Planters' Association has asked has asked the Revenue authorities for assistance in recruiting coolies in Ganjam and other districts.

THE authority given by the Madras Government to recruit for coolies in Ganjam and Vizagapatam for the Assam tea gardens is about to be taken advantage of in more than one direction by planters and their agents.

THE C. M. S. Native Church in Tinnevely has suffered a severe loss in the death, at the age of eighty, of the Rev. Jesudasan John, a clergyman of unimpeachable character and highly esteemed by the late Bishop Sargent, who died at his residence at Palamcottah on Saturday, the 14th inst.

STADDELMANN, who shot Mr. Klein, of Volkart Brothers, accidentally, having pleaded guilty, has been sentenced, under Section 304 of the Indian Penal Code, to three months' simple imprisonment.

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 27.)

MR. JOHN MARSHALL, the newly-appointed Sheriff of Bombay, has assumed charge of the office from Mr. Javerilal Umiashunker Yajnik.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE CANDY has left for Pajkote, and the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Scott for Nasick, to pass the Christmas vacation.

THE dates for Lady Reay's Fancy Fair in aid of the Dufferin Fund have been fixed for the 26th, 27th, and 28th February, and the 1st March.

THE foundation-stone of the Bholanath Institute for Women was laid by the Duchess of Connaught Dec. 20. Mr. Aston having explained the objects of the institute, the ceremony was performed by her Royal Highness. The Duke then addressed the assembly on her behalf. Lord Reay thanked the Duchess for presiding at the ceremony. Mr. Ranchorelal Chotalal thanked their Royal Highnesses and their Excellencies.

IN the evening the Duke and the Governor invested the Raja of Lunawada with the Order of the Star of the Indian Empire. Several other Chiefs were present, who presented nuzzars to the Duke and the Governor. The ceremony was performed in Hathasing's Wada, and was of a very imposing character.

THE Times of India regrets to announce the sudden death, on Dec. 19th, of Mr. C. Brereton, C.E., Executive Engineer, Dharwar, by the accidental explosion of his rifle. Mr. Brereton was on tour, and was stopping in a rest house at Yalvege, about forty miles from Dharwar. On the morning of the 19th, after doing his usual office work with his subordinates, he had breakfast about 11 o'clock. Soon after his servant, who was in the verandah, and had just left his master reading a newspaper, was alarmed by hearing the report of a gun inside the room. He entered in and found Mr. Brereton lying quite dead in the corner of the room with the roof of his skull blown off. His right hand was holding his single-barrelled express rifle about the middle, and in his left hand was the small cloth cap which was used to cover the muzzle to keep out the damp. He had, it seems, intended going out black-buck shooting, and had taken up the rifle probably to examine it. Either he did not know, or had forgotten, that it was loaded, and as he took off the cloth cap with his left hand the hammer must have come in contact with the edge of the door or with some part of his clothes, which caused the rifle to explode. It was loaded with a shell, which struck him somewhere in the forehead and caused instant death. Mr. Brereton was very much liked and respected, and his untimely death has cast a gloom over the whole station. His body was brought into Dharwar on the 20th, and was buried in the cemetery in the evening. The funeral was attended by all the European residents.

THE Bombay papers announce the death of Mr. Becherdas Ambaidas, C.S.I., which took place at Ahmedabad on Dec. 20. Deceased was a wealthy banker and merchant of that city, and was seventy-five years of age. It is said that the firm to which he belonged has been in existence for the last 120 years. Independently of his own firm, the deceased several years ago was a money broker to some of the English firms in Bombay, notably Messrs. Lawrence and Co. Mr. Becherdas has given large sums of money for charitable purposes. He gave in 1886 Rs.15,000 for a medical dispensary at Ahmedabad, Rs.5,000 for a Sanskrit schoolhouse, and Rs.6,000 as an endowment for the same. He set apart in the same year Rs.50,000, out of the proceeds of which 70 to 80 poor and destitute are daily fed, and gave Rs.10,000 in 1873 to establish a Female Training School in the name of his daughter Mahaluxmee, subscribing Rs.10,000 about the same time towards the funds of the Gujarat Provincial College. He also spent Rs.20,000 in constructing forty-two houses which are let at nominal charges to the poor, thus bringing the total amount of his charities to close upon Rs.1,52,000. The deceased took great pains and spent a large sum of money in suppressing female infanticide among the Kunbee caste. He had been for many years the chairman of the managing committee of the local Municipality, and as a first class sub-magistrate had rendered good services. The inhabitants of Ahmedabad have frequently suffered from the effects of flood and famine, and every time the city had been afflicted with one or other of the evils, Mr. Becherdas extended a helping hand to his fellow-citizens. He was appointed by the Government of Sir Philip Wodehouse a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay. He was also appointed a member of the Bombay Port Trust, and served as such for about two years. His death has caused great grief among his co-religionists in Bombay.

MR. SPENCER, of the Foreign Office, has been deputed to Assam to reorganise the Secretariat of the province, and has left for Shillong.

THE Coorg forests will be inspected by the Inspector-General of Forests while on tour. He will be away from headquarters for over a month.

THE Darjeeling planters are about to establish an association.

MR. HART, the Chinese representative, will probably visit Calcutta shortly in connection with the Sikkim-Tibet negotiations.

OUR EXPORT TAX ON ALL BURMESE RICE.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—In December, 1877, ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL repeatedly exposed the blindness of the Indian Government in realising export duties on rice, shellac, indigo, wheat, and oilseeds. All of these improper taxes have been now abolished, with the exception of the tax on rice.

It is easy to prove that export duties are foolish; they are taxes on the industry of a nation. They are especially foolish in India, because, as Mr. Bagehot formerly instructed us, the best way of raising the value of the rupee in exchange is by encouraging the export trade from India. How could European officers have supported and educated their families in England unless the abolition of the export tax on wheat had enabled them to send their savings thither?

The India Office is constantly pleading that it cannot afford to remit so profitable a source of revenue, and this is the excuse always made for bad taxes.

In to-day's Times, page 8, there is an instructive account of the finances of Burma. It already boasts of a large surplus revenue; but we are grasping with too great avidity. Let us encourage industry among our subjects, and the financial position will immediately brighten. Nine-tenths of the fertile soil are still left waste. Let us imitate Sir Robert Peel's measures in 1842; give permission to our Burmese subjects to sell rice to all countries suffering from scarcity of food, and immense tracts of waste land will be quickly brought under the plough. Let not the French at Saigon be able to say any more, "We can sell Saigon rice because perfidious Albion, who prevented our acquiring Upper Burma, hampers exports from Rangoon."

—Your obedient servant,
January 7th.

MAJOR J. BROADBENT, R.E., Assistant Secretary in the Military Department, proceeds home on leave in the spring.

MR. BROOKE takes three months' leave to England early this month, and Mr. Lane will officiate as the Deputy Director-General of the Telegraph Department.

THE following troops compose the Zhoob Valley Expedition:—6th Bengal Cavalry, No. 3 Peshawar Mountain Battery and the 23rd Pioneers. Colonel Holdich, R.E., and Lieutenant Mackenzie, R.E., accompany the force to survey the country, and Colonel Bigg-Wither, R.E., to prospect for a railway. The Commissariat under Lieutenant Tulloch are taking one lakh of treasure and supplies for six weeks. Lieutenant Carey, Worcester Regiment, is Intelligence Officer to the force; and Lieutenant Shakespeare, Staff Officer to Colonel Jennings, who commands.

THE Committee of the Junior Constitution Club have acquired a site for the New Club House, which will occupy a commanding position in the best part of Piccadilly, with a frontage of 115 feet, overlooking the Green Park. The demolition of the existing houses will shortly commence, and it is expected that a portion of the site will be sufficiently cleared to commence putting in the foundation early in the spring. On the ground-floor of the new building there will be a handsome entrance hall with large inner hall, a grand staircase, and a smoking room, about 90 feet by 23, with recessed bay windows facing the park; also a library and reception room. The first floor will be divided into a magnificent L-shaped dining-room, about 150 feet total length, and a breadth of 27 feet, with a frontage to the park; a morning room, 75 feet by 25 feet, both rooms leading off from the main landing of grand staircase. On the second floor will be provided billiard, committee and private dining-rooms, with the necessary secretarial accommodation, and above, in the three upper floors, will be arranged about sixty bed rooms for members, with separate staircase and elevator from the ground-floor. The elevation of the new building facing Piccadilly will be of stone, of Italian renaissance design, with boldly treated fenestration, the general faa de being broken by large bay windows carried up through the three principal floors. The interior decoration will be handsome without unnecessary elaboration, ample provision will be made for the service of the various floors, and the new building will be fitted up with every modern improvement, and lighted throughout with the electric light. The plans are now being prepared by the Architect appointed by the Committee, Mr. Robert W. Edis, F.S.A., of 14, Fitzroy-square, who designed and carried out the Constitutional Club in Northumberland-avenue, Badminton Club in Piccadilly, and in important works connected with other well-known clubs.

OBITUARY.

SURGEON-GENERAL EDWARD GREEN BALFOUR, whose death, at the age of seventy-eight, took place recently, at 107, Gloucester-terrace, Hyde-park, was one of the most eminent officers of the Madras Medical Establishment; and very few men of any department of the public service in India could show a longer or more sterling record of public usefulness. He was in India altogether forty-two years, from 1834 to 1876; and after being in medical charge of Native and European troops of all branches, and in both the Madras and Bombay armies, and staff-surgeon at Ahmednugger in the Deccan, and Bellary in the ceded districts, he served from 1862 to 1870 in the administrative grade of the Madras Medical Staff, as deputy surgeon-general, in Burma and the Straits Settlements, and the Andamans, in the ceded districts, in the Mysore division, and for four years with the Hyderabad subsidiary force and Hyderabad Contingent. From 1871 to 1876 inclusive he was, as surgeon-general, the head of the Madras Medical Department. For many years he was Political Agent at the Court of the Nawab of the Carnatic, and also paymaster of the Carnatic stipends, and from 1858 to 1861 he was commissioner for investigating the debts of the Nawab. In 1850 he founded the Government Central Museum at Madras, and in 1856 commenced the collection of animals which formed the nucleus of the Madras Zoological Gardens in the People's Park. In 1866 he instituted the Mysore Museum. He was secretary to the Madras Central Committee for the Great Exhibition of 1851, for the Paris Exhibitions of 1855 and 1867, for the International Exhibition of London in 1862, and the Vienna Exhibition of 1873. He wrote largely on Indian economic subjects, and translated several English medical and scientific works into Hindustani, and published a volume of selections from the Persian and Indian poets, in whose writings he was deeply read. His great work, however, was his Cyclopædia of India and Southern Asia. Surgeon-General Balfour was a brother of Sir George Balfour, K.C.B. and M.P. for Kincardineshire, and a nephew of Joseph Hume.

THE Municipal Committee of Lucknow have resolved that a sum of Rs. 2,000 be expended for the reception of Prince Albert Victor this month.

THE following is the result of the census of Simla taken during October last:—Europeans: males, 1,471; females, 1,295. Eurasians: males, 362; females, 272. Asiatics: males, 16,757; females, 4,022. Total: 24,179. This is almost exactly double the population of ten years ago.

ON the retirement of Colonel Mallock, Mr. Luke will again join the headquarters of the Telegraph Department in the grade of Directors.

COLONEL CONWAY-GORDON, Director-General of Railways, will shortly furnish a report regarding the alleged excessive tariff of charges on the frontier railways.

DR. VOELCKER'S mission was, the Englishman understands, suggested by the Secretary of State as the most convenient method of enabling the Government of India to decide in what form to introduce the study and application of agricultural chemistry in this country, and is the outcome of a long continued correspondence with the home authorities.

A proposal has been made by the Commander-in-Chief to place the non-commissioned officers appointed permanently to the schools of musketry in India on the same footing as regards pay, clothing, and pension as the sergeants-major of hill depôts.

GENERAL GORDON'S arrangements for the Chin Column so far have been made with admirable care and forethought. Kan, however, is situated at the end of the world, there being no post-office or telegraph office within 120 miles. The Nagar coolies are grand fellows at work; they carry 80lbs. in addition to their own kit, whilst two-thirds of the Punjabi coolies double up and cannot carry their own blankets.

SIR EDWARD BUCK AND MR. H. C. HILL, officiating Inspector-General of Forests, have left Calcutta on tour. The former proceeds to Gwalior and Bombay, and thence to the Berars and Coorg. Mr. Hill will visit Jubbulpore, and then proceed to the Berars and Coorg. Sir Edward will not return to Calcutta till the beginning of February.

THERE was quite a tamasha with a tiger in Rewah a few days ago. The brute entered the town in the morning, killed one of the inhabitants, and attacked half-a-dozen others, mauling one of his victims so badly that he died in hospital. The people of Rewah, to the number of five hundred, then organised an expedition against the intruder, and Stripes was shot dead after a lively hunt of an hour. He measured ten feet six inches.

MR. BRADLAUGH, THE STAFF OF INDIA AND HIGH PRIEST TO THE CONGRESS.

Our vernacular contemporaries never lose an occasion of inviting people to open their purse-strings to help the Indian Congress, and we translate the following from the Swadeshamitran to show how the fact that the Congress is entering on the fifth year of its existence is taken advantage of by the paper "to pass the hat round":—

Providence, which blinded a man's eyes, has given him a staff to guide his way. In a similar manner India, which has been groping its way in the profound darkness of ignorance, has at last obtained a Parliamentary member, in the person of Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, as its guide. However well educated and highly civilised our countrymen may be, however frequent and public their meetings to discuss questions of vital importance to the Natives, and however pertinaciously they may make known their wants to the authorities and elaborately discuss them in the public prints, not the slightest good will result unless there be people in England who will take up our cause and bring it before the public there, and above all a man of strong will in the House who can, when Indian subjects are brought on the tapis, compel to remain in their seats the other members, whose wont has hitherto been to walk cavalierly away from the House on such occasions. There has now been established in England a "Political Agency" to look after our affairs and advance our interests in England. What with the endeavours of this Agency, and what with the actions of those in England who are the friends of the Indian Congress, Indian affairs are now better known and more largely discussed both by the public and the Press in England. Repeated blows will make even the grinding stone move; and now or never is the opportunity for us to strengthen our party and gain our cause. At such a time there are not wanting people among the educated classes who think of themselves alone and of the advancement of their own interests, and bestow not the slightest attention on public matters. "What do we care," they say, "if that dog is feeding on a bone, or if this cat has been widowed"? Others there are who hold forth and swing their arms freely while displaying their power of eloquence at public meetings, but when the cry of "subscription" is raised carefully hide their hands in their bosoms, and are nowhere. If a man without money is like a corpse, need we say how important money is to the Congress, which has a thousand matters to deliberate upon, numbers of books to publish, and numbers of tracts to distribute broadcast? Mr. A. O. Hume and men of his type devote their time and their hard-earned cash to further the cause of the Congress. But as the proverb says:—"The ascetic gets all the buffetings while the Saiva Brahman gets the plums." It is not well of the Hindus to thrive on the labours of those people while leaving them at last out in the cold. It may perhaps be pleaded that India is overtaxed, and its people half-starved. It is no doubt true that we have the poor still among us, but it is nevertheless true also that India abounds in men rich in worldly goods. How many Maharajahs, Rajahs, Zemindars, Vakils, Merchants and Sowcars are there not in this country? If the cry is raised that the "ruler is coming," do they not untie a purse or two? Does not the whole Presidency spend money and make preparations when a Prince is desecrated coming at a distance? Can you measure the sums expended at temple festivals, or on marriage occasions? Is not money poured like water to carry on litigation in Courts? And does any one comprehend correctly what money is spent on account of the so-called civilisation of the West? But when the object to be helped is the Congress, all at once the fountains of charity dry up. Oh, the pity of it! Now what is Mr. Bradlaugh? Is he a Sowcar, a Zemindar? No, to live he has to work; but truth and perseverance have made him what he is. His love for India is not to be described in words. While we in India were greatly exercised by the thought that his illness should perchance continue and compel him to abandon his contemplated visit to this country, he, on the other hand, while stretched on his sick bed, was no less anxious when his illness should leave him, and when he would be enabled to speed to India. The Congress is an infant about to complete its fifth year. When it completes its fifth year it is to be put to school according to our Hindu custom, and what better acharya can we get for the infant than Mr. Bradlaugh to guide its fingers over the characters of the alphabet? On such an auspicious day, when a child is first put to school, it is usual for relatives and friends to make valuable presents; and it is to be hoped that the people of India will avail themselves of this time-honoured custom and hasten to the Congress with presents of money.

A NAWAB'S WILL.

A Native paper in Bengal has recently published a translated version of the will of the late Nawab Ekbal-ud-Daula of Oudh, G.C.S.I., who died some months ago at Bagdad. The will is one of considerable length, and was drawn up entirely by the deceased, who enters into the minutest details in regard to everyone who served him, and everything he possessed. The method he displayed when his end was approaching, and he found it necessary to arrange for the disposal of his immense fortune, was certainly absent in regard to "money in cash, things, precious stones, gold, silver, kiran (Persian coins) rupees, British and French sovereigns, Ottoman liras and innumerable furniture" with which he says that, "by the Grace of God, the inner and outer apartments of my houses in Bagdad and Kazimain are replete": for further on he tells us "there is no account or list of them." His directions in connection with these valuables are worth reproduction:—

Those in the outer apartments are in the custody of Khizr and Abul Hassan, especially Khizr, who knows how to read and write, and those in the inner apartments are in the hands of my female servants. They shall not steal and embezzle them. If they do so, they shall be made by force and threats to give back the things to the British Resident at Bagdad. The female apartments of my house at Bagdad and Kazimain are full of money in cash and things, as also the rooms in the outer apartments of my house at Bagdad are replete with all sorts of money in cash and things. But their number is not certain, nor is there any list of them. I have solely to depend on the honesty of my female and male servants. I am sure that the monthly allowance I get from the British Government will cease, and be stopped on my death. I offer it as a present to the Government, and it would constitute a saving of the Government. And I die without any to come after me, and without son, without heir.

The Nawab's anxiety about the future of his female domestics was as great as his liberality towards them, and his other servants generally:—

The female servants of my Harem, black or white, shall each receive one thousand rupees as present, and be allowed to leave after apologies are made to them on my behalf. They may go wherever they like. Only a reasonable and just request, out of foresight and prudence, shall be made to them to lead a life of chastity and modesty wherever they may live, and not to do unlawful and bad deeds; because God has blessed lawful acts. They are female servants who have attended me at night in the same manner as male servants have attended me during the day, and are emancipated and free. They have no right upon me other than that of service done to me. I was obliged to avail myself of their services at night. It is necessary that they should be made to leave my house with great respect and decorum. Moreover, if it be possible, some of my old trustworthy servants should attend them for some time, and come back after seeing them to the places of their destination. The only thing I desire is their chastity, respectability and honour. They (the old and trustworthy servants) should exert themselves head and heart for them (female servants), and see them arrive with comfort and honour to whatever places they may like to go. Such places should, however, be places of due decorum and decency, and not to gaming houses and places of amusements or ill-repute. When they shall leave, great respect and honour should be shown them by everybody, because they have been the servants of my house and partners of my nocturnal retirement, and have lived in my house with modesty and decency. They should after me leave my house, and go wherever they like with modesty and decency. As for the rest, their luck is in their hands. Great respect is to be shown them when they shall leave, as they have been my night attendants and confidants, and I also showed them respect on account of their being secluded, and on account of my naturally kind and charitable disposition.

Deceased's solicitude for his animals and "other superfluous articles of my house" is remarkable:—"My animals shall be sold at a just price, but not by auction. Other superfluous articles of my house shall also be sold, but not by auction. If they do not sell, they shall remain in their places, but in a manner that they be not eaten by worms and rats. I do not like that one should go round with them, and sell them lest they form the subject of joke of friends and foes, and purchasers laugh and utter words good and bad, becoming and unbecoming, and buffoons crack jokes at them."

HER MAJESTY has been pleased to confer an Indian cadetship on Mr. Frederick Henry Sherstone Roberts, only son of General Sir Frederick Roberts, Bart., C.B., V.C., Commander-in-Chief in India. Mr. Roberts, who has just reached his eighteenth birthday, has passed the qualifying examination for admission to Sandhurst, and joins the Royal Military College in the next batch of cadets. A Queen's cadetship has also been awarded Mr. Capel Charles Wolseley, eldest son of the late Major W. C. Wolseley of the 6th Regiment, and kinsman of the Adjutant-General. Major Wolseley died at Meerut on Dec. 28th, 1878, of malaria fever.

MR. BRADLAUGH INTERVIEWED.

THE newspaper Interviewer has at length got to India. The place has hitherto been sacred from his impudence and vulgarity, but it possesses that exclusiveness no longer. India has received during the past twenty years many strange importations. It may be said that the loafer she has always had with her since she became acquainted with European Christianity and civilisation; and that she has long recognised the Travelling Gent and the Inquisitive

M.P. as institutions which must be accepted with British rule. They have now become almost as fixed quantities on her soil as missionaries, beer and spirits, or any other blessing which she owes to England. But she has been happily free from the inquisitive Press vagabond. For fear of hurting the feelings of any contemporary who keeps this article as part of the staff, let us say at once that we use the word "vagabond" in no disrespectful way to the honourable profession of journalism, but merely to signify "a gentleman of the Press" wandering about in search of information. Not general information—that is common almost to anyone who can use his eyes and ears. But there are other kinds of information to obtain which require certain powers of mind and body which are not given to all men. There must be a phrenological development of the bump of inquisitiveness in the highest degree; there must be a freedom of manners which, although it may be called by some people impudence or insolence, merely means that the interviewer is determined to do his duty to his employer; there must be a forgetfulness of self in never recognising a snub or a rebuke; and last, but not least, there should be a thickness of the epidermis, so as to render it insensible to pain in case of bodily accident. "May I ask you, Sir," says a lady to one of these gentry in a now-forgotten farce, "have you ever been kicked downstairs for intruding where you were not wanted?" The reply was immediate and perfect. "Madam," said the interviewer, "If you knew the number of stairs which I have been kicked down you would wonder that I continue this calling." But the calling having become a recognised profession there will always be found applicants for its emoluments, who are heedless of its dangers. And so the "profession" has extended itself to India. The presence of Mr. Bradlaugh in Bombay to take part in the National Congress gave "the gentleman of the Press" who appears to have started the interviewing business in that city an opportunity which his soul must have rejoiced at. He visited Mr. Bradlaugh at the bungalow of the Parsee gentleman with whom he was staying, and at once proceeded to "draw him out." But Mr. B. proved to be a badger not easily drawn. "The honourable member courteously though firmly declined to give his opinion of the National Congress and its programme." Thinking that this modesty might arise from an unwillingness to say anything about the assemblage then about to sit, the interviewer proceeded to find out his opinion of the movement generally, or, as our Scotch friends would say, "in the abstract." But Mr. B. was again equal to the occasion. In reply to the somewhat blunt question, "What do you think of the Congress?" he smilingly observed, "Well, I agree with what has been done at the past meetings, but there are some little details which are not perhaps quite in accord with the views I hold. Of course, I am in favour of the Congress, or I should not be here, but until I have had some personal experience of it I must ask you to excuse me saying more about it." This reception must have been a blow to even the most hardened interviewer, and this one certainly deserves all the sympathy which his brethren of the craft can spare for him. But he was evidently a man determined to get on in the profession he had adopted, and so he pressed Mr. Bradlaugh a little more—but with very scant success. That gentleman said that when he had gained the personal experience which he did not then possess, and had heard the views of others, he might say something about his own, but until then he must be guarded, and decline to satisfy curiosity.

And then—and this is the beauty of the story—the Honourable Member for India turned on his interviewer.

"Interviewing," said he, "is like drawing a cork. If the cork is not good it breaks somewhere. At the present moment I am a dilapidated cork. There may be something good in the bottle, but I am only at the neck of the bottle at present."

Whether the cork was dilapidated or not the interviewer failed to draw it. All that he could draw was a moral which could not have been complimentary to his own skill in "drawing."

Mr. Bradlaugh's bottle remained "uncorked."

NOTICE.—The series of papers on "Indian Investments" will be continued in our next issue.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

IN case it is found inadvisable to withdraw the troops from Sikkim, arrangements will be made for relieving the present garrison in the spring.

GENERAL NAIRNE, Inspector-General of Artillery, having completed his tour in Northern India, proceeds shortly from Calcutta to the Madras Presidency to visit the Artillery Camp of Exercise there.

COLONEL HUGHES-HALLETT, on returning from England from leave, was expected at Ootacamund on Dec. 26th, to assume charge of the Deputy Judge Advocate-Generalship from Colonel Matthews.

A SERIOUS theft of arms from a British regiment has been reported to the police on the N.W.R. On this occasion no fewer than twelve Martini-Henry rifles are alleged to have been carried away from the barracks at Jhelum on the night of Dec. 18th.

THE selected cavalry of the Punjab States will concentrate at Lahore on Jan. 20th and remain there till the 26th, when the combined force will proceed to Muridki. The only Punjab State that will not be represented is Maler Kotla, whose troops have not been reorganised owing to a change in the administration.

A CORRESPONDENT with the force in Sikkim writes:—"Sharp frost has set in on the Sikkim hills and the two pieces of water in the vicinity of Gnatong are now frozen hard, so that those of the force who are fond of skating can enjoy themselves to their hearts' content. Extensive preparations are now being made for Christmas, which we feel we can celebrate as it should be celebrated in this climate."

THE Government appears to be giving some consideration to the suggestions that have been made for bringing the European and Eurasian male population more completely under some form of military training. As a preliminary it is intended to utilise the approaching census operations with a view to ascertaining the proportion of trained and untrained men in these communities. The Pioneer says:—"In connection with the census operations, it is proposed to compile returns showing the total adult population, European and Eurasian, capable of bearing arms throughout all India; also the exact number of women and children of those races. This will enable the military authorities exactly to estimate what reserve of strength lies behind the present Volunteer organisation. This has been variously calculated, Captain Duff, the winner of the United Service Institution's medal this year, putting it as high as 70,000. These are described as Europeans or of European descent 'without military training and without arms.' It would be interesting to know whether these figures are correct, and how these 70,000 men are distributed over India. They could be grouped in the Census according to provinces first, and then according to towns or districts, their ages being shown from twenty to fifty. Until this is done there must always be a vagueness in the estimates put forward and in the suggestions for compulsory service or a levy en masse in time of war."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDs, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C.
BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) discovered a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORO-DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE IN-VENTOR, and as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS
BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of it is a defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.
See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
London, REPORT that it ACTS as a
CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta testifies: "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical
Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars,
and, judging from their sale, we fancy
their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy
of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during
many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J.T. DAVENPORT, 336, Russell St., W.C.

IS
CHOLERA,
DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE
PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine, which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRU-PULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to obtain the Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 4d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ST. JACOBS OIL.

ITS SUCCESS AND POPULARITY.

Perhaps there is no preparation in the world which enjoys the same degree of success and popularity as St. Jacobs Oil. Its sale far exceeds that of any other Proprietary Medicine, and exceeds by ten times that of all other liniments and embrocations combined. This wonderful success rests on the solid foundation of merit which St. Jacobs Oil possesses, combined with original, dignified, and systematic advertising, which has always characterised the announcements of the Proprietors. The name of St. Jacobs Oil has become a household word in every civilised country in the world. The great success and popularity of the Oil has become the subject of comment by almost the entire Press of the country. In many instances the leading articles of large and influential papers have been devoted to the details of what seemed to be almost magical cures effected by the use of St. Jacobs Oil in local cases, coming under the immediate attention of the publishers. St. Jacobs Oil is endorsed by Statesmen, Judges, the Clergy, the Medical Profession, and people in every walk of life.

The following statements are certainly entitled to the most serious consideration of every thinking man and woman. The names given are those of living witnesses. The statements are facts. They can be easily verified. Let the public make the investigation. Everyone will find, not only that these testimonials are genuine, but that St. Jacobs Oil relieves and cures rheumatism, just as surely as the sun shines in the heavens.

Mr. C. H. PALMER, Secretary to the Conservative Defence Association and Overseer of the District of Islington, says:—"I was a great sufferer from neuralgia and rheumatism. I tried various remedies without obtaining relief; then procured a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which completely removed every trace of pain."

C. H. Palmer

Mr. GEORGE BELLHOUSE, Chief Engineer of Birmingham, England, Fire Brigade, states:—"The members of our Fire Brigade received great benefit from the use of St. Jacobs Oil in cases of severe pain in the back and limbs. A few applications only are necessary to effect entire cures."

George Bellhouse

WILLIAM BEACH, of Australia, Champion Oarsman of the World, writes:—"I have found St. Jacobs Oil of greatest service in training. For stiffness, cramps, muscular pains, and soreness it is invaluable. I always keep a bottle of it with me. It cures rheumatism."

William Beach

Mr. W. MITCHELL, The Vale, Kirby Bedon, Trowse, Norwich, states:—"St. Jacobs Oil has wrought wonderful cures among my men, who suffered from rheumatism and neuralgia. One man, who was hardly able to move in bed from a lame back, was instantaneously relieved and cured in a single night."

W. Mitchell

The Honourable BILLA FLINT, Life Senator Canadian Parliament. "St. Jacobs Oil acts like a charm. It removes all pain. I have used it."

Billa Flint

WM. BUCHANAN, of Liverpool, 24 Years Engineer Cunard S.-S. Co., states:—"I suffered agony from neuralgia and rheumatism in the head. Six doctors gave me up. My house was pointed out as that of a dying man. St. Jacobs Oil cured me. It saved my life."

William Buchanan

Dr. R. BUTLER, Master of Arts, Cambridge University. "I used St. Jacobs Oil for rheumatism. Its effect was wonderful."

R. Butler

Messrs. HOARE and SONS, the well-known Ladies and Gentlemen's Tailors, 252 and 253, High Holborn, London, say:—"Among our employes and friends, St. Jacobs Oil has accomplished remarkable cures. Cases of rheumatism, stiff neck, and sore throat were speedily cured by only a few applications. Its power to cure pain is certainly astonishing."

Hoare & Sons

From EDWARD HANLAN, ex-Champion Oarsman of the World: "For muscular pains in the limbs, I have found St. Jacobs Oil a reliable remedy. Its results are the most beneficial, and I have pleasure in recommending it from personal experience."

Edward Hanlan

The curative powers of St. Jacobs Oil are simply marvellous. It is wholly an outward application. It conquers pain quickly and surely. It acts like magic. It penetrates to the seat of the disease. It cures, even when everything else has failed. A single trial will convince the most incredulous. It has cured thousands of cases of rheumatism and neuralgia, which had resisted treatment for the greater part of a lifetime. It has cured people who have been crippled with pain for more than twenty years. After the most thorough and practical test, St. Jacobs Oil has received Six Gold Medals at different International Exhibitions for its marvellous power to conquer pain. It is used extensively in the leading Hospitals and Dispensaries of the metropolis and provincial cities, and also on board her Majesty's Troop-ships and the Cunard Steam-ship Company's Fleet. Put up in white wrappers for human use, and in yellow for veterinary purposes, price 2s. 6d. per Bottle, of all dealers in Medicine throughout the world; or sent, post-free, by the Proprietors, The Charles A. Vogeler Company, 45, Farringdon-road, London, E.C.

Mr. WILLIAM PAGAN, Member Liverpool Harriers. "I believe St. Jacobs Oil to be the best thing ever used for curing and preventing swellings and soreness of the cords and muscles after severe exercise. Having used the Oil myself, and knowing other members of this club who use no other remedy after their exercises and races, I have no hesitancy in recommending it to all athletes."

William Pagan

Mr. E. F. PAINTER, London, Member Athletic Club and Ranelagh Harriers, states:—"I used St. Jacobs Oil for sprains and bruises with marvellous results. I shall recommend it whenever opportunity occurs."

E. F. Painter

Mr. E. J. WADE, London Athletic Club, London:—"My sprained leg was cured by St. Jacobs Oil. Athletes should never be without it."

E. J. Wade

Professor T. WARAKER, LL.D., Intercollegiate Law Lecturer, Cambridge University, states:—"In my own house and among my friends great success has attended the employment of St. Jacobs Oil in several cases of rheumatism and neuralgia."

T. Waraker

Mr. W. F. JEFFERIES, Ranelagh Harriers, London, says:—"I find St. Jacobs Oil the best remedy I have ever used for sprains, stiffness, and bruises. It quickly removes pains and swellings, and if rubbed into the muscles it will be found of great benefit to all athletes. I may also add that many friends of mine have found the Oil a cure for rheumatism and neuralgia."

W. F. Jeffries

DAVID SCOTT, of the Champion Australian Cricket Team and Champion Walker of the World:—"The effect of St. Jacobs Oil is magical. I used it for a terribly bruised leg. The relief was surprising. I also find it invaluable in training and after hard races."

David Scott

From Mr. GEORGE PHILLIPS, Secretary Leinster Cycling Club, Dublin:—"I have found St. Jacobs Oil an invaluable remedy for strains and bruises, and so have several members of our club."

Geo. Phillips

From General RUFUS INGALLS, Quarter-Master General United States Army:—"St. Jacobs Oil is the best pain-cure we ever used. It conquers pain."

R. Ingalls

From Mr. WILLIAM HOWES, Civil Engineer, No. 68, Red Lion-street, High Holborn, London:—"For over twenty years I was constantly and severely afflicted with rheumatism. At times my hands were twice their natural size. My joints became so stiff and painful that I could not walk. I derived no benefit from physicians and various remedies. Two bottles of St. Jacobs Oil removed the pain which I had not been free from for twenty years. Its effects were magical. It produced a complete cure. It is a wonderful remedy."

NOTES.

THE latest news from India is full, as usual, of the continued pleasant progress of Prince Albert Victor through the country. Officially speaking, the Prince is travelling for his own amusement, but as he is being welcomed everywhere in a very public manner, is receiving addresses, and laying foundation-stones, &c., it is evident that the Natives of India—princes and people—look upon the visit in a different light to that in which the English officials put it to them. Not that any harm will accrue from this little misunderstanding, but rather some good—especially if his Royal Highness continues to take part in the “important public function” of inaugurating new water and drainage works in foul centres, such as that holy of holies in Hindu eyes, the city of Benares. It is satisfactory, however, to learn that such a scheme, intended to convert the dirtiest and most unhealthy city in India into one of the most salubrious, owes its inception in a great measure to the liberality of Native Chiefs.

THE Commander-in-Chief in India has announced to the Native army that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has offered a prize, in his own name, for the musketry championship in that army, in commemoration of Prince Albert Victor's visit to India. This is considerate and well-timed, and the Native soldiery, whose shooting is yearly improving, will no doubt fully appreciate the Prince of Wales's attention to them, and will enter into keen competition for his prize when the competition for it comes off. But what does the Pioneer mean by tacking on to the announcement a statement about the expenses which Native noblemen and the communities of various large towns have been put to in making preparations for the reception of Prince Victor—“for loyalty's sake without looking further”—yet “that it was none the less happy a thought on the Prince of Wales to show that he was not unmindful of the attention that is being paid to his son?” Does the Pioneer mean its readers to understand that a shooting prize to the Native army is to be recognised as His Royal Highness's way of thanking India generally for its hospitality to his son?

If the Bill for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which the Hon. Mr. Hutchins introduced in the Legislative Council at Calcutta on Thursday last, be a really strong one, it will be a sort of revelation to Hindus, Mussulmans, Sikhs, and Rajputs as to Western ideas concerning the treatment of dumb animals. The mild Hindu, who shudders at the shedding of blood, thinks nothing of the tail-twisting, pointed stick-goading torture which he inflicts upon his unfortunate draught bullocks. If these unhappy bullocks can have life made a little easier for them, and if the “tats” of the gharriwallahs can be brought to receive some humane attention also, great good may result; but there will be much trouble before it comes to be thoroughly understood in India that the merciful man not only should be, but by law must be, merciful to his beast. If the already twenty existing local Acts have failed to bring about this desideratum, it is to be feared that a Supreme Act of Council, however much it may strengthen the hands of executive officers, will only effect its purpose through many prosecutions and after considerable time and labour. The intention of the Legislature is good, but the carrying of it out will be the difficulty.

THE Bombay Legislative Council cannot be overburdened with local political work, and it is pleasant not to have to read now columns upon columns concerning the corrupt Mamlutdars and the Government “breach of faith” towards them. But Bombay is nothing if not moral; and so Sir Raymond West has introduced a Bill for the more effectual suppression of gambling, especially of that gambling which takes the form of betting on the rainfall—one of the most exciting and time-honoured pastimes of the Marwari merchants in the Western Presidency city. Of course such gambling is wrong, as all gambling is according to the stern ethics of the perfect moralist; but it may be doubted by those who know the “custom” in Bombay whether it would not have been wiser to have left this “rainfall” sin to be put down rather by police than legislative interference. As the Times correspondent points out, the subject is one of great delicacy, opening up very wide questions, such as betting on racecourses, and the use of that implement of betting, the totalisator.

What about the “lotteries” and “sweeps” at Indian race-meetings, especially that Calcutta Derby Sweep which annually amounts to upwards of a lac of rupees? All the rainfall gambling is but a “drop” compared to these.

ANGLO-INDIANS should never be too old to learn, especially when their teacher is Professor Max Müller, LL.D., F.R.S., &c. Those who attended at the Royal Institution on the evening of the 11th inst. to inaugurate the establishment of a School for Modern Oriental Studies, by the “Imperial Institute of the United Kingdom,” must have learnt much that was altogether new to them. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who presided, acknowledged with his “warmest thanks” the information which the Professor on that occasion gave to his listeners, and it is only right that Anglo-Indians should be grateful also. They have had their old cob-webbed ideas as to how England became possessed of India completely swept away, and nice new clean facts put in their place. India has not yet been conquered. That story is altogether a mistake. Professor Max Müller showed it to be so. Here are his words: “It is generally said that India has been conquered by England. But the true conquest of India is yet to come. The true conquerors of India—of the heart of India—will be those very men whom our new School of Oriental Languages means to fit for their arduous work.” Hear, oh Bradlaugh! and give ear, oh Babu! and let India send back the Soldier; England will replace him by the Scholar. Amen!

THE Natives in the Bombay Presidency are displaying, says the Pioneer, a pleasant sort of humour, which contrasts well with the gall and bitterness of the Press in Bengal. At a Congress meeting in Rajkote the politicians gave three cheers for “the Queen, Lord Reay, and Mr. Bradlaugh.” They appear to look on the latter gentleman as representing England in much the same way as foreigners treat the Lord Mayor of London. There are two comic papers in Bombay, a Hindu Punch and a Parsee Punch, and, like their great London prototype, they treat politics from the humorous point of view by means of cartoons. The elevation of that distinguished Congress leader, Mr. Justice Telang, to the Bench is treated as a clipping of his wings. He is depicted as an eagle caught in the Government net; while two other Native barristers who aspired to the place are shown as eagles uncaught and untamed. In some funny verses Mr. Telang is enjoined to continue “to strive to soar and sing on Congress heights.” Another cartoon represents Lord Reay as an apothecary with two phials of physic. He pours the contents of the one labelled “Dismissal” down the unwilling throat of a corrupt Magistrate whom he holds by the nose, telling the patient: “This is poison which I must give and you must swallow, because Dr. Cross commands it; but, look here, I have my own antidote,” and he shows the other bottle labelled “Compensation.” As wit this may be rather rudimentary and mediæval; but it is pleasant to find the Native mind capable of approaching public affairs in this sort of spirit. The perpetual screeching of the Bengali Press is ineffective for one reason, because the note never varies.

THE Queen has approved of Major-General Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., taking up the command of the Bombay Army, in succession to the Duke of Connaught, on March 15th; and of Major-General the Hon. R. H. (now Viscount Frankfort) de Montmorency, in command at Alexandria, succeeding Sir George Greaves in command of a first-class district in Bengal.

ASSISTANT SURGEON G. M. DIXON has been placed on general duty in Bombay.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 19.

Prince Albert Victor left Calcutta on Monday evening. His departure being of a private character he had no opportunity of expressing himself on the subject of his visit, but the Viceroy has addressed a letter to the Maharajah Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, President of the Reception Committee, stating that his Royal Highness was delighted with his visit, and particularly pleased with his welcome on arrival and the interesting series of fetes given on the Maidan on the evening of the 7th inst. He reached Benares on Tuesday afternoon. After seeing the sights of the sacred city and the striking spectacle which it presents from the river, the Prince, on Wednesday, took part in an important public function, laying the foundation stone of the new water and drainage works. The scheme, which owes its inception in a great measure to the liberal subscriptions of several Native chiefs, is intended to convert the dirtiest and most unhealthy city in India into one of the most salubrious. Thursday and Friday were devoted to shooting with the Maharajah of Benares. Yesterday the Prince arrived at Lucknow, where he is now staying as the guest of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught left Calcutta with Prince Albert Victor, and proceeded to Poonah. In consequence of the Duchess being slightly indisposed, they were unable to carry out their intention to go to the cavalry camp at Muridki. The Duke proceeds to Quetta on inspection duty this week. It is believed that on finally leaving India he and the Duchess will go home via Japan and America.

In the Legislative Council on Thursday the Hon. Mr. Hutchins introduced an important Bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals. There are already some twenty Acts on this subject passed by various local councils, but owing to limited power or defective wording they have operated very ineffectually. The need of having some wider and more stringent measure must be obvious to any one who has ever driven through an Indian town and seen hackney carriages drawn by half-starved ponies or carts by bullocks with open sores, while the merciless floggings inflicted by the drivers show how callous they are to suffering. Lately public attention has been drawn more strongly by the conviction in a Calcutta police-court of some butchers charged with flaying goats alive. Mr. Hutchins's Bill is intended to strengthen the arm of the Executive in dealing with these and similar cruelties, but, as the hon. member pointed out, it is necessary in a country like India to go to work cautiously, so the local administrations will be consulted before the Bill is made one of general application.

Meanwhile the Bombay Legislature is attempting to reform public morals in another direction. Sir Raymond West has introduced a Bill for the more effectual suppression of gambling, especially that gambling which takes the form of betting on the rainfall, which is said to be very prevalent among the Marwari merchants of the Western Presidency. Mr. F. L. Latham, the Advocate-General, in his remarks on the Bill, expressed approval of the general principle, but pointed out that the subject was one of great delicacy, as it opened up several very wide questions, such as betting on racecourses and the use of that implement of betting, the totalizator.

At the annual meeting of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, on Wednesday, Sir Frank Forbes Adam, the retiring president, delivered an address referring to various subjects of mercantile interest. The Merchandise Marks Act, he said, operated admirably, now that the initial friction had been overcome, and he suggested that the Government should appoint a public officer to prosecute offenders under the Act. Turning then to the bankruptcy law, he said they had waited long and patiently for new legislation. The most important points requiring attention were—first, to give increased facilities for adjudicating a debtor before he had time to look at his books or conceal his assets; secondly, to give Courts greater powers to investigate the conduct of an insolvent debtor; and, thirdly, to make diplomatic arrangements with the native States to enable the decrees of the British Courts to become operative within their territories and provide for the surrender of fraudulent absconding debtors. He next spoke of the question of postal and telegraph charges. He did not attach much importance to the former, but he urged that early steps should be taken to procure a reduction of the telegraph rates. Seven-eighths of the import and export business of India, he said, was done by telegraph. A reform in that direction would be of the greatest advantage to the foreign trade of the country.

Convocation of the University of Calcutta took place yesterday. The Viceroy, as Chancellor, opened the proceedings with a short address. He congratulated the University on its new Vice-Chancellor, Justice Bannerji, whose appointment, he said, was hailed with satisfaction by the University, the Government, and the public. After referring briefly to the advisability of conferring degrees instead of fellowships as an honorary academical distinction, he went on to say that he was now considering whether, in filling vacant fellowships, it might not be feasible to ask the University itself to select a certain number of names for submission to him. A proportion of the vacancies must continue to be filled by nomination as heretofore, but he thought it might be possible to allow Masters of Arts to submit some names among themselves for the remainder of the vacancies. The Vice-Chancellor spoke at some length. He alluded, among other things, to the fact that the percentage of examination failures was high last year. This had given rise to much thoughtful criticism, and also to a mass of what he described as thoughtless talk and senseless abuse. The Senate had appointed a committee to inquire into the causes. Their report had not yet been submitted. But although he would not say that their University system was perfect, at least he believed the fault was not with it.

Yesterday's Government Gazette contains a note on the progress of education for the year which ended in March last. The following figures are interesting. The number of institutions referred to declined from 132,125 to 131,709. The decrease was entirely in public institutions. The number of pupils on the registers increased from 3,460,844 to 3,544,257. The percentage of pupils to population of school-going age was 11·2, against 11·0 in the previous year. The number of pupils studying English rose from 325,425 to 342,953. The number of boys attending school was 3,253,996 or 20·3 of the male population of school-going age, as compared with 3,182,643 in the previous year. The number of girl pupils was 290,261, against 278,201, and their proportion to the female population of school-going age was 1·8. The year's results are described as satisfactory, especially as regards the increased attendance and the growth of private contributions towards education.

The cavalry camp of exercise at Muridki is now in full operation. The various regiments assembled are going through a number of useful exercises. Sir F. Roberts has gone on a visit to the camp. He will spend a few days there before proceeding on his inspection tour.

A Bombay telegram states that it is now an undoubted fact, though hitherto it has been only rumoured, that the question of constitutional law whether the corrupt Judges and magistrates might be retained in office was referred by the Secretary of State to the Lord Chancellor, whose opinion was substantially the same as that of the three protesting Judges of the local High Court.

For some time past there has been considerable uneasiness among the Kols, a rude aboriginal tribe in Chota Nagpore, and it has even been said in some quarters that there was danger of a rising. It is difficult to arrive at the truth, but it appears that much discontent has been caused by the manner in which the landlords have enforced their rights of bethbegari, or gratuitous labour, on the Kol tenants. A large number of the Kols are Christians, but it has been said, rightly or wrongly, that with the majority of these Christianity is purely nominal, the change of faith having been made simply because they thought it gave them a better chance of winning cases in Christian courts, and the ceremony of conversion consisting solely in cutting off the topknot worn by the Pagan Kols. However this may be, the fact remains that several Kols were recently tried before the Deputy-Commissioner on such charges as rioting and attempting to rescue prisoners from the police. They were convicted and severely punished, and the magistrate, in passing judgment, made some very strong remarks upon the Jesuit missionaries and their converts. The Jesuits strenuously deny the justice of these remarks, and assert that the magistrate has been proceeding throughout on an entire misapprehension of the facts. They maintain that the Kols are a peaceful, law-abiding people, that they have been driven to desperation by the exactions of the landlords, and that the strictures passed upon themselves are absolutely groundless. It is understood that the convictions will be carried, on appeal, to a higher Court, and that the Roman Catholic Archbishop has taken up the cause of his subordinates and made representations to the Bengal Government. It is therefore too soon to pronounce definitely on the merits of the case. Meanwhile the district appears quiet.

Within the last few months a new trade has arisen in India, and has attained extraordinary dimensions. About two years ago a German chemist, Dr. Schlunk, discovered that excellent butter could be made from cocoanut milk. It is, according to a Bombay newspaper, pleasant to taste and smell, of a clear, whitish colour, singularly free from acids, easily digestible, and an incomparably healthier and better article of diet than the cheap poor butters and oleomargarines of European markets.

The manufacture is carried on in Germany, where one firm turns out from 3,000 to 4,000 kilogrammes daily. The cocoanuts required are imported from India, chiefly Bombay, in large and increasing numbers, and the trade seems likely to attain still greater importance.

It is proposed to have manœuvres early next month for the purpose of testing the defensibility of Calcutta against attack from the sea.

A Madras telegram states the collector of Malabar has returned from the Island of Minicoy, in the Maldives, whither he went for the purpose of inquiring into the recent éméute there. The islanders were fined 1,179 rupees, and nine of the ringleaders were deported to Calicut.

Sir R. Sandeman's mission to the Zhob country continues to progress successfully. The Mahsud Waziri and Zalle Khel Jirgahs have come in and expressed willingness to serve the Government. As these tribes hold the Gomal Pass their loyalty is important.

A Lahore paper mentions as an instance of the gradual advance of civilisation that Akbar Khan, Chief of Lalpoora, who recently sent for a photographer from Peshawur, has signified his intention to learn photography, and has detained the photographer for the purpose.

ALLAHABAD, JAN. 18.

The match between Mr. Vernon's team and an eleven of the North-Western Provinces was concluded to-day, and resulted in a victory for the visitors. The second innings of the home team, whose overnight score was 152 for eight wickets, closed this morning for 160. The visitors thus had 68 runs to get to win, and, owing to the admirable bowling and fielding of their opponents, a close and exciting finish was witnessed, the English team winning by only three wickets.

On Monday next Mr. Vernon's team will play an eleven of Northern India.

LUCKNOW, JAN. 19.

Prince Albert Victor and party arrived here yesterday. A loyal address of welcome was presented to his Royal Highness by representatives of the province, and the Prince afterwards opened a new female hospital in connection with the Dufferin Fund. His Royal Highness then proceeded to visit the principal sights in Lucknow, and subsequently attended a garden party in the park. In the evening he was present at a grand fête given in his honour by the Talookdars, at which there were brilliant illuminations and a display of fireworks.

THE CHIN FIELD FORCE.

RANGOON, JAN. 18.

The health of the Chin-Lushai field force continues very bad. The Rangoon Times, which has a correspondent with the expedition, states that of 150 sappers only 40 are able to work. A reinforcement of 90 King's Own Scottish Borderers left Kan on January 1 for the front. Seventeen of them were disabled by sickness in the first three days' marching. The Europeans and Goorkhas have suffered more severely from sickness than the Madras sepoys, and the Punjab coolies have suffered most of all. It is alleged that their sickness is largely due to the exposure and hardships they underwent in Calcutta. The troops have no tents, as, owing to the difficulty of transport, it is impossible to carry tents. At present the force is advancing through the territory of the Boungshe tribe. The movement against the Tashons has been suspended. On the 10th a deputation from the Yokwas, a branch of the Boungshes, met Brigadier-General Symons and accepted his terms. According to the Rangoon Times the deputation was informed that if the General's terms were not accepted every village in the Yokwa territory would be burned, the crops destroyed, and the inhabitants hunted down like wild beasts. Moreover, if a single shot were fired hereafter at the troops, the nearest village would at once be burned without further inquiry. On the 12th inst., Second Lieut. Foster, of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, was shot dead from a Chin ambushade. The nearest village, Kumlok, was destroyed the same evening. Brigadier-General Symons telegraphs, in reply to an offer of further assistance from General Gordon, that the expedition was so well found before starting that nothing is now needed, and that he cannot employ more fighting men, owing to the difficulty of feeding them. Owing, also, to the fact of the senior officers being invalidated, Major Storey, King's Own Scottish Borderers, is now second in command.

Lieut.-General Sir C. G. Arbuthnot, K.C.B., commander-in-chief of Madras, has arrived at Rangoon, and will proceed with General Gordon and Brigadier Prothero to visit the Chin field force. The Tushon column has had a skirmish with the insurgents at Manilon. Captain Sewell, of the 1st Battalion of the Norfolk Regiment, was severely wounded.

The Pagan and Myingyan districts are in a somewhat unsatisfactory condition.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 19.

The Lushai force continues to push on. The health of the troops has much improved and the cholera has disappeared.

Two months' supplies for the northern column are now collected at Lower Lungleh. A reconnoitring party has advanced to Lakbere and captured Lalthuama, a chief implicated in the murder of Lieutenant Stewart. A fine of 100 pigs, ten goats, twenty fowls, thirty muskets, and 100 baskets of grain has been inflicted. The chief will be detained at Fort Lungleh till the fine is paid.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JAN. 18.

It is announced that the concession of four square miles of oil-producing land in Upper Burma has been granted to a syndicate, consisting of Sir Lepel Griffin, Captain Patton, Mr. Keely, and Mr. Robert Gordon, chief engineer to the Siamese Government.

The Siam Boundary Commission has arrived at Tasangh, on the Salween river. The commission has met several Siamese outposts, by whom it was civilly received. The commission has now divided into small working parties.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 19.

Various items of news come from Afghanistan, but none of any interest or importance. The Ameer's movements are still doubtful, as also is his choice of a new envoy to the Indian Government.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 19.

The Chinese Amban is now at Darjeeling with a large following, and negotiations for the settlement of the Sikkim difficulty are proceeding satisfactorily. It is possible that the Amban may visit Calcutta shortly.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

ABKARI IN BOMBAY.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Minute on Abkari which Lord Reay has recently drawn up in response to a paragraph in the address of the Presidency Association is too long to be reprinted in full, and perhaps too technical to be read with ease by any but those who have made a special study of the question. It will almost suffice here to say that the Governor wrestles vigorously with Mr. Caine's statistics, shows serious flaws in his data of comparison, and invites to the conclusion that the increase in the recorded consumption of country liquor during five years was ten per cent. only, and not forty per cent., as Mr. Caine had calculated. We must leave the Member for Barrow to justify his own arithmetic, and pass on to refer to at least one important declaration which Lord Reay makes in the Minute before us. The declaration is that the farming system must be improved until it can be wholly abandoned. The phrase is not perhaps happily chosen, for abandonment scarcely seems to come in the most natural succession to improvement. His Excellency evidently means that such reforms in the farming system as are effected must have as their ultimate aim to "reform it altogether." It is necessary to point out that, partial and inconclusive as certain changes that have lately been made in the department may be, they certainly point the way to radical changes which when they come will be welcomed. The districts affected by these changes are the districts round which criticism and censure have so freely played during the past three years—those namely of Thana and Kolaba. Some salient points in their Abkari history have been frequently referred to in these columns. It will be remembered that two years ago a sudden change was made in the conditions under which the spirit farms in these districts were let. It was found that under the system which then prevailed it would be impossible for the contractors to sell honestly at the price fixed by Government without making a loss. The system was therefore altered, and in the new contracts nothing was said about the price at which liquor was to be sold, nor was the vicious principle of a minimum guarantee adhered to. The principal feature of the new plan was that the farms were given to the approved tenderers who offered the highest percentage over and above the still-head duty on the spirits issued to them from the public distillery.

THE LAST OF THE PECCANT MAMLUUDARS.

(Times of India.)

We have now, it may be hoped, heard the last of the peccant Mamludars. The Government of India have sent a final reply to the last appeals for redress. These appeals were forwarded to the Government of India by the Government of Bombay. There is "no reason," writes Mr. C. J. Lyall, "given in your letter why they have been forwarded. They have, however, been considered by the Governor-General in Council, and I am to communicate the conclusion at which he has arrived." The Governor-General, then, is "not prepared to reopen the case of Shankar Balchundra Bapat, or to reconsider the case of Venkatesh Krishna Dravid. There was no pressure used to induce this latter to pay. He paid money to secure an office for which he had been deliberately held to be not eligible until he had given proof of fitness in a subordinate post. In other words, he volunteered a payment 'to escape the results of previous misconduct' or mistakes." The devil is said to quote Scripture when it suits his purposes, and in the same way the Government of India have been venturesome enough to quote Sir Raymond West's Minute against the Mamlutdars. Sir Raymond, we are told, describes the case of Yeshwant Ballal Tambe as one in which "mere acquiescent connivance verged into active complicity." Mr. Lyall, however, is instructed to add:—"If, notwithstanding these expressions of opinion, the Government of Bombay thinks that there are any special reasons for reconsideration of this case, those reasons should be stated clearly and fully for the information of the Governor-General in Council." Balwant Narayan Dabir has, it seems, addressed a copy of his memorial direct to the Governor-General in Council, which memorial the Government of India are unable to entertain. This, then, settles the whole matter with the possible exception of Yeshwant Ballal Tambe, whose punishment may perhaps be modified if the Government of Bombay are able to put forward any special reasons for the reconsideration of his case. We trust that we have now heard the last of that famous Statute 49, George III., cap. 126, by which the penalty of dismissal was from the first rendered absolutely necessary.

THE RUPEE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The persistence with which people appear to cling to the belief in some remedy for the appreciation of gold, other than the natural and commonplace one of reducing the demand for it, is unreasonable, but it has a pathetic side to it. The distress that is experienced is dimly felt by the sufferers to be connected with this appreciation of gold and the consequent depreciation of silver and all other commodities; and the sufferers seek blindly for heroic remedies. They will not look patiently for the causes, but cry out for any method of release from the effects, however empirical. Hence a movement like that we are told of in America, for enhanced coinage of silver, when if people would reflect they would understand that to further gorge the State treasuries with silver, which no one will use, cannot in the slightest degree affect the constant demand for and appreciation of gold. From the same cause comes faith in quack nostrums, like that of which we have lately heard, some mysterious scheme which shall restore the rupee to a value of one-and-ninepence off-hand, presumably by some juggling in the money market. Undoubtedly, there may arise temporary causes which shall for a moment arrest the depreciation of silver, or even raise it considerably in value for a time. As in 1866-60, there may be a great increase in the output of gold, consequent on the discovery of new gold-fields. Or there may come a great demand for silver in India, consequent on sudden and large expenditure—say upon railways, or on a great war. Such movements, however, can only be spasmodic. It cannot be too often repeated that the appreciation of any commodity is a matter of demand, and so long as the whole world demands gold as the only commodity which it will use for currency purposes, so long must gold continue to be appreciated, at the expense not of silver only, but of all other commodities the production of which is not restricted in the same degree as that of gold. But it is only of such commodities that the price must continue to fall. Gold will not become appreciated in respect of ivory, for instance, because the production of that commodity is even more restricted than the production of gold. An extensive outburst of the vine disease, or of the potato disease, would have the result of arresting the appreciation of gold as regards wine or potatoes. A failure of the output of coal would cause coal to become dearer instead of becoming continually cheaper. However valuable the sovereign might be, measured in silver or in corn, it would become less valuable than hitherto, measured in coal, in wine, or in potatoes.

THE HEALTH OF BRITISH SOLDIERS IN INDIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

There can be no doubt that the ratio of deaths from enteric fever amongst the British troops in India has been slightly on the increase during the last two or three years, and we should be glad to see some endeavour being made to successfully combat this great evil. It is possible that the increase is in some measure due to the augmented strength of the British Forces in India since 1885, which necessitated a larger proportion of young men being sent out; but, even if this be the case, it is evident that the evil is none the less great, and still requires every effort being made to mitigate the causes which act so unfavourably on the health of the British Army in India. Experienced medical officers have given it as their opinion that the present dietetic system is a predisposing cause of enteric fever, and we think their opinion is entitled to the fullest consideration. We do not say that the soldier's diet in India is not sufficient or of good quality, but the manner of preparing it for the table, and also the hours for its consumption, seem open to objection. In addition to the rations supplied by Government, we would strongly recommend the compulsory issue, at the men's own expense, of a ration of cocoa to all soldiers going on parade in the early morning, or on sentry at night-time. The expense would be little, and hardly felt by the soldier, especially now when he is paid his shilling at the current rate of exchange. The good results to be obtained from the introduction of such a ration would speedily be made apparent, even to the soldier himself, who is, we regret to say, generally very careless about his own health. If, however, the soldier will not take care of himself, it is to the interest of the State to step in and preserve his health by regulations.

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER TRIBES.

(Pioneer.)

We have long held that it is of the utmost importance, in connection with the scheme of defence along our North-West Frontier, to extend British influence as much as possible over the independent tribes that hold the border land. They do not, as a rule, acknowledge the authority of the Ameer of Kabul, whose methods of government they resent, and they are numerically strong enough to resist any attack which he might make upon them. In the Khyber the Afridis and their neighbours have been quietly won over to our side; the Urakzais, further to the south, have been fairly amenable since the Jowaki Expedition; the Zaimukh clans north of Thull have not forgotten the punishment administered by General Tytler; the Kurram Valley is held by friendly tribesmen; and the Mahsud Waziris are on their best behaviour. Between the Waziri country and our outposts to the north of Beluchistan lies a large tract of country drained by the Zhob and Gomal rivers, and this is now claiming attention. Sir Robert Sandeman has been deputed to open it out from the south and to arrange for the safeguarding of the Gomal Pass on lines somewhat similar to those adopted so successfully in the Khyber. The Zhob river rises in the hills to the north of the Peshin plateau and runs due east for about 100 miles, when it takes a sharp turn northward, and some 80 miles further on falls into the Gomal river. The southern and Central part of the valley are already under the control of the Beluchistan Agency, and during the present cold weather our influence will be extended right up to the Gomal. The Mando Khel and other clans along the route have already promised give every assistance, and the plan of operations is to raise among the tribesmen a small body of men who will garrison certain posts and be responsible for the safeguarding of any roads which may be made. In traversing the country Sir Robert Sandeman will take with him a strong escort, more with the purpose of impressing the people than of overcoming any opposition, for it does not seem likely that the least hostility will be shown. The movement will be carried out in connection with the annual reliefs, and can thus scarcely be said to partake of the nature of an expedition. A mountain battery, a regiment of cavalry, and one of infantry under orders to return to India will march by way of the Zhob Valley and the Gomal Pass to Dera Ismail Khan, and the force relieving them will in their turn enter the Gomal and proceed southwards up the Zhob river. The tribesmen will thus be familiarised with the passage of troops through their country, and they will realise that our communication with Quetta and Peshin is not confined to the southern routes through Loralai, the Harnai, and the Bolan. The districts immediately to the west of the Suleiman Range will thus be dominated, and it may hereafter be possible to open a good alternative route to Peshin. The handling of tribes along the Gomal will be a delicate business, as so far our attempts at exploration of that important Pass have not met with success; but Sir Robert Sandeman's is a name to conjure with all along the border, and he is not likely to fail in any negotiations which he may enter upon. With the whole of the Zhob Valley under our control and the Gomal Pass held by tribal levies another great stride will have been made towards establishing the complete safety of the North-West Frontier. The Tochi route from Bannu to Ghazni will then alone remain to be dealt with, and this will doubtless be taken in hand in due course.

A VISIT TO THE HYDERABAD GOLD-FIELDS.

"J. R.," an English traveller at present touring in India, has sent the Times of India an account of a visit paid to the Hyderabad Gold Fields:—

Bodinni is about thirty miles from the frontier of the Madras Presidency, which is divided from that of the Nizam's Dominions by the river Toongabudra, and is situated in a cup-like hollow of the Downs: not, however, soft and velvety as at home, but stony and rugged, with but scanty covering of spear-grass, and the metamorphic schistose rocks cropping out in well-defined strata running mostly north and south. On inquiring I found that the principal work that is at present going on is that of clearing out the debris from the old irregular shafts or pits that had been excavated by the ancient gold-seekers; but at what period is not known. The varying depths of these shafts would indicate that, proceeding without reference to the seasons, they were often driven out and had to abandon the work when the rains commenced, and, having no knowledge of hydraulics, preferred commencing de novo to baling out the water with their primitive appliances.

We commenced at shaft No. 1, which we descended to a depth of 80 feet, the quartz lode being plainly visible on the north and south wall, gradually increasing in width from one to four feet, or an average of three from top to bottom. At this depth a winze or shoot had been driven, going below shaft No. 2, about thirty yards' distant, and then again another winze back towards No. 1, the total depth of shafts indicating about 160 feet: scoping had also been freely carried on, evidencing method as to the extractions of paying ore when found. Myriads of bats were flying about in these subterranean passages, threatening to extinguish our candles, and cockroaches innumerable, giving rise to the conjecture as to whether the bats lived upon them, or vice versa. Shafts 3 and 4 upon the same line are cleared out to a depth of 60 to 80 feet, and no doubt continue to the same depth as indicated in shafts 1 and 2. Some very good assays have been obtained from the quartz from each of these four shafts.

A short distance (about a mile) from these workings is a small stream or sprut, and upon it is erected the trial battery capable of crushing and washing 100 tons a day, and near it the assay house, presided over by a gentleman from the London School of Mines. The following afternoon we again saddled en route for the most important workings at Wundulli, distant across country about twenty-five miles.

We stopped on our way at "Joopdore," where we examined some old workings, the deepest, however, up to the present only having been cleared fifty feet; but some very good quartz with pyrites is being taken out.

At Wundulli the most extensive working is being conducted, some forty-five pits having been more or less opened out, some to a depth of 120 feet, and most as much as fifty. The quartz reefs vary here very much in colour and density—from white vitreous, amethystine-blue vitreous, to dark blue, close and hard; all have, however, assayed fairly well, some giving as much as 3 oz. to the ton. There is no water here or at Bodinni in any quantity during the dry weather, but the ground in both places is so situated that with comparatively little expense in bunding sufficient could be secured during the rains for all purposes of "slicing" and washing any quantity of ore.

At Wundulli the formation of the rocks is much the same as at Bodinni, except that here the lodes, after dipping north and south, come suddenly to a break and dip east and west, showing considerable convulsions in nature, which, however, is in strict conformity with the general strike of the country.

In this neighbourhood have been discovered a number of mullackers or mortars from 6 to 18 inches diameter, made of porphyric granite, together with mullars or beaters, which were doubtless used by the ancient workers to pound the quartz previous to washing or blowing in order to leave the ore. Some of these mullars are of immense size, and must have been brought from a considerable distance, and would indicate having been used as rollers. Sometimes, on the face of the Native hard trap rock are found a considerable number of these basins or hollows varying from six to twelve inches in diameter and from three to six inches deep, worn quite smooth by the constant pounding. Leaving Wundulli early the following morning we went to Joopadoor, about four miles distant, where again some more works are being carried on, twenty or more pits being opened out, from some of which specimens of quartz carrying small nuggets of visible gold have been found. Should the quartz in bulk from these various fields only bear out a favourable comparison to the assays, the Government of his Highness may before long look to receive a very important addition to their revenue, and the shareholders of the Hyderabad Deccan Company good dividends.

Nothing has, I believe, been yet settled as to Royalty between the Company and the Government; but, in the interests of both, I would suggest that it would be impolitic to "weight the horse that has to run the race." The company have about 1,000 coolies daily at work upon these gold-fields; and as soon as the old workings are cleared out, and the deeper and hitherto untouched quartz is brought about to the surface, and the mill, some interesting discoveries may be looked for.

THE AFGHAN ARMY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The whole of the Amir's army at present numbers about 50,000 men, and for these the workshops in Kabul have so far been able to turn out annually about two cartridges for each man, each cartridge having to be made by hand. Mr. Thomas B. Pyne has succeeded in creating in Kabul two machines for making solid drawn Martini-Henry cartridges, which are capable of turning out 10,000 cartridges per hour. He has also got from one of the very best firms in England the whole of the plant for making Martini-Henry rifles, and the whole of this machinery is set up in Kabul at the present time. Not only this, but there are two English mechanics in Kabul now, both specialists, one in cartridge making and the other in the manufacture of rifle barrels. The whole of these works are in Kabul to-day, but so far not a single cartridge or a single rifle barrel has been turned out. Mr. Pyne has just gone now to England to bring out some more plant; he is due in Kabul a month after the next Moslem fast of Ramzan. When he returns the workshops will be put in full swing without delay. Afghanistan has for a very long time past been a most important factor of consideration in the foreign policy of India up to the present time, when ammunition has been made by hand, and 100,000 rounds has been the maximum that could be turned out annually. Surely, when once the workshops are opened in Kabul, and are making solid-drawn cartridges at the rate of 20,000 per hour (two machines), then, as a factor in our foreign policy, the Afghan army will be of greatly-enhanced value.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 1.)

PROFOUND sorrow, says the Englishman, has been caused in Calcutta by the death, under very sad circumstances, of Mr. Donald Alex. Dickson, of the firm of Messrs. Norman Brothers. The deceased, it is believed, had been suffering from morbid mental excitement, and on Friday last he drove out to Ballyganj in a ticca gharry, and there shot himself with a pistol which he had procured in the course of the day at a shop in Calcutta. Needless to say the tragic event has cast a gloomy feeling over local sporting circles, in which "Donny" Dickson has been of one the best known figures for several years past. He was a skilful rider, and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was only thirty-one years of age.

A CALCUTTA paper says:—Mr. Stuart proposes to run a special train from Calcutta on an early date, to be agreed upon by a majority of those subscribing. This train will consist of thirty cars of the East Indian Railway, each to contain goods and samples of any firms who desire to push their business in the North-West Provinces. In order to counteract the influence of Bombay, the train will stop at all large stations on the line, remaining for two days at the larger stations, and one day at the smaller ones; at less important stations it would stop a few hours only. The time occupied in running the train and halting at stations would amount to about twenty-one days. Firms dealing direct with the public may send two European assistants in charge of each car to effect sales at the railway station. Mr. Stuart recommends those firms whose system of business is of a wholesale nature to send two assistants likewise, one to remain in charge of the car and the other to canvas among the local dealers. Mr. Stuart, who puts forward this scheme, is an officer of an Indian railway who has obtained leave of absence.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Statesman:—It is now upwards of a month since three leopards have been infesting the village of Somrah and the adjacent places under the jurisdiction of thanna Balagurh in the district of Hooghly. These villages abound in jungles, which are not in the outskirts, but in the very heart of them, and the tigers have taken shelter in some of these jungles. The inhabitants of the villages are very much terrified. Some cows and goats have already been carried away, but the tigers have not tasted as yet human blood.

MADRAS.

H.E. LORD CONNEMARA, on tour, held an open-air durbar at Bezwada on Dec. 30th, and afterwards visited the mission bungalow where he expressed his great interest in mission work. He received deputations from the inhabitants of Masulipatam, Guntar, and Bezwada. His Excellency made a long speech, going into great detail about the Kistna Bridge and the East Coast Railway, with extensions to Masulipatam and Madras. He hopes the Madras extension will be a broad gauge, connecting the Madras Railway with the east coast at Bezwada without utilising the Tirupati-Nellore branch. The Madras Railway has applied for this part of the scheme.

THE British India steamer Java, which had put to sea, returned on the afternoon of Dec. 30th, and anchored outside the harbour. She signalled that she experienced a heavy cyclone to the northward after leaving Madras, and was unable to proceed on her voyage. The captain was injured.

THE Commercial and Land Mortgage Bank pays a dividend for the past half-year, at the rate of ten per cent. per annum in addition. It is expected that the reserve funds will be raised to 3½ lakhs.

DR. CLARKE, in the Madras Journal of Literature and Science, Vol. IX., says rubies are found in Mysore, and coarse specimens were brought to him from Corundam Mines of Banavar and Goribidnur. Messrs. Streeter and Co., the celebrated jewellers of New Bond-street, London, have, a Bangalore paper learns, applied to the Dewan for the exclusive privilege of prospecting for five years in certain selected areas in Mysore territory.

THOUGH there have been some very good showers of rain lately, apparently Government is not satisfied that this has averted the chances of scarcity of grain in the southern parts of this Presidency. Collectors and other Revenue officials have just received orders directing those, who during the Christmas holidays are away from their stations, to return to Headquarters at once, and to inspect and report personally upon the present state of the crops in their districts, and what they estimate will be the outturn.

BOMBAY.

(Jan. 3.)

SURGEON K. H. MISTRY has been appointed to act as Civil Surgeon of Broach.

THE Bank of Bombay on Saturday raised its rate of interest on demand loans on Government paper to 6 per cent.

MISS ANNIE WALKER, L.M. and S., House Surgeon, Kama Hospital, has been allowed a month's privilege leave.

THE Poona Observer says that Colonel Beecher, Equerry to his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, has been offered and has accepted the post of Military Secretary to Sir George Greaves, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army.

THE following telegram, dated Dec. 26, 1889, from the Government of India, Foreign Department, is published:—"Following telegram received from Ambassador, Constantinople, dated Dec. 23. Begins—Quarantine on arrivals from Persian Gulf reduced to five days.—Ends."

THE VERY REV. FATHER CALLEJO has been nominated Vicar-General of the Diocese of Damaun, and Vicar of the Portuguese Cathedral at Mazagon, an appointment which, it is said, reflects credit on the Bishop of Damaun, and will give general satisfaction, for it was for a long time past wished that a European priest should be placed in charge of the post.

THE season reports of the Bombay Presidency during the past week are summarised in the following general remarks:—"Rain wanted for late crops in parts of the Deccan and Southern Maratha Country. Jowari in parts of Bijapur and late crops generally in one taluka of Nasik and Poona and in parts of Khandesh and Belgaum suffering for want of moisture. Jowari in two talukas of Poona blighted and in one of Sholapur diseased, and crops in one taluka of Upper Sind Frontier slightly damaged by locusts. Standing crops otherwise good except cotton in three talukas of Broach. Harvesting of early crops and sowing of late crops continue in several districts. Opium sowing progressing in Baroda. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Khandesh, Nasik, and Dharwar. Agricultural stock poor in one taluka of Nasik."

THREE or four tigers have been sighted by shikaries in the hills around Lanowli. Good tiger shooting is to be had at Dewgor behind the well-known hill of Sakhorpathar. Shikaries have been bringing in information for the last day or two of raids made on cattle in the villages in close proximity to Thorn Jamboli, Lowgar and the Curunder Jungle. On Friday a party went out after one at Lowgar, but they were unfortunate as stripes broke through the beat and made off towards Curunder Jungle. Pig, Bakeri and Sambhar are very plentiful in the jungles about the hill.

THE Bombay Guardian is delighted that the medical students of the London hospitals have been taken in hand, and that 2,500 invitation letters have been addressed to them in November:—"The importance of getting sound medical men cannot be over estimated, considering the powerful influence they have upon the life of the community. The danger of a materialistic race of doctors is well illustrated by the strong entrenchments the horrible doctrines of the necessity of vice, and the benefits of alcoholic liquor have found in their midst."

A new hotel, the Belle Vue, has been opened at Lanowli on the Poona road, not far from the railway station, which will supply for that locality a want which has been met at Khandalla by the well-known Khandalla Hotel. The building is new and commodious, and furnished in a style far superior to anything hitherto to be met with in an hotel on the Ghauts. The wines and other supplies have been procured from well-known Bombay houses as a guarantee of quality. The hotel is well situated on an elevation which secures air and ventilation.

MR. CHARLES BRADLAUGH was on Tuesday morning presented with an address by the members of the Bombay Secular Society. The address was presented in the name of the "Freethinkers of India," and congratulated him on expunging from the English Statute Book the oaths test and removing the last shackles of the English Press laws. Mr. Bradlaugh replied very briefly, saying that it would have been impossible to have carried the Oaths Bill in the English Parliament if there had not been a general disposition to recognise a higher measure of civil and religious liberty. In England he had to fight because there were laws hostile to his opinions, but in India the laws were reasonably fair to all.

THE INDIA OFFICE RECORDS.

LORD HARRIS presided, on Friday evening last, at a meeting held at the Society of Arts, Adelphi, on the occasion of a Paper being read by Mr. F. C. DANVERS, Registrar and Superintendent of Records in the India Office, on the results of his examination, during the last six years, of the records relating to India and the East India Company, now in the possession of the Secretary of State for India. Those present included Sir Owen Burne, Sir W. W. Hunter, Sir Alfred Lyall, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Owen, Sir George Birdwood, Sir Charles Bernard, Sir Halliday Macartney, Sir Joseph Fayrer, Mr. Seton-Carr, and Sir J. Danvers.

MR. DANVERS began his paper by saying that the careful custody of public records was an unmistakable sign of advanced civilisation. Measured by this standard, the boasted civilisation of the nineteenth century would seem to be little in advance of what was now known to have existed in Nineveh thousands of years ago, and he described the pains which were taken, as was shown in the carefully-preserved libraries at Koyunjik, by inscriptions in baked clay, ascribed to Sennacherib and his grandson, to hand down records of historical events, and he also referred to the Egyptian records on stone, papyrus, biblos and waxen tablets for the same end. To the durable nature of the materials used by the ancient writers might be attributed the existence of these records, and similarly it might be said of some of the earliest records of the East India Company now extant that their preservation was in a great measure due to the excellence of the paper on which they were written. It would, he said, require no prophetic vision to enable one to assert that the materials employed in recent years, under the influence of economical motives, would require the greatest care in handling to insure their existence for the use of quite an early posterity, and but for the extension of printing and binding the records of the latter part of the Victorian era would have but little chance of being preserved beyond a comparatively moderate number of years. He insisted that, as it could not reasonably be claimed that public records were the absolute property of any generation, who were the trustees for the time being of an entailed estate, it was the duty of the public to preserve that property and hand it down enriched by the records of each period. Dealing then with the Indian records he quoted Mr. James Grant Duff ("History of the Mahrattas") that the "records of the East India Company's governments in India are, probably, the best historical materials in the world; there we find the reasons for every undertaking, the steady rules intended for conduct, the hurried letter from the scene of action, the deliberations of the council, the separate opinions of the members composing it, and their final judgment. The scrutiny, censure, or approval of the court of directors from a remote situation, and after a long interval, bring to recollection all that was done and all that was speculated, what has occurred in India in the meantime, and what opinions have stood the test of events." It might reasonably have been expected, Mr. Danvers said, that, with such exceptional materials at hand, the authors of histories of India would have availed themselves of the opportunity open to them of obtaining exact information for themselves at first hand; but this did not seem to have been the case. The first historians evidently wrote from very defective or incorrect information, and subsequent writers had plagiarised from one another without acknowledgment, and without testing the accuracy of the statements thus adopted by them. It was scarcely to be wondered at that, as had been observed by an eminent Anglo-Indian, there did not exist, at the present day, any history of British India which is trustworthy and complete in its facts, and which at the same time possesses the essential quality of literary excellence. The materials necessary for the compilation of a history of the East India Company, however, existed in the India Office records, and although there were some serious defalcations amongst those of early date, they would be found to contain almost everything that might be required for that purpose as soon as they had been properly classified and arranged. This was being done, and, although the work was only being commenced, sufficient insight had already been obtained to enable a fairly comprehensive account to be given of the extent and deficiencies of the records. When taking in hand the classification of the India Office records it soon became apparent that those of earlier date had previously been but very imperfectly catalogued. Some, indeed, seemed never to have been catalogued at all, while in the case of others no attempt had been made to assign them their true place in the list of these archives. An important step towards classifying and arranging some of the miscellaneous old records relating to the East India Company was taken by Sir George Birdwood, in 1878, in connection with which work he drew up a concise and interesting memorandum on the history of the Indian trade and the early proceedings of the East India Company. This report has been recently reprinted, and further valuable information had been added to it by its author. To the examination then made of these old records might, no doubt, be in a great measure attributed the fact that they were still in existence, while the classification and arrangement then effected had proved an invaluable aid to their incorporation in proper order with the other early records still extant. The earliest records of the East India Company dated from 1596, and referred to the period immediately preceding the establishment of the company. There were copies of two documents dated in that year, one relating to the expedition fitted out by Sir Robert Dudley, and others, in 1596, consisting of three ships under the command of Captain Benjamin Wood, who took letters from Queen Elizabeth to the Emperor of China, but "not one of the company ever returned to give an account of the rest." The other was an account of the first successful enterprise of the Dutch in the Eastern seas, set on foot in the year 1595 by certain private merchants in Amsterdam. This latter document was from a compilation by a committee specially appointed in 1877, just previously to closing the affairs of the British Government in Java, to examine the treaties between the Dutch Government and the Chiefs and Princes in the Eastern Islands from the first establishment of their connections and powers in those seas. After this followed the records proper of the London East India Company, and the earliest of these consisted of court minutes, the first volume of which, extending from the 22nd September, 1599, to the 10th of August, 1603, was printed, by permission of the Secretary of State for India in Council, by the late Mr. Henry Stevens, under the title of "The Dawn of British Trade to the East Indies." Of the earlier records of the East India Company there was an evident deficiency in the documents now existing. For the first few years of their enterprise they had no very efficient mode of keeping their papers, for at a court of committees held on the 6th of July, 1607, "It was thought fit that all letters from and to India, and all answers thereof, be entered into a book and coated for future memorie as occasion may fall out"; and at a court held on the 6th of October, 1609, it was further resolved as follows:—

"And for as much as it is esteemed very needful that all letters to and from the company, and also material writings, be coated and kept in a register ready for every occasion, and that some fit man may be given for that business, or for any other employment of the company about his Maties. Court or otherwise. It was now ordered and agreed that Mr. Eadmd. Doe do confer and agree with some fit and faithful man for the doing and effecting of this, or any other the company's affaires wherein he shall be employed."

Accordingly, on the 17th of the same month, "Francis Sadler was admitted and sworn servant of the company for the registering of sundry letters and other writings fit to be coated, registered, and kept for the use of the company. And further to doe such other their services upon which they shall think good to employ him." Mr. Francis Sadler was not a good record keeper, for in 1614 "certain journals" were wanted which could not then be found, and it was consequently ordered that all journals should first be written in the company's books before being lent to any man, and that none were to use them without the consent of the committees. The missing journals, which had been lent, and could not be found, were to be searched for. Some months later, in August, 1615, a further resolution was passed that none of the company's journals were thereafter to be lent "before copies of them be entered in their books, whereby the journals themselves have been lost to the great prejudice of the company, and some things known which are not fit to be published." After being entered they were to be "delivered only to some principal persons of the company that shall desire the same;" but all other persons wishing to inspect them were to be "satisfied with coming and seeing them in the offices or otherwise a copy of them in the books." In 1618, Mr. Ellam, a bookkeeper in the company's service, who appeared to have also had charge of their records, was "ordered not to allow any letters or journals to be carried out of the house without special permission, but those belonging to the company to have leave to read them in the counting-house." Thus it was to be seen that precautions were from time to time taken to prevent the loss of the company's journals and records; but notwithstanding these precautions, when the union was effected between the London Company and the new or English East India Company the records of the former were found in great disorder, and many were missing. An endeavour was made to collate these, and they had been collected under many heads, many without date, and some imperfect. In 1858 the then registrar stated that there were vast quantities of books and papers of no use; 21 tons were sold as waste paper, and realised £158. The papers had suffered from removal, as at the time of the Fire of London in 1666 books, papers, and treasures were removed to Stepney and Mile-end and were brought back when the danger ceased. In 1859 when the warehouse in New-street, where the bulk of the papers were kept, was required by the Storekeeper-General 31 loads of 20,000 volumes were removed thence to Leadenhall-street, and in the same year there was a further sale of nearly two tons of documents as waste paper. These sales were added to in 1860 by Sir Charles Wood, then Secretary of State for India, who gave directions that "all useless records in the India Office in Cannon-row and in Leadenhall-street were to be destroyed or otherwise disposed of, and in consequence 317 tons of books and papers of these Indian records were sold, and the sale realised £3,095 16s. This destruction was due, to some extent, to the circumstance that duplicate copies of most documents existed subsequently to 1784. This was not the end of the destruction of records, for the act was repeated in 1877 on the removal of the records from Victoria-street, and Mr. Danvers said that it was much to be feared that in the endeavour to get rid of only useless records those destroyed, especially in the earlier years of destruction, had not been sufficiently examined before being condemned, and that thus documents of great historical interest shared the fate of others which had ceased to possess any sufficient value to justify their preservation. Mr. Danvers appealed to the Press to make it known that the India Office now desired to make the records as complete as possible, and that it was desired to learn where documents were—a remark which was received with Cheers. He then proceeded to deal at length with the history disclosed by the papers in hand, remarking that it had been customary to date the commencement of English trade with India from the beginning of the 17th century; but the first direct trade of Eastern produce to England was conducted with the Levant, whither as early as 1511 ships used to sail from London and Southampton, whence there was "an ordinarie and usual trade to Sicilia, Candre, Chio, and somewhiles to Cyprus, as also to Tripolis and Baratti into Syria," bringing back "pepper, cinnamon and some other spices," as well as general merchandise. The speaker traced out the increase of English trade with India, the granting of letters patent and charters from that of Queen Elizabeth in 1581 to Sir Edward Osborne, Thomas Smith, Richard Steper, and William Garrett, "for the trade into the dominions of the Grand Turk," and gave the dates of the different interesting events which occurred over the centuries in the consolidation of British power in the East. The history thus given was so voluminous that Mr. Danvers asked to be excused from reading all he had prepared, and in conclusion he called attention to the maps and charts possessed with these records, and said that the first land surveys of India were no doubt made in connection with military operations, and the land survey and mapping of British India advanced with the acquisitions of territory. Major Kennell was the first to give practical shape to these surveys and had rightly been called the father of Indian geography. It was not, however, till the end of the last century that a trigonometrical survey was generally allowed to be the only accurate basis for the mapping of the country, and this work was commenced by Major Lambton, whose labours were recorded in manuscript volumes deposited in the geographical branch of the India Office Record Department. In 1823 a commencement was made with revenue and topographical surveys. The publication of the great trigonometrical and topographical surveys was executed in this country by Mr. John Walker, to whom also was entrusted in 1836 the custody of all the geographical records. In 1869 it was determined that for the future the engraving and publication of maps should be undertaken by the Surveyor-General of India, and a geographical department of the India Office was also formed for the purpose of receiving, analysing, and arranging for general reference and use all geographical and geological documents, for the distribution of maps in this country, and for transacting all business connected with the surveys and other scientific branches of the service. The maps and records handed over to the geographical department were found to be in a state of indescribable confusion and undergoing rapid deterioration, while many maps and memoirs had entirely disappeared which could never be replaced. Steps were immediately taken for repairing, classifying, and arranging what remained, and a most valuable collection of manuscript maps and other documents were now open for reference and inspection. He added that steps were being taken to make complete the records, and he described his work as the scaffolding of the monument which he trusted would be erected to the memories of those who had founded and established our Indian Empire—(cheers).

During the lecture pictures were thrown on the white sheet, showing the old and new companies' arms and the portrait of General Lord Harris, an ancestor of the chairman, holding an important command in one of the many wars which have been necessary to uphold the position held by the British against French, Dutch, and others. A picture was also shown of the old India House.

Sir WILLIAM HUNTER remarked that the very interesting lecture appeared peculiarly interesting at the present moment, when Indian affairs were becoming more and more frequently subjects of discussion in Parliament and in the public Press. He was delighted to hear that so much had been done in recent years in the India Office towards the preservation of most valuable heirlooms. The East India Company had failed in the preservation of its records, because it started as a commercial monopoly and maintained to the close of its existence the principle of relying upon the security of secrecy in preference to what it regarded as the perils of publicity. In the end, however, the Company had paid very bitterly for the adoption of that policy. He moved a cordial vote of thanks to the lecturer for an admirable paper.

Sir OWEN BURNES seconded the motion, which was carried amid cheers.

Mr. SETON KARR proposed a vote of thanks to Lord Harris for his presidency.

Sir GEORGE BIRDWOOD seconded the motion, which was adopted unanimously.

Lord HARRIS, in responding, remarked that from his point of view he sincerely joined in the vote of thanks passed to Mr. Danvers for the exceedingly interesting lecture which he had delivered, and the very valuable paper for purposes of reference which he had laid before the public. The poor East India Company had been a little hardly treated, for, after all, they should judge of the East India Company by the circumstances that affected the company and not by the circumstances which affected the public at the present time. They were in the position in which many thousand people were in London at that moment—they were merchant adventurers; and it was not the custom nowadays for merchant adventurers to be very anxious to make public all their plans. He was, therefore, inclined to gloss over a little weakness of the East India Company in keeping private the records of some of their proceedings, and perhaps in surreptitiously destroying a few records which might be awkward under certain circumstances when they knew that there was considerable commercial competition coming into the market against them, not only from private adventurers, but from Government itself—(hear, hear). These things might therefore be overwhelmed by the pride and gratitude which the country owed to the few men who had the pluck years ago to start and to carry on with great success what had proved to be the most magnificent national undertaking the world had ever seen—(cheers). It was a great pleasure to him to find himself, after more than three years, once more taking part, and not officially at present, in discussions which affected India. The subject was one in which he had a right to take an hereditary interest.

The proceedings then terminated.

INDIA: PAST AND PRESENT.*

Mr. James Samuelson, barrister-at-law, has gained for himself an honourable reputation as a literary politician by his well-informed works on Roumania and Bulgaria. His industry is undeniable, and he strives to be impartial. Unfortunately, however, he is addicted to forming his conclusions before he has collected and arranged his premises. That is to say, he starts with a ready-made faith, and then casts about for proofs and illustrations. It is a very common complaint, but one that should be carefully avoided by all who are sincerely desirous of arriving at the truth, and especially by those who propose to impart their own knowledge to their neighbours. At the same time, Mr. Samuelson has set a good example to the ruck of Globe-Trotters and Travelling Gents who hurry-scurry through India, from station to station, taking sweet counsel with low-born, half-educated, and wholly discontented Natives, who earn an unwholesome livelihood by stirring up strife and disaffection among the ignorant peasantry and artisans. These ill-omened visitors to India—a country devoid of pumps and horseponds—take no trouble to verify their supposed data, and accept as unquestionable the railings and ravings of irresponsible chattering—Bengalee graduates and undergraduates, sprung from the menial classes, and disappointed that the Government should estimate them at their true worth. To Mr. Samuelson's credit, it must be confessed that he has descended to no such ignoble arts. In too many instances, indeed, he has listened with too ready credulity to the statements of discontented Indian gentlemen, without logically collating them with the exactly opposite representations of Englishmen who could not possibly be mistaken. But praise is due to our author for his elaborate and fairly accurate delineation of India in the olden times. His materials, of course, lay ready to his hand. The work has been done again and again, until it has become even more familiar than the history of the Saxon Heptarchy previous to its passing under the patronage of the leader of a great party that hesitates to follow. Mr. Samuelson, however, is all at fault when he attempts to reflect the social system of India at the present day. To begin with, he fails to understand the notable position held by the independent Princes, whose influence over the entire peninsula is happily increasing year by year, and has, thus far, been exercised in favour of British interests. Neither does he rightly appreciate the splendid example that is now being set by Indian nobles, chiefs, landed proprietors and opulent gentlefolks, in the path of genuine civilisation and permanent progress. In India useful social instruction must permeate the population downwards, beginning from the upper strata and slowly percolating through the sauches inférieures. This is not the system that commends itself to Mr. Samuelson and men of his stamp. They would bring the dregs to the surface, and, in like manner, lower the ancient leaders of society to the grade of an English-gabbling bourgeoisie—we might almost say proletariat, except that the agricultural classes ask only to be left to themselves, as little molested by political demonstrations as by defective monsoons and withering crops. Mr. Samuelson, by the way, has rendered his substantial volume highly attractive by means of numerous woodcuts and collotype views, portraits and archaeological and ethnological presentments. He may be said altogether to have produced what promises to be a successful work of its kind. It is not original, nor does it display a wide scope of vision, but it is honest and well-meaning, and is evidently intended to do good rather than harm. So far, it differs from the generality of the pretentious labours of ordinary Radical politicians, who read little and think still less, and are only impatient to advertise themselves and their fatuous incompetence.

ENGLISH VEGETABLES AND FLOWERS IN INDIA AND CEYLON.*

Anglo-Indians, who have or desire to have gardens to make glad a little the weariness of Indian exile cannot do better than obtain a copy of Mr. Donald McDonald's excellent little book just published, which gives full information concerning every vegetable and flower worth growing in India and Ceylon. The information is concise but full, and is arranged in a handy and useful form easily understood and mastered. Whether the ambition be to raise vegetables or to rear flowers, all that the dwellers in bungalows require to know is told in this excellent compilation, which is just the sort of handy book required by them. Mr. McDonald's work deserves a large and speedy sale.

NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

By the death of Lord Napier of Magdala the Queen loses a tried and trusted servant, the army a gallant soldier, and many an Anglo-Indian a true and noble-hearted friend. He has died full of years and full of honours in the service of his country to the last, for as Constable of the Tower he was still regarded as on the Active List. He had reached an age beyond the common limit of that allowed by the Psalmist to the lives of men, and the evening of his days had brought to him the calm and repose—grateful after days of storm—but so often denied to those who had to do the rough work of England, as he had, on distant fields of trial and turmoil. But he reached his Ithaca over no summer seas. From the time he first landed in India as a subaltern to the time he left it for ever on the expiration of his office of Commander-in-Chief his life had been one of work, and often of difficult and thankless work too. He had to labour and to wait. The sudden opportunities which come to some men, and which wisely availed of lead them suddenly to fame and fortune, were not for him. For many years it was his fate to do good and great service to the State, and yet to find the State seemingly ignorant of it. He had fought and bled for his country, and promotion and staff employ came to him, as it came to others, in ordinary course; but nothing came, as it were, to take him "out of the ruck," in which dull peace in India seemed at length to have placed him. Indeed, so cheerless did the prospect seem that he seriously contemplated at one time of resigning the service altogether. With this half-formed intention he took furlough to England, but the bursting of the Mutiny storm recalled him, and then the golden opportunity came. He found his friend Outram about to take the field, and he became chief of his Staff. The good work, he did then, and afterwards with Lord Clyde in the relief and capture of Lucknow, and subsequently with Sir Hugh Rose in the Central India campaign and the pursuit and capture of Tantia Topi, need not be recapitulated here, for they are told in the brilliant pages of Malleson's history, in which the name of Napier is enshrined with those of the many heroes whom those days of storm brought to the front—names which will be for ever held sacred in the memory of Englishmen. No knight ever won his spurs on battle-field more deservingly than did Robert Napier then. In the China Expedition, which followed after the Mutiny, he was the right-hand man of the Commander, the gallant Sir Hope Grant; but even then he had still to content himself with "second place." It seemed to be his ill-starred fortune always to be in that position—never to be given the chance of being trusted with supreme command. At length the chance came with the Abyssinian Expedition, the conduct of which was given to his care. How he fulfilled the trust reposed in him by the country is on record. It has been the fashion in some quarters to sneer at that Expedition as having been a "warlike picnic," and in other quarters to condemn it as having been an extravagant waste of the taxpayers' money, for the cost, it was reported, came to some twenty millions' sterling. It was, however, no picnic trifling; it was a most difficult and delicate duty, ably and satisfactorily carried out against obstacles which were generally deemed insurmountable. The "waste" which brought down Radical censures has no right to be laid to the account of the Commander, but John Bull was at first nonplussed at learning that a great success had been obtained without what the Duke of Wellington called a "butcher's bill." The despatches told of the capture of the almost impregnable stronghold of Magdala, the release of the captives, and the complete success of the Expedition without recording a great loss of officers and men in battle. This was, no doubt, a surprise to the pugnacious, bucolic Briton; but the merit of the deed was fully recognised by the Continental Powers, amongst whom England's prestige had before been anything but high. They never believed that this country was in earnest in undertaking such an expedition, and they never believed that, if attempted, success would follow. The moral effect in Europe of Sir Robert Napier's victory was incalculable.

Raised to the peerage a further honour awaited him—that of the chief command of the Indian armies. This, must, to him, have been the crowning triumph of his life. Cavillers were found at the time to doubt the fitness of an engineer officer for such a command. It was "without precedent," said the red-tapists. But the result justified the country's choice. In all the eulogistic notices which have appeared in the English papers since his death we have been surprised to find so little said of Lord Napier's fulfilment of this trust. Some of the journals say that he "was nothing if not a soldier." This is not the case.

He had on many a hard-fought field proved himself to be,—

“A soldier firm and true
As any one above whose head

And he had “honourable scars” of severe wounds to show that he had taken his place in the front of the fight. But he was more than a mere soldier—he was an able and far-seeing administrator. The Supreme Council of India, during the time he was a member of it, was indebted to his sound and calm judgment, his ripe experience, and his patient insight into all matters brought before it for much valuable advice and aid. And the armies which he commanded during the peaceful tenure of his office found him as devoted to their well-being and comfort in camp and quarters as he was jealous of their honour as soldiers ready to do battle against any foe. It was certainly said that he brought old friends and acquaintances forward for places of responsibility or for promotion; but the men whom he thus favoured were men worthy of the honour, and not the least among them is now the present Commander-in-Chief in India, Sir Frederick Roberts. Modest and diffident ever regarding his own merits, he was always anxious to advance those who, in his opinion, deserved to be pushed forward. He was the soldier's friend, however humble the soldier's rank, and his memory as such will long be cherished in India. “He was one,” said Canon Fleming, speaking yesterday from the pulpit of the church which he was wont to attend, “who through a long and splendid career built up his character and wrought his achievements by the maxim of the text, ‘As the duty of every day required.’ Caring much for others and little for himself, he lived a very pattern of modest merit.” It is right and fitting, however, that with roll of muffled drums and all the pageantry of a soldier's funeral, his remains should be taken to-morrow to find a resting place in England's great cathedral amongst those of others of her sons who have “tried to do their duty,” and who have given proof of the truth of her poet's lines that:—

“Not once or twice in our old island story
The path of Duty was the way to glory.”

COLONEL SIR HENRY YULE, K.C.S.I., C.B.
DEC. 30, 1889.

IN MEMORIAM.

MEN's lives are mostly measured by their length,
The ultimatum being that they die.
The truer standard is the work they do,
Whereby they are enshrined in grateful hearts,
Or, higher still, whereby they live to God.
In very truth, such men do never die;
The accident of death, so called, is but
The turning of the key that opens wide
The gate of larger life for evermore,
Where faithful servants see their Master's face.
As man may judge, so this true worker lived,
And, as he closed his eyes in child-like faith,
While the weak body rests a little while,
The patient spirit waits the hour of glad reunion.

We have no room to-day to do more than call the attention of our readers to the report of the very valuable and interesting Paper read by Mr. F. C. Danvers, Superintendent of Records at the India Office, at the Society of Arts on Friday evening. We shall return to the subject, which created a somewhat animated discussion, in which Sir W. W. Hunter and Sir George Birdwood took prominent parts.

THE same want of space obliges us to hold over articles, reviews, and correspondence in type.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

The column under Brigadier Symons, numbering upwards of 2,000 fighting men, appears to be meeting with but little opposition. According to the plan of the campaign, it was to advance westwards to Yokwa, the chief village of the Southern Baungshe Chins, where it was hoped a junction would be effected with Brigadier Tregear's column. Yokwa is seven marches, though only about thirty-five miles in a straight line, from the camp at Kan. According to a telegram published recently, news had been received from Rawvan, one march from Yokwa, stating that the Yokwa Chins had submitted unconditionally. On being joined by Brigadier Tregear, whose advance, however, from the west side seems to have been delayed, Brigadier Symons proposed to send a force northwards against Ywama, the chief village of the Tashon or Northern Baungshe Chins. It may be explained that the Southern Baungshes consist of various tribes, of whom the Yokwa, Haka, and Thatta are the most important. These three tribes or villages are said to possess 280 muskets. The Northern Baungshes or Tashons are under the authority of a chief named Sonpek. Tashon Ywama, their capital, is a place of some consequence, containing over 2,000 houses. Somewhere in the village there is said to be a large cellar filled with valuables belonging to the chief—elephants' tusks, gongs, daos, and presents received from the Burmese. Higher up the hill three large figures have been cut out of the rock; two representing a woman being shamed by a man, and the third a Baluma, or shedevil. This, at least, is the story told by the Chins; but possibly some other explanation might be suggested by accurate drawings. The figures are held in great awe by the Tashon tribe.

OBITUARY.

FIELD-MARSHAL LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

After three days' illness from influenza, Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala, Constable of the Tower, died on the afternoon of the 14th inst. at twenty minutes past four, at his town residence, 63, Eaton-square.

Robert Cornelius Napier was the son of Major C. F. Napier, of the Royal Artillery, and was born in Ceylon in 1810. He was educated at the Military College, Addiscombe, entered the Bengal Engineers in 1827, and served with distinction in the Sutlej Campaign, at the conclusion of which, having attained the rank of Major, he was selected by the late Sir Henry Lawrence for the post of Engineer to the Durbar of Lahore. In this capacity he acquired a special knowledge of the Punjab and its resources. He was constantly referred to when Moolraj rebelled, on all questions connected with the reduction of Mooltan, at the siege of which he was present as sapior engineer. At its fall Major Napier, as he then was, accompanied the force commanded by General Wish to the fords of the Chenaub. Here, after a junction had been effected with the main army under Lord Gough, he served as one of Sir John Cheape's right-hand men at the battle of Goojerat.

His promotion to the rank of Colonel followed, and he was named Chief Engineer under the new Punjab administration, when he was enabled to carry out the plans which he had cherished for a long time, for covering that country with arteries of military and commercial highways, after constructing magnificent canals, destined to fertilise the arid Doab, and eventually to cause the construction of numerous public buildings, barracks, &c., requisite to the efficient administration of the province. These duties occupied him for some years, until summoned to Calcutta to assume the post of Chief Engineer of Bengal.

During the Mutiny of 1857 he served in the capacity of chief engineer with the army of Sir Colin Campbell, and the part he took in assisting in the suppression of the rebellion greatly increased his already acknowledged high reputation. At the siege of Lucknow Colonel Napier planned the bridging of the Goomtee river, which exercised so great an influence on the operations for the overthrow of the enemy. He was afterwards appointed to the command of the force employed to destroy the rebels reunited under Tantia Topee; but as Sir Hugh Rose claimed the execution of this task, Colonel Napier took the position of second in command.

The Chinese war in 1860 next engaged his services, and in that campaign he commanded a division under Sir Hope Grant, when he was present at the surrender of Peking. For his services and valour on that occasion he received the thanks of Parliament, and he was rewarded by being made a Major-General. After serving from 1861 to 1865 as military member of the Indian Council, he was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army in succession to Sir W. Mansfield.

It was, however, by the services he rendered in the Abyssinian War of 1867 that he achieved the greatest distinction. He was at this time made a Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India. King Theodore of Abyssinia was thoroughly routed in an engagement on the heights of Islamgie in April, 1868, and it was not long before the British captives whom the potentate held were released. The storming of his capital, Magdala, followed three days later, on the 13th, and King Theodore, in despair, then committed suicide. Returning to England in July, he received the thanks of Parliament, and £2,000 per annum was settled on him and his next heir for his services. His elevation to the peerage, with the title of Baron Napier of Magdala, took place on July 14 of that year; a week afterwards he was presented with the freedom of the City of London and a sword valued at 200 guineas.

In December, 1869, he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and the next month he was appointed to succeed Sir William Mansfield as Commander-in-Chief of the forces in India with the local rank of General, and in May following he was nominated fifth ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-General of India. He was appointed Governor of Gibraltar in June, 1876; in February, 1878, when a war with Russia was expected, he was selected by the Government to be the Commander-in-Chief of the British expeditionary force. The war, however, was averted by the Treaty of Berlin. In 1886 he was appointed High Constable of the Tower

On Saturday, after further conferences between the family of the late Lord Napier of Magdala and the headquarters staff at the War Office, it was decided to make an important alteration in the arrangements for the funeral to-morrow. The deceased Field-Marshal being Constable of the Tower, it was regarded as fitting that the funeral in its more public character should start from the ancient fortress; and with this object the body will be taken from Eaton-square to-morrow morning at half-past eight. The coffin will be placed on a gun-carriage, as previously arranged, and, escorted by the 12th Royal Lancers, will travel to the Tower by way of Birdcage-walk, Great George-street, Bridge-street, the Thames Embankment, Queen Victoria-street, Cannon-street, Eastcheap, and Great Tower-street. At the Tower the coffin will be received by a guard of honour of the 1st Battalion of the Coldstream Guards, and will be borne into the Tower Church—St. Peter ad Vincula—by warrant officers of the Royal Engineers, sixteen of these officers of the late Field-Marshal's service being in attendance for this purpose at the Tower and the Cathedral.

The body will remain in the church till half-past 11 o'clock, when the funeral procession will start for St. Paul's, going through Great Tower-street, Eastcheap, and Cannon-street, to the great west door, where it is to arrive at noon. The funeral service will be concluded under the dome, as there will be no ceremony at the actual graveside, and the coffin will be lowered from under the dome into the crypt at the conclusion of the service. The gravediggers were engaged on Saturday in preparing the grave, which is situated on the south-west side of the crypt, in the centre of which Lord Nelson lies buried. The graves of Lord Collingwood and Lord Northesk are close by, and a few yards further away are those of George Cruikshank, Sir Bartle Frere, and Lord Mayor Nottage. The chief mourner will be Major the Hon. R. W. Napier, son, and formerly aide-de-camp of the deceased (who now becomes the second Lord Napier of Magdala), and the military following will consist of the Royal Engineers from Chatham, 500 strong, and a strong body representing the Corps of Commissionaires (in which Lord Napier took a great and active interest), but, as at present arranged, no other troops, except the Lancers, the full Field-Marshal's escort being thus to some extent curtailed, to prevent the necessity, at one time contemplated, of bringing troops from Aldershot to fill up the required number. The streets along the route are to be kept by the 2nd Life Guards, the Royal Horse Guards, the 1st and 2nd Battalion of the Grenadier Guards, the 1st Battalion of the Scots Guards, and the 3rd London Rifles, who, with the 1st Grenadiers, will also form a guard of honour at the Cathedral, where the Yeomen of the Guard will also be on duty. On the arrival of the cortège at St. Paul's the battery at the Tower will begin to fire the seventeen minute-guns of the funeral salute, as the body is borne in by the Royal Engineers. The Commander-in-Chief has intimated his desire that the whole of the headquarters staff shall be present, and shall meet his Royal Highness in the Cathedral at half-past eleven, and amongst those who will attend are Lord Wolseley (Adjutant-General), Sir Redvers Buller, V.C. (Quartermaster-General), Lieutenant-General Brackenbury (Director of Military Intelligence), Sir George Harman (Military Secretary), Major-General Godfrey Clerk, Major-General Lyon-Fremantle, Major-General Moncrieff, Major-General Markham, R.A., Major-General Grant, R.E., Major-General Roche, Major-General Ravenhill, Lieutenant-General Sir R. Biddulph, Surgeon-General Mackinnon, Surgeon-General Reade, and Major-General Alderson. Besides these a large number of other officers are expected to be at the Cathedral, the number of applications for tickets being very great.

The Lord Mayor (Sir Henry A. Isaacs), who will be attended by his chaplain, the sword and mace bearers, and the City Marshal, and accompanied by Colonel and Alderman Sir Reginald Hanson, representing the City of London Militia Regiment, and Mr. Sheriff Harris, will be present at the funeral to-morrow.

Out of respect for the memory of the gallant Field-Marshal, who was a citizen of London, the honorary freedom, with a gold sword, having been conferred upon him in 1868, the Lord Mayor's banquet to the Court of Aldermen, which had been fixed for Tuesday evening, has been postponed.

Seats will be reserved in St. Paul's Cathedral on Tuesday for about 800 persons. The pall-bearers will be Field Marshal Sir Patrick Grant, Governor of Chelsea Hospital; General Sir L. Nicholson, Inspector-General of Fortifications; General Sir F. E. Chapman, R.E., General Sir P. Lumsden, General Sir D. Stewart, General Sir A. Taylor, Lieut.-General Sir G. Higginson, Lieut.-General Sir M. Dillon, General Sir D. Probyn, General Sir C. Brownlow, General Sir W. Olpherts, and one other general officer not yet selected.

Among the numerous letters of condolence which have been received by Lady Napier is one from the Queen, in which her Majesty says "the death of her late husband is a national loss." Similar expressions of condolence have also been received from the Prince of Wales, the German Emperor, and the Empress Frederick from Berlin; the Empress Eugénie, the Princess Mary and the Duke of Teck, the Princess Frederica of Hanover, Lord Tennyson, the Duke of Cambridge, and most of the distinguished soldiers of the Army. The Duke of Cambridge, having been informed of the serious nature of Lord Napier's illness, was among the last by the bedside of his old friend and comrade.

One of the last acts of Lord Napier was to write an appeal on behalf of the Gordon Boys' Home, in which he states:—"One hundred and eighty-two boys are at the present time in the Home, and an extension of the buildings, nearly completed, would enable us to receive fifty-eight more boys, if our income would permit of it. The present income of the Home, derived partly from annual subscriptions and partly from the interest on funded property, amounts to about £3,000 only; an addition of £3,500 to this income is urgently needed. The sad anniversary of Gordon's death, the 26th January, falls this year on a Sunday; may we plead earnestly, in Gordon's name, to all, and may we hope that from many pulpits on that day our appeal on behalf of the Gordon Boys' Home may go forth to Gordon's countrymen? Will not many, to whom Gordon's name and Gordon's worth are dear, pay a visit to the Home, and see for themselves the work we are doing in memory of the man who laid down his life for the weak and the oppressed?" The appeal has received the full approval of the Prince of Wales.

On Saturday morning SIR ROBERT ANSTRUTHER DALYELL, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., was found dead in bed in the New Club, Edinburgh. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of death. He had arrived from London the previous night, apparently in good health, on his way to Elie, Fifeshire, to attend the funeral of an aunt. Sir R. Dalzell, who was born in 1831, was a son of the late Lieut.-Colonel John Dalzell, of Lingo, St. Andrews, and of Ticknevin, county Kildare. He was educated at Cheltenham and Haileybury Colleges, and entered the Madras Civil Service in 1851. He was, in 1868, promoted to the Secretaryship of the Madras Government Revenue department, and in 1873 he was made Chief Secretary to the Madras Government. In 1875-76 he was Chief Commissioner of Mysore, and represented Madras in the Legislative Council of India from 1873 to 1877. In the latter year he was appointed a member of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, and was Vice-President of the Council in 1883-84. He ultimately resigned in 1887, and was created a K.C.I.E. in recognition of his services. He took a prominent part in launching the Health-Exhibition of 1884, and was Royal Commissioner to the Colonial Exhibition of 1886. In 1885 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from the University of St. Andrews. Sir Robert, who was unmarried, was a justice of the peace and deputy-lieutenant of Fife.

SIR MICHAEL ROBERTS WESTROPP, late Chief Justice of Bombay, who died on the 4th inst. at Cannes in his 73rd year, was the eldest son of the late Captain Henry Bruen Westropp, of the 7th Dragoon Guards, and a magistrate of Cork, by Maria, daughter of Mr. Edmund Armstrong, of Lismohr, county Clare. He graduated B.A. at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1838, was called to the Bar in Ireland in 1840, and to the Bar at Bombay in 1854; acted as Advocate-General of the presidency in 1856 and 1857, and again in 1861-2; was remembrancer of legal affairs from 1860 to 1863, and was a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay in 1862 and 1863. In the latter year he was raised to the Bench as puisne justice of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, and in 1870 was made Chief Justice and knighted by patent. He resigned in 1882. Sir Michael Westropp was twice married—in 1857 to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the late Mr. John William Anderson, of Fermoy, who died in 1861, and in 1865 to his cousin Eliza, eldest daughter of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Lionel Westropp.

It is said that the Field-Marshal's bâton, vacant by the death of Lord Napier of Magdala, will be offered to General Sir Donald Stewart, who was a Brigadier-General in the Abyssinian campaign, and subsequently commanded in Afghanistan, then becoming Commissioner-in-Chief in India.

THE Pioneer describes Sir William Wedderburn's inaugural address at the National Congress as a piece of sophistical impertinence, rarely equalled and never surpassed in the annals of political claptrap.

THE New Club building at Simla is progressing apace, and it is anticipated that it will be ready in March next. It promises to be a most handsome structure, and well worth the money to be expended on it. Every detail has been carefully considered and provided for, with due regard not only to comfort but elegance.

SALT FISH.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—In countries where the populations have to subsist almost entirely on rice, the addition of a few ounces of fish makes tasteless food very palatable. The Burmese, consequently, are very fond of fish; imperfectly cured fish soon emits a disagreeable odour, and Europeans are offended that men, women, and children should delight in it.

The construction of a railway from Rangoon to Mandalay would have greatly assisted and promoted the fish trade, if Government had not taken it into its head to multiply the tax on salt by more than 5. The salt tax was suddenly raised from 3 to 16 annas by British statesmen who did not understand Burmese wants.

The result has been disastrous. Fish-curing in Burma has been almost stamped out, and well-to-do Burmese have been compelled to import salted fish from the Straits of Malacca, but this supply also smells strongly.

If Government be determined to keep the tax on Burmese salt as high as 16 annas, it surely can imitate the measures of the Madras Government in setting apart fish-curing yards, where fish can be cured with untaxed salt. In the Calicut district on the West coast of India thousands of tons of fish are cured with untaxed salt, to the great benefit of our poor subjects.

Compare our recklessness in ruining the manufacture in Burma with the enormously-increased consumption of fish in England and in all civilised countries owing to the facilities for carriage offered by railroads.—Your obedient servant,
Jan. 17th.

THE FIRST ENGLISH MOSQUE.

[Then the people came from every side and submitted to his (the Mahdi's) rule, and said they submitted to God and His Prophet and to him; for there is only one God, and He is supreme; and they promised they would abstain from all evil, and that they would neither steal nor commit adultery nor do anything which was forbidden by God. They would give up the world and strive only for God's Word, and make war for their Holy Belief for ever,—OMAR SALEH to EMIN PASHA.]

Dr. G. W. Leitner, the well-known savant and Orientalist, whose researches have done so much to stimulate public interest in those branches of learning for which he is renowned, is about to confer a great benefit upon his co-religionists in this country by completing what has been in course of construction for some time—a mosque. Though there are many Mahommedans in this country, they have not hitherto had a properly constituted place of worship. The Mahommedans in Russia have places set apart for religious assemblies, but these are only rooms used for the purpose and not in any sense mosques as understood by the orthodox believer. How many Mahommedans are there in the United Kingdom? Nobody appears to know; and until the last visit of the Shah to this country it was generally believed there were hardly any. But the voting of an address of welcome from the Mahommedan residents in Liverpool to the King of Kings has done something to remove an erroneous impression. But though there may be doubts as to the number of believers, there is none as to the number of their places of worship. The building now approaching completion at Maybury, in Surrey, is the first of its kind.

The surroundings of the new mosque are entirely in consonance with its character. The heavy green foliage, almost tropical in its density and luxuriant undergrowth, combines with the glinting of sunshine on the dome of the building to revive in the mind of the visitor half-forgotten memories of distant lands.

Entrance into the courtyard which surrounds the mosque at Maybury is gained by passing through the main gates. These are composed principally of curiously carved lattice-work, collected by Dr. Leitner during an Indian tour. The building itself may be described as "composite"—that is, its general structure comprises different types of architecture. The front is Mogul, the dome is Deccan, and the parapets are copied from those of the Kaidbay Mosque at Cairo. As seen from the front the building represents a square, or nearly so, with minarets on the two top corners, between which is seen the dome. Attached to the sides of this building, and reaching to about half its height, are smaller buildings identical in shape, having a minaret apiece in the outside upper corner. The flanking minarets are connected by a zigzag stonework of uniform design with the centre building. The porch, or doorway, takes up most of the centre square; but the curves of the arch ascending meet at a point, and leave at each top corner irregular three-cornered spaces. These spaces have been delicately decorated with blue and gold of arabesque design. As in the most famous mosques, so also in this, the greatest possible care has been taken both in selecting the materials and workmanship and in deciding upon the general plans. Standing on the verge of the outside court, beyond which the unbeliever must not pass, the visitor sees on the right a gilt pulpit approached by several steps and surmounted by a cupola. The pulpit is composed of beautiful woodwork brought from India, so delicate in its general outline as to require the word "wood-tracery." On the left is the reading-bench, having at one end a double book-rest, the surfaces of which inclined inwards form the shape of V. On the rest is placed the Koran. Opposite the observer is the central niche, not yet completed, which is so constructed that worshippers have their faces towards the holy city. Great care has been taken to make the bearings of the mosque exact.

The building stands in a turf-covered courtyard, across which is a mosaic pavement from the entrance-gates to the porch. In the centre of this pavement is the square well for the ablutions of the Believers. When the weather is inclement provision has been made for these ablutions in one of the side-chambers. The whole is surrounded by a low circular wall, on the top of which have been planted shrubs, which in time will form an impenetrable barrier. It may be added that as it will not be possible to admit visitors without disturbing worshippers, entrance to the public will be denied.—St. James's Gazette.

MR. ALEXANDER ATKINSON, who had been engineer on the Kashmir cart-road for the last nine years, has received a bonus of Rs. 12,000 and a "no demand" certificate from the State Council, on leaving the State service. The statement, which appeared in a Calcutta paper to the effect that Mr. Atkinson was a victim to political considerations on account of his friendship for the Maharajah, is said to have been groundless.

The School Board Chronicle says:—"It is a library of bright, lively, wholesome reading in short pieces—about twenty separate tales, fables, poems, articles, and sketches to the volume. Now that the work has been so handsomely and happily revised, no school library will be quite what it should be without it."

The Guardian says:—"We hope that the children of the present generation will welcome, as we remember doing, 'The Parents' Cabinet.' So much did we love the book that the sight is a real refreshment."

The Englishwoman's Review says:—"The work will be prized, we believe, by a new circle of readers for its own sake, as well as by those who re-read it to recall the impressions of their childhood."

The Scotsman says:—"All the articles are written in popular language, being well brought within the capacity of those for whom the work has been compiled. . . . Will prove one of the most popular productions of the season for the rising generation."

The Daily News says:—"Each book is complete in itself, in token of which the order is indicated, not by figures, but by stars. . . . Mrs. Hill was the inventor of this convenient method. . . . May be separated without assuming the appearance of odd volumes."

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons Justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent character of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. ## GOORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,
PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—The UNIVERSAL APPETISER—has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of CREATING or RESTORING the APPETITE; in fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and inquiring about the new Sauce—

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 27, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 10th Jan.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 8th Jan.; and from Calcutta to the 9th Jan.

AT Calcutta, on the morning of Jan. 9th, Prince Albert Victor received a deputation, consisting of eight members of the Permanent Memorial Reception Committee, headed by Mr. Stevenson, of Messrs. Graham and Co., who asked permission to call the leper asylum which it is proposed to build the Albert Victor Asylum. The Chairman in making this request said the gentlemen who formed the deputation represented a numerous and influential portion of the local community of all classes who had resolved to raise a permanent memorial in honour of the visit of his Royal Highness to Calcutta, and had subscribed a large sum of money for the purpose. In considering the matter of a memorial preference had been given to the idea of a leper asylum of a charitable and philanthropic kind, because such an institution, they thought, would commend itself to his Royal Highness, and because they had not failed to be impressed with the noble work which the Prince of Wales had been doing in England for the benefit of lepers throughout the whole Empire. His Royal Highness, in a few words, acceded to the request.

AT the meeting of January 3 of the Supreme Legislative Council the Bill to amend Act XXV. of 1867 (Printing Presses and Books Act) was referred to a Select Committee, and the Hon. Mr. R. Crosthwaite introduced the Bill to amend the Central Provinces Civil Courts Act.

THE Select Committee of the Legislative Council on the Indian Railway Bill have held a preliminary meeting. They settled the lines on which to work during the next six weeks before presenting their final report.

THE new Biluchistan Regulations will shortly be published. The Chief Commissioner will be given the powers of a High Court, except as regards European British subjects, who will come under the jurisdiction of the Lahore Chief Court.

THE despatch from the Government of India on the recommendations of the North-West Province Government for administrative redistribution in these Provinces and Oudh will probably be sent home in the course of the next few weeks for the Secretary of State's consideration and approval.

THEIR Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived in Calcutta on Jan. 6 on a visit to Lord and Lady Lansdowne.

LORD CONNEMARA has returned to Madras from his recent visit to Hyderabad.

MR. CHILDERS has left Calcutta on a visit to Darjeeling. He will probably travel hereafter to Peshawur and Quetta to see the frontier.

COLONEL POLE-CAREW, the Commander-in-Chief's Military Secretary, proceeds home shortly. His place will be taken by Lieutenant-Colonel Nicholson, at present Assistant Adjutant-General at Army Headquarters.

COLONEL STEWART, who has been officiating for General Maclean at Mashad, has been appointed Consul-General at Tabriz in succession to Mr. Abbot, who has retired.

COLONEL K. A. JOFF has arrived in Calcutta to officiate as Consulting Engineer to Government for Railways during Colonel Luard's absence on leave home.

MAJOR TRAVERS, of the 2nd Gurkhas, succeeds Lieut.-Colonel Neville Chamberlain as Interpreter to the Commander-in-Chief.

MR. ROBERT KING, C.E., Superintending Engineer, Mandalay, died there a few days ago after a short illness. He was appointed to the Public Works Department in 1867.

THE Burma telegrams announce the capture of Boh To in the Sagain district. This is the man who set Mandalay on fire last year, and he was one of the few dacoits still at large with any name among his countrymen. The capture, therefore, is an important one.

THE Amban was to reach Darjeeling on Jan. 8, there to meet Mr. Hart. The Sikkim-Tibet question is now practically settled, and the terms of the agreement between England and China only remain to be formulated.

THE next work to be undertaken by the Municipal Engineer of the North-West Provinces is the construction of waterworks at Cawnpore. When this is accomplished all the great cities of the Provinces—Allahabad, Agra, Benares, and Cawnpore—will have a regular supply of good water.

THE "Presto" affair has ended in a declaration by the Calcutta Stewards honourably exonerating Lord William Beresford from any responsibility for the contradictory performances of the horse in question at the recent race meeting. At the same time the jockey Dunn is severely censured for keeping back Presto in the first race because he thought that the animal could not win.

It has been decided that from the setting in of the monsoon the day of departure of the English mail from Bombay shall be Friday during the rainy season and Saturday during the rest of the year.

THE Administration Report of the Bombay Presidency for the year 1888-89 shows that, in spite of a deficient rainfall, the year was, on the whole, prosperous.

THE commerce of Bombay received a considerable expansion. Imperial necessities compelled the Government of India to apply to the local Government for a considerable contribution, in addition to the contract allotment to imperial revenue; and existing and prospective financial pressure entailed retrenchment and the most careful husbandry of resources in every department. Substantial reductions were achieved in the expenditure of the Public Works, Irrigation, Forest, and some minor departments; and the financial result of the year's administration was a small surplus from provincial revenue in place of the deficit of the preceding year.

THE commands and staff of the army were entirely reorganised. A new forest survey party was created. The post-office extended postal facilities in order to meet the growing wants of the public. In some branches of the police force some increase in efficiency was discernible.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has presented half-a-dozen handsome musketry prizes for competition by British and Native troops in the Bengal Presidency.

THE Geological Survey officers continue to make interesting discoveries in Lushailand. Mr. La Touche has just come across some marine fossils, the first ever found in the district.

It has been finally decided that there will be no Chapter of the Star of India or Indian Empire this season in Calcutta, as there are no Knight Commanders on the spot to be invested.

THE temporary appointment of a third Brigadier-General for Burma will probably be made a permanent one, as efficient control over so large an area, which will be further extended by this season's operations in the Chin country, cannot be exercised with only two districts.

NOTES.

THE latest news from India up to yesterday will be found in the telegrams of the Times correspondents which we give in another column. The Calcutta correspondent of the Daily News confirms the information that the Chin Lushai Expedition is progressing satisfactorily, and that General Symonds should reach Haka in a few days. The great sickness amongst the troops still unfortunately continues.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR'S tour goes on merrily, pleasure mingled with a little serious business now and then, but the record is one of balls, dinners, pig-sticking, and "other" sports. Of the latter a London contemporary has the following, showing much knowledge of blue cows and Hindoos:—"Prince Albert Victor went on a shooting expedition at Nilghai on January 22," says a telegram of the same date. We fancy there may be a mistake. Nilghai, or "blue cow," is the name of an antelope. Anyway, the Hindoos would not like nilghai shooting, though they many not behave as the Belooches did when their beloved peacocks were potted, when the reprisals of the Natives gave occasion to Sir Charles Napier to issue a General Order in which he said: "If British officers will shoot peacocks, Beloochees will shoot British officers."

MR. BRADLAUGH has arrived safely at home again, and those who are interested in him state that his health has greatly benefited by his trip to India. He had a sensational departure from Bombay, for a correspondent writing from that city, Jan. 4th, says:—"A more madly excited throng has seldom been seen than that which assembled at the Apollo Bunder to bid Mr. Bradlaugh and Sir William Wedderburn adieu. In their enthusiasm they had little consideration for Mr. Bradlaugh, who is not yet very strong. The scene was very amusing too, though it is a question if Mr. Bradlaugh enjoyed it. When the carriage drove upon the Bunder the Natives hoisted great baskets of flowers on their shoulders, and emptied them upon Mr. Bradlaugh, nearly smothering him. After struggling to get free he had great difficulty in reaching the Bunder steps, when again he was almost buried in flowers and laden with garlands. He got off at last, and returned the cheers by waving his hat."

MR. BRADLAUGH showed considerable commonsense and command of himself when the Congress delegates wished him to commit himself altogether to their ways of thought and action. He was wise in his reticence. Sir William Wedderburn was otherwise—at least in his opening address to the delegates; but he seems to have learnt caution afterwards, for we read of him receiving a farewell address at Poona, but "disappointing that portion of his audience who understood English."

It appears that "he touched on the burning questions of the day in a very guarded manner, and his reference to the Congress itself was meagre in the extreme." All that he said was that it was a great success, and compared well with the meeting of the Scottish Liberal Federation which he attended at Glasgow before going to India. This was hardly complimentary to Glasgow; but the Natives of Poona "bedecked him with garlands, and cheered lustily."

A QUESTION which has been mooted with some interest, if not with any anxiety, as to the effect of the Congress agitation amongst the Native soldiery is thus answered by the Pioneer:—"It is extremely unlikely that the literature of the Congress finds its way among the Native officers and men of our Indian army, though many of them may bear vague reports of what the agitators say of the Sirkar. Those who have talked with educated men in the commissioned ranks know that they at least regard the movement with contemptuous indifference. They regard it as having its origin in Bengal, the province which does not supply a single fighting man to the army, while it reaps greater advantages than any other part of the country from the strong administration which maintains peace in India. The Bengali is a peculiarly obnoxious person to the man who is a soldier by profession. He is credited with reaping where he has not sown, with outwitting by his superior education and mental adroitness the simpler but hardier men of the north, and at the same time he is despised because of his inability to protect himself when danger threatens. Any agitation, therefore, which has its mainsprings in Bengal will certainly not find favour in the eyes of the Native soldier."

THE Duke of Connaught, it is said, is in favour of the Parsees enrolling themselves as Volunteers. From our knowledge of that interesting community of traders we do not think that the martial spirit will be found to be very strong amongst them. Mr. Bradlaugh has been encouraging them rather to push themselves forward in Legislative and Local Councils as representatives of the peoples of India, and the Times of India now shows how such representation might be effected:—"In rough numbers the total population of British India may be taken at 200,000,000, and the total Parsee population at 100,000. That is, out of every 2,000 representatives returned by Mr. Bradlaugh's marvellous electorate there should be one Parsee. But there would not, of course, be as many as 2,000 representatives; and, according to the present calculations, the Parsees would have about one-hundredth part of a member in the Supreme Legislature, and not more than a small fraction of a member in the Local Council."

WHAT a gathering of Anglo-Indians there was at the funeral of Lord Napier of Magdala! Not only officers "on duty," but officers retired, civilians, "uncovenanted," and men who were "out of the pale" of all the services thronged to St. Paul's to pay their last respects to one whom all honoured not only as a soldier, but as a good, noble, and true hearted man. There was no jar of discord in the many memories of him that were then and there conjured up. The common feeling was that of deep and sincere regret for the loss as it were of a personal friend. That was true fame!

A CORRESPONDENT of the Standard, signing himself "Z.," makes a handsome offer. The opportunity is given, he says, to fill adequately the vacant place in Trafalgar-square. A replica of the fine equestrian statue of Lord Napier, executed for Calcutta by Sir E. Boehm, could probably be obtained for a moderate price. Should a subscription be opened for this purpose he promises to contribute £1,000, leaving all initiative to those entitled to take it; but, in view of such subscription, observes that Lord Napier was, above all, the friend of those who needed help, and that many of those who would most delight to give may be unable to do so as freely as they would desire. The proposed memorial should, he holds, be a truly national one, the smallest offering being welcomed. "Lord Napier," writes "Z.," "belonged to his country alone, and on principle, as a soldier, he refused steadily to connect himself with any political party; therefore, men of all parties may conscientiously do him honour."

BUT there is another way in which Englishmen and "Anglo-Indians," as some Englishmen are proud to be called, may show their regard for the memory of a good great man. One of the last acts of the late Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala was to write an appeal on behalf of the national memorial to General Gordon—namely, the Gordon Boys' Home, at Chatham, Surrey. This appeal, therefore, has a mournful interest, which should give added weight to the desires expressed by the noble and devoted chairman of the Executive Committee. Lord Napier wrote:—"The sad anniversary of Gordon's death, the 26th of January, falls this year on a Sunday. May we earnestly plead, in Gordon's name, to all, and may we hope that from many pulpits on that day our appeal on behalf of the Gordon Boys' Home may go forth to Gordon's countrymen."

Surely such an appeal will not be allowed to go forth to England or to India in vain?

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 26.

Prince Albert Victor has occupied the past week in visiting various places in the North-West Provinces. As Allahabad, the capital of those provinces, presents no points of special interest it was passed over, and the official welcome took place at Lucknow, where his Royal Highness was received on the 18th inst. by the Lieutenant-Governor and a deputation headed by the Chief Justice. A hospital for women was formally opened the same afternoon, when the Prince took the opportunity to testify to his interest in Lady Dufferin's efforts on behalf of the women of India. In the evening he attended a fête given by the Oude talukdars. On Monday he made a brief visit to Cawnpore, where he planted three willows and two cypress trees round the Memorial at the scene of the massacre, and then went direct to Bhurtpore. Tuesday was devoted to shooting with the Maharajah of Bhurtpore. The party had fair sport, including some black buck. In the evening the Prince went to Agra, where next day he presented new colours to the 4th Bengal Infantry, one of the oldest regiments of the Native Army. Thursday was spent in pig-sticking, the Prince securing his first spear with one of five pigs killed. The Taj was for the first time illuminated by electric light on Wednesday evening; the effect is described as very striking. On Thursday evening the Maharajah of Bhurtpore gave a ball at Agra, after which the Prince left for Lahore, where he now is.

A matter arising out of his Royal Highness's visit to Benares is beginning to attract a good deal of attention here. The Prince, as mentioned last week, laid the foundation-stone of a new water supply and drainage works at the sacred city. In the course of an address which was presented to him on the occasion it was stated that the municipality intended to discharge the sewage of the city into the Ganges a few miles below the town. As India has no enactment similar to the English Rivers Pollution Act there is no power to prevent their doing so nor to prevent other cities in the Gangetic valley following their example, and thus converting the river by the time it reaches Calcutta into a gigantic cesspool. It is understood that the Calcutta Health Society has taken the matter up, and it is to be hoped that the Legislature will interfere before what is now only a possible danger of the distant future becomes a serious menace to all towns on the lower Ganges, and before any money is expended on costly works which may have to be closed hereafter.

Strange as it may seem, it is only within the last few months that Calcutta has had an Art Society. In this respect the capital has been outstripped by Bombay, Simla, Poona, and other provincial towns. Such a society, however, has at last been started under the most favourable auspices, and its first exhibition was opened on Monday by the Viceroy in the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor and other notables. Sir Stuart Bayley, who opened the proceedings, alluded to the difficulties under which amateur artists laboured in India—difficulties due chiefly to want of leisure, lack of competent criticism, and absence of opportunities to compare their work with that of the great masters. He expressed the hope that the new society would tend to foster the growth of art, and his gratification at finding several Native artists taking part in the exhibition. The Viceroy followed with a few remarks, in the course of which he said that Calcutta should not be content with being a centre of political and commercial activity, but should strive to be a centre of artistic activity also. Several paintings in the exhibition appeared to him to possess considerable merit. He was disposed to take a sanguine view of the future of portrait-painting in this country, and he hoped that many Natives would turn to art as a profession. India, too, presented endless opportunities for subjects for amateurs. He hoped the exhibition would be the first of a long series.

Following the example of their brethren of Bombay, the uncovenanted civilians of Bengal entertained Mr. H. S. King, M.P., at a public dinner on Wednesday. Sir Alfred Croft, Director of Public Instruction, presided, and about 160 gentlemen, representing the Education, Telegraph, Public Works, and other departments of the public service, attended, while several members of the covenanted service, the Bench, and the non-official public showed their sympathy with the cause by their presence. The Chairman, in proposing the toast of the evening, said they had met to do honour to one who had been their steadfast and intrepid champion in the face of much opposition and difficulty. He then went on to state the case of the uncovenanted service in sober, well-chosen terms. The seniors among them had come to India when a pension of Rs.5,000 was understood to be equivalent to £500. Now it was equivalent to only about two-thirds of that sum. To all their representations the Government replied by pointing to the terms of their contract. They brought no imputations of bad faith against the Government; neither party had foreseen the present state of affairs, but they denied the justice of its position that, as guardian of the public purse, it could not go beyond the four corners of its contract. As a great employer of technically skilled labour it was bound to consider the legitimate expectations of its employés, and the content or discontent of a large and important body of public servants. Mr. King's strenuous efforts had raised discussion to the higher level and freer air of the House of Commons; that was why they were grateful to him, and not to him only but also to his brother member, Sir Roper Lethbridge, the appearance of whose name in the list of honours last New Year's Day had sent a thrill of hope through many of them. He then called on them to drink the toast with all honours.

As soon as the loud and prolonged cheering which greeted the toast had subsided, the secretary of the association advanced, and on behalf of the uncovenanted civilians of Madras presented Mr. King with an address in a handsome casket. He then read a number of telegrams of sympathy from all parts of the Presidency.

Mr. King then rose and delivered a speech of nearly an hour's length. The accident of his relations with India, he said, made him acquainted with the wrongs of one of its greatest services, and he naturally tried to get them remedied. It would be hardly possible to find anywhere on the globe a match for the body of men who constituted the Indian uncovenanted service, and this might be said without detracting in the smallest degree from the superb prestige and deathless renown of the covenanted service. One service had planted, the other had watered. To one we owed the conquest of the country, to the other the crop of prosperous civilisation. He thought that the importance which the uncovenanted service had attained was not properly appreciated by the Indian Government or the public at home—a fact which was largely due to the gradual development of that service. It was painful to him to think that such a service should be mulcted by diminished pension, for what was pension but deferred pay? His friend the Under-Secretary of State, in answering a question in the House, had put forward the poor ryot argument. That plea was evasive, flimsy, and not altogether creditable. As a mere question of business it was to the highest interest of the Government, on behalf of the public and of the poor ryot himself, to treat its servants not as a hard taskmaster but in a spirit of genial and just fairness. He had been met with the statement that any number of good men could be obtained on existing terms; that might be true to some extent, but something more than average ability was required. It was not safe in a country like India to risk experiments in cheap service. He could conceive no more foolish thrift than to reduce the rate of emolument so low as to depress the average competency of the service. In conclusion, he urged all branches of the service to remember that their interests were identical and to work together. They were conducting a manly, honourable, and just struggle, and their appeal was to the manliness, honour, and justice of their fellow Britons.

The remaining speeches call for little notice. The Chief Justice of Bengal, replying for the guests, said the grievances of the service were sufficiently severe to demand attention, and if they pressed their case moderately and temperately they were sure of success. Justice Prinsep, in proposing the health of the chairman, said as a member of the Covenanted Civil Service it was peculiarly gratifying to him to be able to express the sympathy of that service with the sufferings of their uncovenanted brethren. On the whole the demonstration was one of the most successful ever held in Calcutta. It has brought home a vivid sense of the unjust treatment of a large and deserving body of public servants to many persons who hitherto knew little or nothing of the subject, and it may be hoped that it will have the effect of inducing the Indian Government and the India Office to take a juster and more generous view of their duties towards their employés.

The Punjab Government is about to begin the work of protecting Dera Ghazi Khan against the encroachments of the river Indus. It will be watched with interest by engineers. The plan is thus described by an up-country paper:—A trench a mile long will be dug in the narrow strip of land that still separates the town from the river. This trench will be about the depth of the ordinary river surface and 5ft. wide, the earth taken out being used to form an inner bund or protection against overflow from unusually high floods. In this trench large blocks of quarried stones are simply to be thrown to the depth of four or five feet, while others will be piled against the inner bund and the balance kept in reserve. The river will then be left to do its worst. As erosion goes on, and the earthen bank is cut from below, it is expected that the stones will gradually drop in and slip down till they reach the bottom, and so for an earthen bank will be substituted a slope of stone, which may be overflowed but cannot be eroded.

Another interesting experiment is about to be tried by the Punjab Government. A number of young olive trees are being procured from Italy, and it is intended to test the suitability of the low hills below Murree in the Rawal Pindi district for olive cultivation.

The Bombay Government has taken prompt action in regard to the leprosy question. Instead of waiting for the legislation which is understood to be occupying the attention of the Supreme Government it has issued a notification under a local Act declaring the disease known as black leprosy to be an infectious disease, dangerous to life, and has named certain institutions to serve as sanatoria in cases of leprosy.

A Poonah telegram states that the Bombay Government, on the recommendation of the Duke of Connaught, has sanctioned the enrolment of Parsees as Volunteers in the Poonah Rifle Volunteer Battalion. This step is unexceptionable in itself, but it may afford a pretext for reopening the general question of allowing Natives to become Volunteers.

The Laccadive Islands have been attacked by a plague of rats, which destroyed the cocoanut plantations and reduced the islanders to a condition of destitution. It has been suggested to the Madras Government that it should deal with the plague by the plaster of Paris cure. Powdered plaster is sprinkled on boiled rice. The rats which eat this become thirsty, and when they drink the plaster hardens and kills them. This plan is, at least, free from the danger to human life which attends the use of arsenic.

The Chinese Amban, who is now at Darjeeling, is expected in Calcutta next month, when the Sikkim negotiations will be finally settled.

The Zhoib expedition proceeds satisfactorily, the tribes meeting Sir R. Sandeman with every appearance of friendliness. A slight exception occurred the other day, when a squadron of the 6th Bengal Cavalry was fired upon from a village. Sir R. Sandeman is now proceeding to the Gomal Pass, with all the important chiefs attending him.

Yesterday's Government Gazette contains a notification by the Governor-General in Council declaring what laws are in force in British Beloochistan, and extending certain provisions of the Indian civil and criminal codes to that province. This marks an important step towards order and civilisation in some of the most remote districts of the Empire.

LAHORE, JAN. 26.

Prince Albert Victor arrived here yesterday, and exchanged visits with the Native chiefs.

In the afternoon his Royal Highness proceeded through the city with his suite on elephants, returning after dark, when the streets were illuminated.

A large gathering of Europeans and Natives was held in the evening in Montgomery Hall, when an address of welcome was presented to the Prince, recalling the Prince of Wales's visit, and the rapid progress made in the Punjab in all directions since then.

Prince Albert Victor starts to-night for the cavalry camp at Muridki, where extensive manœuvres are to be held to-morrow and on Tuesday.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 26.

The only item of interest from Afghanistan is that the Ameer has formally announced his intention to visit Herat after Nauroy, or New Year's Day, which occurs in the middle of March. This seems to indicate that the settlement of Afghan Turkestan, which has occupied Abdurrahman's attention for the last twelve months, is now satisfactorily concluded.

THE CHIN FIELD FORCE.

RANGOON, JAN. 25.

The strongly stockaded village of Lwesaing has been captured and burned by the Tonhon column. Major Forrest, of the Hampshire Regiment, was very dangerously wounded during the attack.

Brigadier-General Symons, with 25 officers, 200 of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, and 200 Goorkhas, has occupied Yokwa, the capital of one section of the Boungshe tribe. Brigadier-General Symons subsequently reconnoitred towards Haka for six miles beyond Yokwa. Five of the head chiefs of the Boungshe interviewed Brigadier-General Symons at Yokwa on the 19th inst. He reports that the chiefs were allowed five days to bring in their captives and pay a fine of 500 rupees. The chiefs were informed that if default were made on the sixth day ten houses would be burned, on the seventh fifty houses, and on the eighth the whole village.

The health of the troops is still very unsatisfactory, although a considerable altitude has been reached, where it was hoped they would be beyond the range of fever. Brigadier-General Symons telegraphed as follows from Yokwa on the 22nd inst.:—"Health of troops with me rather worse; nine officers sick to-day." On the 23rd inst. Brigadier-General Symons announced that in Yokwa alone 13 officers were sick, and added that the officers suffered from fever in an unaccountable proportion. In Kan, at the foot of the hills, nine officers, 49 British and 53 Native troops, and 129 followers were in hospital. The King's Own Scottish Borderers have suffered especially severely from the climate. The troops are likely to be detained some time in the Chin country as Brigadier-General Symons telegraphed yesterday that Colonel Tregear, commanding the Bengal column, had informed him that he would not reach Haka, distant 10 miles from Yokwa, until the end of March. Brigadier-General Symons proposes to advance beyond Haka to meet Colonel Tregear.

A body of Chins has made a raid on the Kale Valley, carrying off 18 captives, including 13 women. The raiders escaped without loss.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 26.

The latest news of the Lushai expedition is that Lalthuama has paid the whole of the fine inflicted on him except the rice, which will be brought in a few days. The health of the column is improving as it gets into a better climate, and the road and telegraph works are being carried on rapidly.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JAN. 25.

A band of dacoits, headed by four Bohs, is troubling the Pynmana district, and dacoits have attacked Subidi, a village 14 miles south of Bhamo.

SIAM.

RANGOON, JAN. 25.

The Siamese Government has decided to construct all railways of standard gauge—namely, 4ft. 8½in. The projected railway east from Bangkok to the Mekong River, about 440 miles long, has been favourably launched. Sir Andrew Clarke's syndicate offered to find half the capital and construct the line, charging 10 per cent. commission on the cost price. The first section of 55 miles to Patrew will be begun immediately. Half the capital will be found by Siam, and the company will be formed under Siamese laws.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL G. B. WOLSELEY, C.B., is about to return to India to resume his command. He came home some time ago from Mandalay in failing health, but is now fully recovered.

SNIPER-SHOOTERS may be interested to hear of big doings in the Calcutta district. Mr. W. B. Gladstone and Mr. E. L. Hamilton have recently had grand sport together, having on four days killed 284 couple of snipe, or an average of 71 couple a day. On one day Mr. Gladstone got 63½ couple to his own gun, which is, we believe, a record for Calcutta.

THE LATE LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—A large and influential deputation will wait upon the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House this afternoon at half-past four o'clock to request his Lordship to raise a fund for the purpose of providing some suitable memorial in the metropolis of the late Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala, G.C.B., Constable of the Tower.

VISCOUNT MARSHAM, 4th Bedfordshire Regiment, will, we understand, shortly vacate his appointment as Aide-de-Camp to Lord Connemara, Governor of Madras, and will arrive in England in the course of a few weeks, Captain Fowle, 21st Hussars, succeeding him as senior Aide-de-Camp.

FIBRE ENTERPRISE IN THE BAHAMAS.—In response to the recent appeal of the Governor of the Bahamas, Sir A. Shea, that British capitalists should take in hand the cultivation of Sisal-fibre in the Bahamas, to encourage which a bounty of £4 13s. 4d. per ton had been granted for a period of seven years, a powerful group has been formed in London with the object of planting 10,000 acres at once with this valuable fibre plant. For some time past there has been a great demand for Sisal-fibre on the part of the home and foreign trade, the supply of Manilla hemp being quite inadequate for the increasing wants of Europe. Hitherto it has come chiefly from Yucatan, where, in the course of a few years, an extensive export trade has grown up, making the fortunes of many planters. The plant is one of the easiest and cheapest to cultivate. It grows wild, on the poorest soils, and, save for the original clearing of the ground, and planting in regular rows, when an estate is originally laid out with it, the plant requires no further attention. In three years its leaves are large enough to be plucked, and for twenty years afterwards the plant can be stripped of them at frequent intervals without any other attention than a little pruning. Drought it does not mind, nor rain, while frost has no injurious effect on it in the least. With these advantages, and a bounty to boot, large and lucrative results ought to attend the cultivation of the fibre plants, and bring about the addition of one more to the list of valuable products of the British Empire.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

MOBILISATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

(Madras Mail.)

This question, which has for the past four years, or since the deliberations of the Quetta Delimitation Commission, been under the serious consideration of Government, has at last been decided upon. The Indian Army is to consist of four Army Corps, each 25,000 strong, namely, three Standing Army Corps, one for each of the Presidencies of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, and one Reserve Army Corps only in time of war. The three Army Corps are to have their military requirements supplied by two Grand Arsenals, one at Rawalpindi, and one at Bellary; the former meeting the requirements of the Bengal Presidency, and the latter, situated as it is midway between Bombay and Madras, supplying the wants of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies. Accordingly, while the present first class arsenal at Bellary is to be raised and enlarged to the standard of a Grand Arsenal, the Grand Arsenal now at Fort St. George is to be reduced to a dépôt. The Accounts Offices are also to have a change of location, and the office of the Examiner of Ordnance Accounts is to be removed either to Poona or Calcutta.

The choice of Bellary for the southern Grand Arsenal is very judicious, for Bellary occupies a central position, 210 miles in a straight line from the Coromandel, and 180 miles from the Malabar Coast, and it is in railway communication with Madras, Mysore, Goa, Hyderabad, Bombay, and the far north. The retention of the Grand Arsenal in Fort St. George is undesirable, as in the event of the bombardment and hostile occupation of Madras, the military forces in the south might be very seriously crippled for want of access to the munitions necessary for prosecuting the war. Bellary is safe from attack by sea, and it could be easily made impregnable from attack by land. The choice lay between Vellore and Bellary, and the military authorities have done well in selecting the former. Bellary has long, and deservedly, enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most sociable places in India, and the enhancement of its strategic importance, and the increase of its permanent and occasional population by the presence of the Grand Arsenal will, in all probability, make it more than ever a favourite station.

SIR MADHAVA ROW.

(Indian Daily News.)

The veteran Hindoo politician, Sir Madhava Row, has thrown the weight of his influence into the scale in favour of early infant-marriage reform amongst his community. In a circular letter addressed to the President and members of the Social Conference proposed to be held at Bombay after the sittings of the National Congress convention are concluded, Sir Madhava Row strongly recommends that the Conference should concentrate its attention on what he has no hesitation in saying is "the most important, the most urgent, and happily the most practicable reforms." His plan is to discountenance the marriage of girls under the age of ten years—young enough, in all conscience: even the Hindoo conscience—and he suggests that the help of Government in the form of legislative prohibition should be invoked. Such prohibition he considers might take the form of a declaration that marriages of girls under ten will not be recognised in the Civil Courts, unless they have been consummated after that age. Thus a Rukhmabai who had been married as a child under ten to a youth or man to whom she objected as a husband when she grew old enough to judge for herself would be able to repudiate the irksome bondage, and need have no fear of a suit for enforcement of conjugal rights being decreed against her. To European ideas the thought naturally occurs that twelve years, or even a later age, would be a more desirable point at which to draw the line than ten; but Hindoo ideas on these matters do not coincide with European notions, and it is fair and reasonable to follow the advice of the leaders amongst the Hindoo community in considering reforms affecting their social customs and religious beliefs. Sir Madhava Row, a gentleman of great experience, is convinced that even by such a limited measure of reform as he suggests, "many serious evils would be got rid of or greatly reduced; health and happiness would be increased, and premature widowhoods would be diminished." These are worthy objects, and in endeavouring to attain them the Hindoo leaders may count upon the full sympathy of the European community, and also, no doubt, of the Government. In regard to the need of legislative action to give effect to the plans of the reformers, Sir Madhava Row says:—"The educated community ought to get such a law passed by making a strong application to the Legislature. It would be utterly hopeless to get the uneducated masses to consent to it, because they are incapable of forming a correct judgment in so important a matter." The increased attention now being paid to questions of social reform is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. Discussion cannot fail to produce useful results by educating the intelligent population, and Sir Madhava Row's proposal may be welcomed as promising to give the discussion on one important point at least a practical shape. It is significant that Sir Madhava Row should regard legislation as necessary; and we see his view is cordially supported by the Madras Hindu. The Government is rightly averse to interfering with the social usages of the different sections of its subjects; but the objection is certainly minimised when the most intelligent men amongst the section of its subjects concern themselves, and ask for assistance in carrying out salutary reforms.

ART IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The Indian artist must be a hard person to please if he still complains of inadequate recognition. In addition to the summer opportunities that Simla and Poona have always afforded, it appears that we shall in future have two picture exhibitions open every cold weather—a Grosvenor at Calcutta, an Academy at Bombay. The Bombay Art Society's exhibition may already be regarded as a regular fixture. The first experiment was highly successful last year, and for this season's show, which opens on the 10th February, a colossal prospectus has been issued. The prize list is something bewildering. There are gold medals and silver medals; prizes by the Governor; prizes by the Commander-in-Chief; prizes by the Chief Justice, the Bench and the Bar; prizes for oils, water-colours, sketches, crayons, pen-and-ink, and statuary; prizes for professionals and amateurs; prizes for ladies and for Native students. The Calcutta programme is equally lavish. The exhibition there, which opens a week or two before the other, is a new thing; and evidently nothing has been spared to make it a success as far as donations will achieve that object. The only doubt that assails one, looking at these lists, is concerning the pictures that are to compete for these multitudinous rewards. Where are they all to come from? The amateur artists in India are, as we all know, a small band, very limited in numbers, and still more limited as to the time they can individually devote to art. The professionals may be counted on the fingers of a hand, and no prizes that an Indian amateur society can ever be in a position to offer will attract talent to a country where there is no market for pictures. It is hard to believe, then, that this small company can represent a production capable of maintaining two forty-prize power exhibitions at the same time, if either is to stand at all a respectable level. Would not a combination, so as to give alternative exhibitions at the two Presidencies, be a better arrangement both in the interests of art and of the prize-givers, who deserve some consideration? In the Calcutta list may be noticed several names which also appeared as benefactors of the Simla Exhibition; and there seems some fear that the rapid growth of the picture exhibition may come to signify a new tax upon high officials and open-handed Native gentlemen.

SIR WILLIAM WEDDERBURN AT THE CONGRESS.

(Madras Mail.)

Sir William Wedderburn should have refrained from saying a word in disparagement of the public Service to which he once belonged, and with which several members of his family have from time to time been connected; but he could not resist the temptation to play to the gallery, so "he had no hesitation in repeating that the interests of the Indian Services were in a great measure antagonistic to the interest of the Indian taxpayer, whose main interests were peace, economy, and reform"; and "it could not be expected that as a class their official administrators in India would work for peace, economy, and reform." This is an absurd libel. If the administrators were what he describes them to be, how has it come to pass that the India of 1889 is in the enjoyment of peace, progress and prosperity such as were unknown to her before the British advent, and such as command the admiration of all unprejudiced foreign critics? An ex-official who stoops to allege evil things of his countrymen in office past and present in India, in the way that Sir William Wedderburn did, is a melancholy example of the degradation to which men may fall who surrender themselves to the inexorable demands of the "new democracy." Mr. Yule, who occupied the chair at the Congress meeting at Allahabad last year, is a Calcutta merchant; and it was comparatively free to him to hold the bureaucratic class of his countrymen in India up to the contempt of the delegates whom he addressed; but his knowledge of the country, his sense of fairness, and his right feeling as an Englishman proud of England's noblest achievement, combined to deter him from so flagrant an abuse of his position. Sir William Wedderburn, however, alleges that the class to which he has belonged is so strongly opposed to reform that the "national life" can only be revived, and he material prosperity of India increased, by the people of India appealing from the selfishness, injustice, and inhumanity of Britons in India, to the "great heart of the British people." It is generally supposed, and statistics testify to the fact, that the material and moral interests of India have been wonderfully promoted by her foreign rulers; but Sir William Wedderburn holds that "the professional interests of our official administrators in India were in antagonism with the interests of the Indian taxpayer, whose affairs they administered." On the other hand, "wherever meetings of working men were addressed" in the United Kingdom, "they were found willing, nay, eager, that justice should be done to India." Mr. Hume, it appears, and a "group of Indian speakers of weight and experience" are to initiate "a systematic propaganda by addressing popular audiences at the great centres of population throughout Great Britain. They would appeal fearlessly to the highest motives, and call on the people of England to perform their trust and duty towards the unrepresented millions of India." There was a time when a mission of this sort, which addressed itself to the ignorant indifference of the masses, had a chance of momentary success; but the unsuccessful efforts that were made during the General Election in 1885 by an itinerant "Indian group" showed that the British working man is not now easily deluded. It may suit the purpose of Sir William Wedderburn to disparage his countrymen who are sustaining an enormous responsibility with honour to themselves and their race; but, happily, the average Briton has a general idea that good administration has made India the best customer that England has. No one, perhaps, supposes that the supporters of the National Congress wish "to exchange the rule of England for Russia." The Congress delegates know well enough that Russia tolerates no Congress, and has a short and sharp way of putting a stop to uncomplimentary political criticism.

THE PAY OF THE BRITISH SOLDIER IN INDIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

While nearly every British military and civil officer in India views a fall in the exchange value of the rupee with something closely akin to dismay there is no doubt that the British soldier in India looks upon the same incident in quite another light. This anomaly, for we can call it by no other name, is one likely to result, however, in very disagreeable consequences, especially if in the near future, as is considered probable by many, the exchange value of the rupee is gradually raised to its old standard of 1s. 8d. To make our point clear, it would be as well, perhaps, to just glance at the variations that have taken place in recent years in the British soldier's Indian pay. In 1884 Her Majesty's Government sanctioned the pay and allowances of warrant and non-commissioned officers and men of the British army serving in India being issued at the rate of exchange fixed annually for the payment of troops serving in the colonies—that is, their rates of English pay were to be converted into Indian money at a rate of exchange fixed annually by Her Majesty's Government. In pursuance of this order the following variations have taken place in the soldier's pay since 1883, or rather Jan. 1, 1884—taking the gross pay of a British Infantry private at 1s. per diem, for a 31 day month, as an example:—

Period.	Rate of Exchange	Monthly Pay,
Previous to 1884.	Fixed Rate	R. A. P.
Jan. 1, '84, to March 31, '85	at 1s. 10½d	16 8 6
April 1, '85, to March 31, '86	1s. 8d.	18 9 7
April 1, '86, to March 31, '87	1s. 7½d.	19 1 3
April 1, '87, to March 31, '88	1s. 7d.	19 9 3
April 1, '87, to Sept. 30, '88	1s. 6½d.	21 4 1
Oct. 1, '88, to Present Time	1s. 4½d.	22 8 9

In March of this year an order was issued fixing the rate of exchange for the conversion of the soldier's pay at 1s. 4d. the rupee for three months from April 1st. We pointed out at the time the loss which this low standard would entail. No harm, however, was done; for a week afterwards the order was cancelled, and no change has, therefore, taken place since October, 1888. It may thus be seen that an Infantry private's pay in India has jumped from Rs. 16-8-6 in 1883, to Rs. 22-8-9 at the present time, or an increase of 36 per cent., although his English rate of pay of 1s. per diem, or what he would receive at home, has remained stationary. It may safely be said, also, that with regard to the soldier's requirements, the fall in the exchange value of the rupee has had less effect on the local market which he patronises than on any other. Consequently, taking things altogether, he has benefited to a very great extent by the present depreciated exchange value of the rupee. Now, we should be the very last to grudge the soldier this increase of pay. We hold that even at the present time he is certainly not receiving more than he deserves. Not only do we expect more intelligence from the soldier of our day, but also the food and necessities he has to provide for himself out of his own pay are, owing to natural economic causes, dearer now than they used to be—irrespective of the exchange value of the rupee. At the same time, we cannot help saying that we foresee great difficulties in store for the Government, if the soldier's pay is always to be allowed to fluctuate with the rupee. Hitherto the variation in his pay has been all one way, that is, advantageous to the soldier. As the exchange goes down, so the soldier's pay goes up. But, supposing the exchange goes up, as is likely, and the soldier's pay becomes suddenly reduced in consequence, what will be the result? It is useless to tell the soldier in India that his pay is 1s. per diem, and that he must receive it in Indian money at its exchange value, for this would be an argument little understood by him. He looks to what he can purchase locally with his pay. Nor, even otherwise, can we expect a short service soldier with little education to recognise and allow for the equity of the arrangement, although it gives him the true value of his shilling according to the market rate, when that rate takes downward steps, necessitating curtailment of his modest expenditure, below the limit which he has always allowed himself.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 9.)

The Maharajahs of Durbhanga, Doomraon, Bettiah, and Gidhour paid yesterday private visits to H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor. The Prince will, before his departure from Calcutta, drive through the northern portion of the town to see for himself the Native mode of life in their own quarters. The dinner at the Bengal Club last evening was a splendid success. Mr. Robert Steel proposed the toast of the evening, and the Prince and the Duke of Connaught replied very effectively, and were loudly cheered. Among the guests were the Lieut-Governor, the Lord Bishop, the Chief Justice, Sir Claud Hamilton, Lord Beresford and the Maharajah of Cooch Behar. The fête on the Maidan on Tuesday is said to have cost forty-five thousand rupees. Captain Count Rudolph Morticuculi, commanding the Austrian corvette Aurora, and several officers of that vessel, had a private audience yesterday at Government House with Lord Lansdowne, the Prince, and the Duke of Connaught. Last night's State ball at the Government House was a brilliant success. Close upon two thousand persons were present. On the appearance of his Excellency the Viceroy and party the dance commenced. Half-an-hour later the Prince and the Duke of Connaught came down, and remained till half-past one o'clock, evidently enjoying the dances.

No official intimation has yet reached India of Major-General Montmorency's appointment to the Bengal Division, which falls vacant in April, but he is considered the most likely man.

The Bank of Bengal pays a dividend for the past six months at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, transfers 5 lakhs to bad and doubtful debt fund, and carries forward Rs. 112,000.

The dinner given on the 30th ult. to Mr. Vernon's eleven by the Calcutta Cricket Club was a great success. About sixty gentlemen sat down at table.

Babu Ran Bahadur Singh, of Gya, has given the handsome donation of Rs. 25,000 towards providing a salary for a lady doctor to be locally employed. Babu Ran Bahadur by this act has well sustained the reputation for wise liberality which has been long enjoyed by the Tekari family.

MISS NIEBEL, who recently won the Viceroy's silver medal at the Calcutta Medical College and was posted to Naini Tal, has succeeded Madame Bhim as lady doctor to her Highness the Begum of Bhopal. The female hospital in Bhopal is likely to flourish, thanks to the keen interest taken in its welfare by her Highness.

THE Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General Department, has forwarded to the Heads of Departments a rule on the subject of the connection of Government officers with the Press, to the effect that no officer shall, in future, become the accredited correspondent of any newspaper without the permission in writing of the head of the office in which he is serving.

An interesting ceremony took place on board the steamer Peshwa, of the Asiatic line, lying at Kidderpore, on Saturday, when the Mercantile Marine Service Association flag was presented to Commander Petley, of the Naval Volunteers. Only once previously has such an honour been conferred upon a naval officer in the port of Calcutta, the recipient being the Duke of Edinburgh.

SOME forty Civil Engineers sat down on the night of the 30th to an excellent dinner provided by the Great Eastern Hotel Company, Calcutta. After dinner the usual loyal toasts were proposed, and a friendly discussion then followed on matters connected with the Civil Engineers' Association, in which a number of members took part. After a vote of thanks to the Chairman the party broke up about midnight.

THE casket which is to contain the address by the City of Calcutta to H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor of Wales on his arrival is now on view at Messrs. Hamilton and Co.'s. It is a splendid specimen of the perfect workmanship and uniqueness of design for which this well-known firm enjoy a great reputation. The casket is cylindrical in shape, engraved with Cutch work, with closed bands at each end, and Hindoo deities in high relief. The ends are a facsimile of the famous Temple of Juggernaut, with gold terminals. Surmounting the casket is a gold figure of the Hindoo goddess Juggodhatri, seated on a lotus flower and riding on a lion. The casket bears in front the arms of the Prince, and on the reverse those of the town of Calcutta in high relief. The whole is supported by four figures, models taken from the Jain Temple, which themselves rest on a solid tablet of silver, beautifully bordered in Cutch work.

MADRAS.

(Jan. 8.)

LORD CONNEMARA, accompanied by Mr. J. D. Rees, Private Secretary and Viscount Marsham, A.D.C., arrived in Madras on Monday morning from Hyderabad.

THE HON. MR. J. F. PRICE, Chief Secretary to Government, will leave Madras for Australia on the 13th instant, and the Hon. Mr. J. Grose has been appointed to act as Chief Secretary until Mr. Price's return—about the end of March—or until further orders.

THE Madras Government has not, it is believed, yet received a reply from Mr. J. W. Best, C.S., now at home on furlough, to the offer it has telegraphed to him of an Acting Judgeship of the High Court, during the absence of Mr. Justice Wilkinson, who will leave Madras in the Rewa on the 11th instant. Mr. Justice Parker leaves Bombay in the Peninsular on the 7th of March.

MR. R. A. STERNDAL, the popular author and artist, and Assistant Accountant-General in charge of Currency, Madras, retires from the service early next month.

MR. CREIGHTON having resigned the tutorship of the Minor Zemindar of Kangundi in charge of the Court of Wards at Madras, Mr. R. A. Nelson, Assistant Inspector of Salt and Abkari Revenue, has been appointed tutor sub pro tem., pending the arrival of Mr. Ker, a Professor of the University College, London, who has been appointed tutor.

THE rules laid down for the instruction of young officers of Pioneer regiments of the Bengal Army have been extended to the Madras Presidency. The Government of India have sanctioned the instruction of young officers of Pioneer regiments in the Madras Presidency in field work with the Sappers and Miners at Bangalore.

UPON the recommendation of the Finance Committee the Office of the Military Paymaster was abolished on the 31st March last, a portion of the establishment being transferred to the office of the Examiner of Military Accounts, and the duty of payments thereafter devolving upon the Civil Department (Accountant General). The Accountant General recently applied to the Comptroller General for additional clerks to enable him to carry out the work of payments above referred to, as his experience in the past ten months showed that it was impossible for him to carry out the work efficiently with his existing staff. The Comptroller General having refused sanction thereto, the Accountant General had to refuse to make payments, with the result that the work is to be transferred to the Examiner of Military Accounts, to whose office an addition is to be made of a separate section, whose duties it will be to make such payments. These arrangements will come into operation from the beginning of the official year.

BOMBAY.

(Jan. 10.)

COLONEL J. P. GRANT, Staff Corps, has been permitted to retire from the Service from the 1st inst.

LIEUT.-COLONEL J. G. FAGAN, Bombay General List, Cavalry, has been gazetted a Colonel.

LADY BECHERDAS VEHARIDAS died on Tuesday evening at Nariad.

LIEUT. T. MOSS, Bombay Staff Corps, Deputy Assistant Commissary-General, Second Class, on probation, has been confirmed in his appointment.

MAJOR HUMPHREY, who has been appointed to act as Commissioner of Police until the return of Colonel Wilson from leave in Europe, took charge of his new appointment on Monday.

A TELEGRAM from Aden states that Colonel Wise, the Commissioner of Police, who left Bombay in the Kaiser-i-Hind, was better on arrival there. He was, however, going on to Europe.

ON Friday Baron D. Hayking, the German Consul-General for India, accompanied by Baroness Hayking, left Bombay for Calcutta.

DURING the absence of Dr. T. Cooke, Mr. S. Cooke, M.A., F.I.C., F.G.S., A.M.I.C.E., acts as Principal of the College of Science, Poona; and Mr. R. G. Oxenham, M.A., acts in the First Grade of the Educational Department.

ON Monday afternoon, the Earl of Kerry and Lord FitzMaurice, sons of H.E. the Viceroy, paid a visit to the Parsee Towers of Silence. During their brief stay in Bombay, the Earl of Kerry and Lord FitzMaurice were the guests of H.E. Lord Reay. They afterwards started for Calcutta by the Jubbulpore mail train, which left Bombay at 9.30 P.M. Captain Phayre, A.D.C. to the Governor, accompanied them to the Victoria Terminus, and saw the distinguished persons off.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the past week:—Slight rain in one taluka of Sholapore. Rain wanted generally in the Deccan and Karnatik for late crops, which are withering in parts of Nassik, Poona, Sholapore, Bijapore, and Belgaum. Standing crops damaged by locusts in one taluka of Hyderabad; otherwise good, except early sown cotton in parts of Broach. Harvesting of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in a few districts. Opium sowing completed in Baroda. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Nassik and Dharwar. Agricultural stock generally good. Prices rising in parts of Sholapore.

THE Council of the Governor of Bombay for making Laws and Regulations met on Wednesday afternoon and resumed discussion on several amendments on clauses of the Bombay Salt Bill. The Hon. Sir Raymond West moved the first reading of a Bill to amend the Bombay Gambling Act, which he pointed out was chiefly to prevent a new form of gambling known as Barsat ka Satta, or rain speculation, this form of wagering having caused incalculable harm, and had had a very demoralising effect on the youths of the City of Bombay, and had even attracted gamblers from the mofussil. The Hon. Sir Raymond West afterwards moved the first reading of a Bill to amend the Law for the Regulation of the District Police in the Bombay Presidency, which he said was introduced for the purpose of rearranging the provisions of the Police Law, of revising them with a view to the conditions of the present time, and of introducing amongst them some new enactment suggested by the deficiencies of the present law. The Bill having been read the Council adjourned.

He is of Brahacharnam caste and Shatamarshana Gotram. He is not very particular that the girl should be of his division of the Brahmin caste. Apply for further particulars to the Secretary to Hindu Marriage Association, Mount-road, Madras."

NATIVE PRESS.

—O—

"THE NATIONAL CONGRESS."

The Kossid-e-Mumbai, a Mahomedan journal, says:—We are glad to state that no Mahomedan of any significance in Bombay joined the "National Congress." Some of the Mahomedans who came from outstations were much ill-treated, and they are now convinced that the Congress being chiefly composed of the Hindoos, the latter could say and do as they pleased, and that the voice of the Mahomedans was only like a cry in the wilderness, not being listened to. If the Mahomedans are not heard in a city like Bombay in a meeting presided over by no less a man than Sir William Wedderburn, it must be imagined what would be the state of the community in places where the Hindoos generally predominated. We very much doubt if these Mahomedans will again join the Congress. Some of them have stated to us, "We repent having come down all the way to Bombay; the Mahomedans of Bombay have exercised a wise discretion in keeping themselves aloof from the Congress." We are positive that if Sir William Wedderburn and Mr. Bradlaugh had not come down to Bombay to take part in the proceedings, not even half the number of delegates would have taken the trouble to be present at the Congress.

THE NEW YEAR'S HONOURS.

The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—The list of honours issued on the New Year's Day is not quite what we hoped to see. It might with fairness have been a little longer, so far as the non-official element in Bombay is concerned. The Hon. F. Forbes Adams has received the honour of knighthood, at which undoubtedly everyone heartily rejoices. The lion's share which that gentleman took in all matters and movements of public importance is too well known to be stated here. The unprecedented success of his long and useful career is in a great measure due to his readiness and solicitude to do good to all without distinction of caste or creed. He gave the benefit of his vast and ripe experience both to Europeans and Natives alike. Our only regret is that the Government did not see their way to reward his services earlier with the dignity now conferred on him. All is, however, well that ends well, and we heartily congratulate Sir Frank Forbes Adams for the honour done to him. He has richly deserved it. Colonel Merriman has been made a C.I.E., and it is a fitting recognition of his services as an officer in charge of new defence works. With the exception of these two names and that of Mr. L. P. Walsh, who has also been made a C.I.E., no Native of Bombay has been thought worthy of a Knighthood, a C.S.I. or C.I.E. It is to be hoped that the omission will be rectified when the Queen-Empress's birthday list of honours is gazetted. We should not, however, pass over without noticing the honour of Shams-ul-Ulama conferred upon Khan Bahadur Hoshangjee Jamatjee Dustoor as a personal distinction. Khan Bahadur Hoshangjee is the Professor of Persian in the Deccan College, Poona, and is held in high esteem by the Parsee community, and especially by the Parsees of Poona, and the honour conferred on him may be taken as a compliment to the latter.

The Gujerati says:—"The Honours' Gazette never succeeds in satisfying all parties, but some names which have been deemed worthy of honour this time may fitly be noticed here. The Hon. Forbes Adams is a distinguished member of the mercantile community in Bombay, conspicuous as well by his abilities as by the services he has rendered to the public in various capacities. The knighthood that has been conferred upon him is a well-merited honour, and we have our shrewd suspicions that Lord Reay's discerning mind had not a little to do with this appropriate recognition of merit. A distinguished representative of the Khoja community has also been honoured with the same mark of distinction, and we think Mr. Tharia Topan has been rewarded in a fitting manner for his commercial enterprise, as well as for his munificent charity. We congratulate Mr. Dustoor, the learned Persian Professor at the Deccan College, on the personal distinction of Shams-ul-Ulama gained by him. Our Bengali friends are justly proud of the learning and ability of Mr. Justice Romesh Chander Mitter, late Judge of the Calcutta High Court, and the knighthood bestowed upon him for distinguished services on the Bench will gladden many a heart throughout India.

THE SOCIAL CONFERENCE.

The Gujerati says:—The present constitution of the Social Conference is anomalous, and if its resolutions are to be taken as any genuine indications of the march of social opinion, it must be placed on a better footing. Let the leaders of advanced social thought, as well as the advocates of orthodoxy, have full opportunity of meeting each other and expressing their views publicly. As things stand at present, the Conference may consist even of ignorant schoolboys, who may vote away any proposition in any way they like. The gathering that had assembled at the Social Conference, though memorable on account of the presence of ladies for the first time on such an occasion, was certainly inferior to that which took part in the deliberations of the National Congress. From the dubious manner in which the meeting expressed their acceptance of the propositions placed before them, it is difficult to form a correct estimate of the sentiment prevailing among those present regarding the matters taken up by the Conference, and we have no means to determine what decided opinion would have been delivered by the delegates if they had cared to attend its deliberations. The English papers have announced that the resolutions were carried unanimously, while many people entertain the belief, however wrongly, that the promoters of the Conference did not wish to ascertain the feeling of the community, but simply impose certain reforms upon the Hindoo public by the suppression of genuine expression of popular views and feelings, and thus producing an impression that the community was prepared to accept legislative interference. We are sorry such a view of the proceedings of the Conference should have got abroad, as it will ultimately hinder rather than forward social reform.

MONKEYS IN SIMLA.

A Simla correspondent writes:—The monkey nuisance is again attracting much attention. They are everywhere, and having been reduced to only the bitter acorn and the wild medlar they have grown intrusive. "Race View" seems, by common consent, to have been turned into a council chamber by them, where they congregate in large numbers—a decided preference being shown for the "servants' entrance" and the small back verandah, the possession of which they seem to claim by right. "Blossington" is their playground, and the Lukkur Bazaar a source of delight, whence they raid the bunniah's shops with impunity, and do not in the least hesitate to help themselves unsolicited to dainties from the adjoining houses.

I was much amused the other day to see a theft committed from a breakfast-table, when a loaf of bread was speedily taken possession of, and carried away through the window. No sooner was the thief clear of the house, with a fox-terrier in hot pursuit, than he was surrounded by a horde of his fellow-raiders, who had from every tree and branch been eagerly watching the successful expedition, and all of whom forthwith claimed a share. A free fight ensued, while the fox-terrier worked himself into a fit by vainly barking at the thieves quarrelling vigorously on the tree. The struggle meanwhile grew furious, and among the many claimants the disputed prize fell to the ground. Sharp was the word, and the fox-terrier seized it and ran, with a score or so of infuriated monkeys at his heels. The terrier made straight for Symes and Co.'s shop portico, while the disappointed claimants angrily manned the roof and expended a good deal of energy on fruitlessly trying to pull up the corrugated iron and shake the railings, grinning and chattering like little fiends. But they failed to frighten the terrier into relinquishing his unexpectedly received chota hazri, which he demolished without the faintest regard for the noisy and angry chattering overhead.

A MADRAS paper urges, amongst other reasons, why a certain popular civilian in that Presidency should be confirmed in his acting appointment, that "he is all things to all men and all women there, and his engaging characteristics as a sportsman and a member of society are allied with a reputation as a public functionary that does him much credit."

The Civil and Military Gazette says:—"If the statement that the Khan of Shahzadgi is the latest of the refugees whom Umra Khan's victories have driven to become petitioners for British bounty is true, and if his antecedents are correctly given by our frontier correspondent, he is certainly not a fit and proper person for the British authorities to countenance and assist. He is directly accused of inciting the trans-frontier tribes to one well-known outrage, and of acts of treacherous hostility towards travellers whom he denounced as British spies. His case, and that of the notorious Nur Muhammad, might be taken as proofs that the Afghans think there is no limit, at any rate, to the clemency of the British Government."

A CORRESPONDENT at Muscat states that the cordiality between their Highnesses the Sultan of Zanzibar and Muscat continues as before. The present Sultan, Syed Khalifa Bin Syed Saeed, K.C.G., of Zanzibar, has purchased a small steamer from the missionaries for presentation to the Sultan of Muscat. The present sultan Syed Fasul is greatly pleased with the new Acting Political Agent, Major Yates, C.S.I., C.M.G., who has taken charge of his office under good auspices, and it is firmly believed that his amiable disposition and tact will tend much for peace and welfare of the Native chiefs and their subjects, who firmly hope that this worthy officer may be appointed permanently to the post.

LORD LANSDOWNE ON EDUCATION.

In the current number of the Calcutta Review Mr. A. C. Tute in discussing Lord Lansdowne's recent address at the Punjab University Convocation, in reference to the demand for employment in the public services, remarks :—

We are educating at a cost, which is to all intents and purposes nominal, a number of young men every year, and we are turning them out with a rooted idea that the Government which has educated them is bound to provide for them. This has not only resulted in a number of men forsaking the callings which their fathers followed before them and rushing into the race for Government employment, but so far has the demoralisation spread that men who can well afford to pay for their sons' education seek by every means in their power to accept and to claim gratuitous education for those youths. The great aim in many municipalities is to increase the facilities for English education at the expense of the ratepayers—in other words, to provide almost gratuitous education for the sons of the bettermost classes of the community. It is as though in England gentlemen who could well afford to educate their sons were to agitate for the extension of the Board-school system to save the expense of a public school education for their children. It will, of course, be answered that there are no independent schools in this country corresponding with our English public schools, and this brings me to the point which I wish to bring forward. It may have been necessary, and doubtless was necessary when education was in its infancy, to provide schools and colleges if for no other reason than to show the people how to work an education system utterly foreign to them. That necessity has now passed away. Education has taken root amongst the people. The tree needs no longer the protection of fascines. Higher education should now, as far as aid from either Government or local funds is concerned, be allowed to take its own course. It may seem strange to include local funds amongst the sources from which educational aid should not be given. But the reason is obvious ; as long as the desire to spend the money of the local ratepayer on schools which are destined to benefit those who can well afford to pay for higher education prevails, as it undoubtedly does in most of our local bodies, so long must this desire be restrained by law. Local bodies should be compelled to provide primary education, and until this and the more legitimate work of road-making, sanitation, &c., were thoroughly carried out, higher education should be paid for by those who want it, and not from the general fund contributed by the ratepayer. The present demand for education at a nominal cost is unhealthily abnormal ; compliance with it is nothing more or less than the encouragement of a system of educational pauperisation, of which men, for whom such a system was never intended, unblushingly avail themselves. The trade of the schoolmaster, like every other trade, should now be free, and be subject to the natural laws of demand and supply. There are enough educated men about the country now who could earn a respectable living as schoolmasters, and quite enough to supply the real demand for education as apart from the unhealthy demand for a chance to enter the race for Government employment. Were education to be left to fight its own battle to-morrow there would be no diminution whatever in the number of the students who seek learning for learning's sake, and who would pay a proper price for its acquisition. There would, of course, be a great falling off in the number of those who see that they can get educated for nothing and leave those pursuits in life for which they are best adapted in order to become clerks in Government offices, or get any employment under the magical term "Sirkari Naukari." I am far from advocating any system which would leave the masses in ignorance. It is the duty of every civilised Government to ensure that everyone of its subjects should know how to read and write ; my remarks therefore do not apply to primary education. I would even go further and say that, in the absence of the great Universities with which pious founders of old, and the rich men of more modern times have endowed the United Kingdom, we are more or less bound to provide Universities for the conferring of degrees on those who had qualified themselves to receive them. There must be some recognised hall-mark, and Government is, in the absence of any other recognised body, bound to support and encourage Universities for the purpose of giving that stamp to those who have worked well and honestly to earn it. I submit, however, with all diffidence, that the time is now ripe for leaving every school between the Patshallah and the University to its own resources. There is certainly not a town in Bengal where, if the zillah school were closed to-morrow, there would not, before the end of the week, have sprung up one or more educational institutions, the masters of which would be earning a respectable living. The wealthier portion of the community would, it is true, have to pay them, and, in fact, all those who desired higher education would have to obtain it, as they obtain every other luxury, by paying for it. If this were done, more local money could be spent on extending primary education ; and, perhaps, the question of sanitation might come within measurable distance of solution. At any rate, the crowd of office-seekers would be sensibly diminished. The holders of University degrees, who had received their education as they do in other countries at their own expense, would be of a very different class to what the present men are. They would be fewer in number, it is true, but would be of the stamp of men who now ornament the various professions in this country, and many of whom are excellent public servants of the Crown. We should get rid of the masses who, having been provided with a free education, now turn round and demand State employment as a right.

THE CALCUTTA TURF CLUB.

THE "PRESTO" CASE.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 6.

The inquiry into the running of Presto in the race for the Walter Locke Cup in the second day's races at Calcutta has been concluded by the Calcutta Race Stewards. It has transpired that they entirely exonerate Lord William Beresford from all blame, and consider there is no evidence to convict the jockey Dunn of any other fault than silliness in not riding out for a place when he found he could not win. They severely censure Dunn for this conduct.

The inquiry has been most searching and patient, and the character and standing of the gentlemen who constitute the court are so high that their judgment will be received with satisfaction ; and his many friends will be pleased that Lord William's character is pronounced stainless. The full decision will be published later.

In connection with the subject of this inquiry it may be well to mention that the practice of easing off horses when their jockeys find they cannot win is common all over India and is done openly, place money thus being lost. This decision declares such a proceeding to be improper, and those who commit the act are liable to a severe penalty.

JANUARY 7.

The text of the decision of the Calcutta race stewards in the "Presto" case is as follows :—"In our opinion the running of Presto in the Walter Locke Cup was such as to excite unfavourable comment, and to call for inquiry. The substantial question for our decision is, whether Presto was or was not deliberately pulled by Dunn, in order to lose the race. We find that he was not pulled, but that Dunn ceased to persevere with the horse far too early in the race ; for which he will be severely censured. We entirely exonerate Lord William Beresford from any imputation under which he may be supposed to rest in connection with the running of Presto, of which horse he has the management." This decision was unanimous, being signed by all the seven stewards who held the inquiry.

THE CENTRAL ASIAN RAILWAY.—According to a letter from Charju, published in the Ocraina, a new Russian journal lately started at Samarkand, the extension of the Central Asian Railway from Samarkand to Tashkend has been finally decided on, and the work will be taken in hand, under the superintendence of General Annenkoff, in May next. The line, it is said, will cross the Syr Daria (Jaxartes) at Khojend, a town of great antiquity, and once of commercial importance, on the road to Khokand. There is a local tradition that Khojend was founded by a daughter of Adam named Khojianda.

The Cheap Passage Association is such a good thing that one feels sorry that an element of discord, or what may turn into an element of discord, has appeared among those who are promoting it. It seems to be generally realised that a cheap passage must be a slow passage. It may, of course, be a most comfortable passage, good steamer, first-rate food and wine, pleasant officers, and everything well found, but it must be slow. A high rate of speed will hardly be guaranteed for Rs. 275 or Rs. 300 per passage. The very numerous officers, both civil and military, who run home for three months, will still have to go by P. and O. They will not care to save a few rupees and run the risk of losing their appointments or their pay by being over time. It must be remembered that the military rule about privilege leave is as follows :—An officer going on three months' privilege leave, of course enjoys his full pay and allowances all the time. But let him overstay his leave by twenty-four hours, and the Pay Department is down on him at once, cutting him all his full pay allowance, converting his three months' leave into furlough, and only allowing him his English furlough pay for the whole time—a tremendous difference. So it is to be hoped that the Association won't try and do too much at first, but that they will rather aim at getting a reasonable reduction out of the large companies—those with the big, swift steamers. Otherwise, only those who have plenty of time will be able to avail themselves of the Association passages.

THE INDIAN SECTION OF THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

THE Report of the Honorary Director of the British-Indian Section of the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1889 to the Committee for that Section is not very pleasant reading, it being he confession of an undoubted failure. It may be remembered that when the British Government declined to take any part in the Exhibition, a Committee to administer the British Section and a fund to guarantee the Committee against loss were formed by the Lord Mayor, Sir Polydore de Keyser, but this fund was applicable to the English exhibitors alone, and could not be used for the purposes of Indian Exhibitors. Upon this an Honorary Committee, composed of gentlemen connected with India, was formed in the interests of the latter. This Committee consisted of Sir George Birdwood, K.C.I.E. (Chairman), Sir Roper Lethbridge, C.I.E., M.P., Mr. J. M. Maclean, M.P., Mr. H. S. King, C.I.E., M.P., Mr. W. L. Watson, Mr. Robert Miller, Mr. John Muir, Mr. Purdon Clarke, C.I.E., and Mr. Vincent Robinson, who undertook, at the request of the Chairman, what turned out to be the very thankless position of Honorary Director of the Section. At first matters went on excellently well. A scheme was evolved by which a sufficient sum of money was provided for the erection of a characteristic building containing twenty shops, which were to be let for £100 each, and a large central hall and verandah, with bars for the sale and consumption of tea, at a rental of £1,500, the estimated total (£3,500) for the various expenses of the Section being thus provided for. Mr. Vincent Robinson commences his Report with congratulations, on the grounds that for the first time in the history of International Exhibitions India has been represented on a strictly commercial basis, without State aid or a public guarantee of any kind; and in his second paragraph he says that he thinks the Committee are entitled to score "a marked success." This note of gladness changes immediately to one of sorrow when we get to a paragraph a little further on, for then we read:—

"So far the India Committee must be congratulated on the success of its arrangements. It had formulated a scheme, and proved its practicability by covering the liabilities involved. But at this period a weak point in the organisation developed itself—that of consenting to the Mansion House Committee assuming the controlling power. Henceforward further progress was checked, and the valuable counsels of the specialist India Committee rendered practically useless.

"The first indications of this were evident when it became a question of appointing a qualified resident manager for the Indian Section. Such aid had been found essential in all previous Exhibitions, and the India Committee agreed with the Tea District Association in the present case to share the services of a gentleman who had been engaged in the tea and silk trade in India for thirteen years. This exceedingly satisfactory arrangement was reported to the Mansion House Committee, by whom it was vetoed. It was the old difficulty of want of knowledge of Indian affairs, joined with the most perfect confidence in dealing with them, which all those who really understand India so deplore, and suffer from so much in their relations with the home Government, especially in commercial connections."

From this time everything appears to have gone wrong. We read of "misunderstandings and delays with the exhibitors and contractors," and of "much valuable time lost." The manager appointed by the Tea District Association, who rented part of the Central Hall—the verandah and tea bars—fell ill; and the Association, instead of retaining the management in their own hands, placed it in the charge of a City firm, who made it over to a well-known company of Restaurant and Railway Refreshment-Room contractors. The French Press had designated the Indian Pavilion the "Temple of Tea;" but under this new arrangement it became the Temple of Beer, which no doubt paid the contractors better. A prohibitive price was put upon the sale of tea, and the intention of the India Committee to make the Indian cup, which cheers without inebriating, popular with the visitors to the Exhibition was thus entirely frustrated. But there was more trouble than this. Mr. Robinson complains that the Indian Section was from the first in a false position, more particularly in its relations with the French authorities. Its Honorary Director had no official standing; all important matters had, as a consequence, to pass through the English Committee; and "in the case of any claims which endangered the popularity of the latter with the French authorities—a reluctance generally insurmountable—barred any pressure to an issue."

Sir Polydore de Keyser has just been entertaining the French Ambassador at the Mansion House, and many complimentary things were said there about the interchange of courtesies and cordial feelings brought about by this said Paris Exhibition. So far as the British Indian Section was concerned, the Honorary Director has in the Report under review very little to say of courtesies or cordiality—but "contrariwise," as Alice has it in "Wonderland." He mentions that the French Administration, while it exacted Customs duties, which averaged 45 per cent., also enforced most vexatious regulations with respect to the delivery of goods for which the right to sell had been paid dearly in advance. But this was not all. Mr. Robinson goes on to detail a burden of troubles and difficulties which the British Indian Section had to meet with:—

"Pondicherry goods were smuggled into the Indian Section from the French Colonial Section, duty free, during the whole period of the Exhibition. On the other hand, the British Indian exhibitors were paying very heavy duties on precisely similar goods shipped from British ports. The French colony naturally had the sympathies of the French authorities, and nothing but the disinclination of the English delegates to press the matter on the French authorities prevented this abuse from being remedied. The latter also enforced a rule for closing the Indian Section at an early hour, which they suspended in favour of the Cairo-street, the Marocco, and other Oriental bazaars; and thus during the long summer evenings our Indian exhibitors had their shops forcibly closed, whilst their neighbours kept open until eleven. A more serious complaint was with respect to certain doors which, in defiance of the general regulations, were kept closed during the whole of the Exhibition. This diverted the stream of people coming across from the Porte Rapp, which would, but for the obstruction thus caused, have spread equally down towards the Cairo-street, and up towards the Indian Section. The two doors leading to the Indian Section were kept determinedly fastened, and the only answer to complaints and remonstrances was, that some Russian exhibitors objected to the dust and wind they admitted when open. In no other part of the Exhibition were doors and passages closed; and as the stream of people was diverted by their closure in the direction of the Cairo-street, it seemed that those interested in that commercial speculation had sufficient influence to keep the doors closed at the cost of our Indian exhibitors. It is not, therefore, surprising that loss of prestige should have befallen the Indian section, or that the police authorities and the douane followed the initiative set by M. Berger. This was evident in the visit of the President of the Republic to the Indian Palace not being even notified to the English delegates, who remained entirely ignorant of it until the day after. The police on this occasion took possession of the Palace, expelled the public, closed the doors for several hours against every one, no access to the place being possible. Proper official notices were invariably given under similar circumstances to the other sections. This affords a conspicuous instance of the Indian section having been so ignored by the English delegates that the French authorities accorded it no place in the Official List."

"For myself," adds the unfortunate Honorary Director, "I do not disguise that from the first I have laboured under a deep sense of disappointment and humiliation."

And the Report concludes with this very sensible moral:—"It is obvious that in any future Exhibition, if India is to be successfully represented on an independent and self-acting and commercial footing, the Committee entrusted with the administration of the Section must be endowed with full and absolute power to manage its own business. There must be no more any dual control."

It is a pity, however, that Mr. Robinson's Committee had not come to this determination in the first instance.

THE LATE LORD NAPIER.

Our readers may have noticed in the Pall Mall Gazette of last Tuesday certain "Personal Reminiscences of Lord Napier; By One Who Knew Him." It might be observed that the notes open rather abruptly; the explanation will appear when we say that the paragraph quoted below was the opening one of that series, but which the Editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, on the plea of space or other less obvious excuse, thought fit to exclude. It will be seen that the portion we now give from a correspondent was required to give completeness to the retrospect:—

"It was at the siege of Multan—that is the second and regular investment—that the then rising subaltern engineer officer came into prominent notice. When General Whish realised what a serious business he had in hand he wrote to headquarters, saying, 'Send me so and so (naming, with other corps, two or three Bombay regiments) and Robert Napier of the Engineers.' It was mainly by engineering and artillery that Mulraj's great stronghold was reduced in January, 1849. After the Punjab was annexed the most effectual of 'the resources of civilisation' brought to bear in the settlement of the province was that of road-making, extensively carried out by Napier. Once at Poona in conversation with him I alluded to that great work—the Grand Trunk-road, and queried how in those days he got together the right sort of men for the detail work and supervision. In response he remarked that, 'when indenting on headquarters for men, I said you need not send me great mathematicians; send me men who have not gone through fluxions.' Thus the work was done effectually and speedily, the energy of the commander being infused into all his assistants, including the rank and file of the Pioneers and Sappers."

"On the same occasion—those were peaceful and hopeful times under plain John Lawrence as Governor-General—I drew Napier out on the subject of irrigation works, in which I found he cherished deep interest. He remarked that 'it was of little use going on with intermittent grants dependent on the revenues of each year. He said the proper course was to form a permanent plan with a settled special fund as a basis.' Some attempts were made towards that policy, but as irrigation and water-storage has been too often regarded as the step-child in Indian administration, what has been done—in the aggregate no mean result—has had to depend on intermittent grants that have been stopped whenever the cold fit came on."

CHEAP FEEDER RAILROADS.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—In England the use of feeder railways is well understood, but in India travellers must have noticed their absence with something like dismay; in Parliament no one thinks of asking how stations on the main lines are to be reached.

For instance, we have made in Burma two railways from the city of Rangoon, of which we are very proud: one to Prome, on the Irrawadi river, and the other to Mandalay, the capital of Upper Burma. When a column has received orders to march halfway to Chittagong, it cannot get through the jungle without slow and painful labour for two or three months. At last a narrow pathway is made by which mules and donkeys can progress, but the distance is found to be seventy miles, although as the crow flies it is only thirty-five. From Kan, on the Myittha river, westward, everything had to be carried on men's heads, and the coolies or porters had to eat half of their loads! And yet we call ourselves a military nation!

All over India the want of feeder roads is urgent. We require as many miles of feeders as have been already made by our cousins in the United States. The miseries of merchants in India in transporting heavy goods from and to railway stations require remedy; through water, through mud, and through jungle.

In order to construct cheap feeders we must have cheap iron for rails. There is abundance of excellent iron in India.

Mr. Clements Markham informed the English public in 1874 that iron is widely scattered over India, and has been manufactured from time immemorial. But the work of smelting, instead of being undertaken by great capitalists, has been carried on by poor people of very low caste. They have small clay furnaces with wood charcoal for fuel, and the blast is caused by foot or hand bellows. At the end of eight or ten hours from 10 lbs. to 20 lbs. of iron of good quality are obtained, but there is often difficulty in purchasing charcoal at a reasonable price.

The failures of the Indian Government to produce iron in large quantities have proved that it is incapable of undertaking the work with any reasonable prospect of success. In the Madras Presidency, near Salem, failure was attributed to the distance of the works from the source of supply! Would a business man have committed so great a blunder? In Kumaon failure was attributed, I believe, to deficiency of fuel. In the Nerbudda Valley Government suddenly dismissed Mr. Mitander (p. 104 of Clement Markham's Report), and closed the works. Having got hold of a scientific metallurgist, Government dismissed him.

In an official report recently published, we are told that the abundant iron ore at Burrakur Ranegunge only produces a small quantity of cast-iron; this official statement remarks that there is a want of enterprise in developing Indian iron.

Now, I ask, is not iron more necessary and useful than rubies? An iron road from Pakoko, on the Irrawadi, to Chittagong, would save the lives of many valuable English and Scotch soldiers. Cannot Government send to Middlesbrough, or to Glasgow, for a man who understands something? Is the abundant ore in the Saletekri hills (between Nagpore and the Chatteesgurr plain) and at Aurunga, and Daltongunge, at Mopani and Wun, at Punagurr and Burwai, and in the Damooda Valley, to remain unused till we lose India?

What we require is a clear statement of the iron resources of India; and a translation of such statement into Hindustani should be freely circulated.

At a very moderate cost feeder railways can be constructed. Every Native out of 250 millions is anxious to possess an iron plate for cooking chupatties.—Your obedient servant, January 23rd.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

A LARGE amount of machinery for the manufacture of cartridges for the new magazine rifle will reach India shortly.

COLONEL SANFORD and Captain Hext during their tour in Burma will inspect all the important river stations on the Chinwin as well as those on the Irrawaddy.

OWING to the continued sickness among the Punjab coolies on the Chin-Lushai Expedition, measures will probably be taken to replace them by men better able to stand the climate.

No official intimation has yet reached India of Major-General Montmorency's appointment to the Bengal Division, which falls vacant in April; but, as we have stated before, he is considered the most likely man.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL J. S. F. MACKENZIE Military Accounts Department, lately employed on special duty on Sapper and Miner forms, has proceeded on sick leave to England, and will retire from the service at the end of his leave.

THE Bombay and Bengal Mountain Batteries have just been renumbered in order to avoid the confusion of having two Nos. 1 and 2. There are now eight mountain batteries, including the four in the Punjab Field Force, and they will be numbered from 1 to 8 consecutively.

THE numerous friends of Brigade-Surgeon D. R. W. Davies will learn with regret that he lies in a precarious condition at Meerut. Abscess of the liver appears to have supervened, and an operation was undertaken on the 1st instant to relieve it, but without success.

CAPTAIN K. FOSS, who has been prominent in pushing the A. I. P. A., has, the Civil and Military Gazette hears, patented an improved pyrometer which, it is claimed, is likely to save Government Rs. 25,000 per annum. The trials of the invention commenced at Umballa a short time ago. The same officer is also patenting an improved water keg for mule carriage, a new form of army rations, and something which is as yet a secret. If the last is successful, the Anglo-Indian public may owe to him "cheap passages" by land as well as by sea.

THE Muridki Camp commenced with the Proclamation parade and a review by the Lieutenant-Governor of the nine cavalry regiments assembled. Seven batteries of artillery, five regiments of British infantry, one of native cavalry, and nine of native infantry made an imposing force for the New Year's parade at Rawalpindi: but as a spectacle this was no doubt equalled by the parade of nine regiments of cavalry at Muridki. With these great camps not far off, the parade at Mian Mir was not only dwarfed, but was also deprived, by the counter-attraction of Muridki Camp, of the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor and Staff.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Pioneer—"In none of your correspondence on longevity in India has any reference been made to the case of the late Lieutenant George Roan Duncan. Lieutenant Duncan entered the Army in 1816—the year after Waterloo—coming out to India in the following year, 1817. He never left the country nor was he ever at a hill station. He nevertheless retained his faculties—and in a large measure his energies—to the end, dying at this station, where he had continuously resided for a period of over half a century, in January last, at the advanced age of ninety-five years. I think it may fairly be claimed for it that this is the most striking case of European longevity in India."

FUNERAL OF LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

The remains of Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala were on Tuesday interred in St. Paul's Cathedral. At an early hour the body was taken from Eaton-square to the Chapel of St. Peter ad Vincula, which occupies the north-west corner of the Tower Quadrangle, the coffin being conveyed on a gun-carriage drawn by six horses, and accompanied by the proper complement of mounted men of the Royal Horse Artillery, and an escort of the 12th Lancers. In the chapel there was no religious ceremony, but a guard of honour of the 1st Battalion Coldstream Guards was in readiness to receive the remains, accompanied by the band and the regimental colour. The brief "lying in state" in the Chapel of St. Peter ad Vincula being at an end, preparations were made, at eleven o'clock, for the slow march to St. Paul's. At a quarter past eleven the coffin was once more placed on the gun-carriage, and the mourners re-entered the carriages. They were Col. Hon. Robert Napier, the chief mourner, in the uniform of the Bengal Staff, Lady Napier, Major Napier, who wore the uniform of the 10th Hussars, and Lieut. Napier, of the Central India Horse. First in the procession rode two General Officers, followed by a half troop of Lancers. Next marched 500 men of the Royal Engineers, with their arms reversed; and behind them came a contingent of officers of the 3rd London Rifles, succeeding whom were the Corps of Commissionaires. Behind them marched the bands of the Foot Guards—Grenadiers, Coldstream, Scots Guards, and Royal Engineers. After the bands rode a squadron of the 12th Lancers, under the command of Major Archdale. Then came the gun-carriage, horsed by the J Battery of the Royal Horse Artillery, lying on which was the coffin, adorned by the Union Jack, the cocked hat, and the sword. The bearers, furnished by the Royal Engineers, marched on either side. Lord Napier's black charger, with empty saddle and the riding-boots fastened the reverse way to the stirrups by black ribbons, was led by two troopers of the Horse Guards. Then came Maj.-General Philip Smith, commanding the Home District, Lieut.-Gen. Higginson, Maj. Gen. Milman, and other officers of high rank in the Army. The carriages, in which were the mourners, succeeded, followed by the Queen's state carriage and a number of private vehicles, and the rear of the cortège was composed of more troopers of the 12th Lancers. The route was kept by the Grenadier Guards, Scots Guards, the Coldstream Guards, and the 3rd London Rifles, while bodies of Royal Horse Guards and 1st and 2nd Life Guards were massed at the principal junctions of thoroughfares. About twelve o'clock the band of the Royal Engineers stationed at the foot of the steps of St. Paul's Cathedral heralded the approach of the funeral cortège, which was met at the entrance by the Duke of Cambridge (as representing the Queen), the Prince of Wales, Prince George of Wales, Prince Christian, and the Duke of Teck. The arrival was signalled by heliograph from the Cathedral to the Monument, and thence to the Tower, where a salute of seventeen guns was fired. The body having been removed from the gun-carriage, was borne into the Cathedral on the shoulders of the warrant officers of the Royal Engineers. A procession was then quickly formed, and, headed by the Cathedral clergy and choir, singing the opening sentences of the Burial Service, moved slowly up the nave, which was lined on either side by a double rank of Royal Engineers resting on reversed arms, and a detachment of the Yeoman of the Guard. Following the clergy was borne the coffin, behind which were General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B., carrying the coronet and cushion of the late peer, General Sir C. W. D. Staveley, G.C.B., carrying the Field-Marshal's baton, and Lieut.-General Sir John Watson, V.C., K.C.B., Bo.S.C., bearing on a cushion the many orders and medals received by Lord Napier. The pall-bearers were:—

THE end of last month saw the sentence of the General Court-Martial on Captain Moberley, R.A., confirmed. It was the lightest possible for the offence—dismissal, and everybody will be glad that it was no heavier. As is well known, the difference between the sentence of dismissal and cashiering is this:—An officer who is cashiered can never be employed again in any capacity under Government. An officer who is only dismissed can be so employed. There were various reasons why the sentence on Captain Moberley was a comparatively light one, which will readily occur to those who have followed the case. The singular absence of all motive for taking the money, for such a sum could easily have been borrowed in the bazaar; the total absence of all attempt at concealment; and the manly way in which Captain Moberley, at the Court-Martial, took the whole blame on his own shoulders. All these things point very plainly to the conclusion that the act was one of those inexplicable lapses not uncommon in our complex human nature, and which stir the mind to wonder and pity.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances dating elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, and the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London. REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHOEA." From SYMES & CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London. Dear Sir,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a under sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 St. Russell St., W.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PAINKILLER in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 4d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 St. Russell St., W.

The Parents' Cabinet of Amusement and Instruction.

BY

MARTHA HILL and FRIENDS.

NEW EDITION.

EDITED BY

CONSTANCE HILL.

The School Board Chronicle says:—"It is a library of bright, lively, wholesome reading in short pieces—about twenty separate tales, fables, poems, articles, and sketches to the volume. Now that the work has been so handsomely and happily revised, no school library will be quite what it should be without it."

The Guardian says:—"We hope that the children of the present generation will welcome, as we remember doing, 'The Parents' Cabinet.' So much did we love the book that the sight is a real refreshment."

The Englishwoman's Review says:—"The work will be prized, we believe, by a new circle of readers for its own sake, as well as by those who re-read it to recall the impressions of their childhood."

The Scotsman says:—"All the articles are written in popular language, being well brought within the capacity of those for whom the work has been compiled. . . . Will prove one of the most popular productions of the season for the rising generation."

The Daily News says:—"Each book is complete in itself, in token of which the order is indicated, not by figures, but by stars. . . . Mrs. Hill was the inventor of this convenient method. . . . May be separated without assuming the appearance of odd volumes."

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm? The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation. SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

GOORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,
PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—The UNIVERSAL APPETISER—has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of CREATING or RESTORING the APPETITE; in fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and inquiring about the new Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 17th Jan.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 15th Jan.; and from Calcutta to the 14th Jan.

WHEN the present Overland Mail left India H.E. the Viceroy was suffering from low fever of a type common in Calcutta at that season of the year.

THE Duchess of Connaught was also slightly indisposed.

THE Budget Statement will be made in Council towards the close of March.

ALL the local Governments have now furnished their reports on the points connected with the excise administration of India raised by Mr. Caine and others in Parliament.

THE annual meeting in connection with Lady Dufferin's Fund will be held at Calcutta in the first week of February. The report will be ready for issue this month.

NEXT year a Camp similar to Muridki will probably be held in Central India, when Bombay and Madras regiments may have the benefit of General Luck's smart handling.

The question of further reducing the European garrison at Delhi has been lately under discussion. The conclusion appears to be that things should remain as they are.

THE projected railway from Peshawur to Jamrud will probably not be proceeded with until the feasibility of a more northern line along the Cabul river route has been tested.

THE Bank of Bombay on the 9th inst. raised its rate of interest on demand loans on Government paper to 8 per cent.

THE Bank of Madras has declared a dividend of 10 per cent., and raised the reserve to Rs. 13,50,000.

MILITARY manœuvres have been sanctioned, with a view of showing how Calcutta could be defended against an attack from the sea, which will last from Feb. 4th to 14th.

AN inspecting officer for the selected troops of the Nizam's army will probably be shortly appointed.

THE Cashmere official who was deputed to the Bengal silk districts to pick up hints as to rearing, &c., has returned to Srinagar.

THERE is some talk of establishing regular postal communication between Peshawur and Chitral.

At the Muridki Cavalry Camp Major Knox, C.B., R.H.A., was thrown from his horse, and broke his collar-bone.

FOUR hundred Native levies have been sent from Goa to Mozambique by the Portuguese Government.

It has been decided that the new rates of allowance, both for travelling and the stay in Simla, will come into force with the next exodus. The committee is in favour of a consolidated allowance for residence at Simla.

It is notified that Her Majesty's Secretary of State has sanctioned the extension of the Sind-Sagar branch of the North-Western Railway, from Mianwali to Mari, near Kalabagh, a distance of twenty-seven miles, at an estimated cost of Rs. 25,00,000.

ALL the Local Governments have now furnished their reports regarding the police reorganisation question, thus clearing the way for any executive action the Government of India may think necessary.

REPLIES to the inquiries issued by Mr. Fitzpatrick regarding the expediency of fresh labour legislation for Assam are now being received by Mr. Quinton, who will eventually submit a final report to the Government of India on the subject.

THERE will be no Chapter of the Star of India or Indian Empire this season in Calcutta, as there are no Knight Commanders on the spot to be invested.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has abandoned his intention of visiting Ranchi, as the agitation among the Kols has subsided.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITTE has left Rangoon for Upper Burma.

MR. QUINTON, Chief Commissioner of Assam, resumes his tour in Northern Assam.

MR. ALEXANDER, Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, retires early in March, and will probably be succeeded by Mr. C. Quinn, Magistrate of Patna, now on leave in England.

GENERAL SIR GEORGE GREAVES has appointed Major Spratt, Royal Engineers, to be Military Secretary on his staff at Bombay, and Major Clowes, 8th Hussars, to be Aide-de-Camp. His other Aide-de-Camp will be taken from the Bombay Army.

MAJOR HILDEBRAND, R.E., is likely to succeed Colonel Nicholson as Assistant Adjutant General at Army Headquarters, when the latter becomes Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief.

LORD AVA has been attached to the Lieut.-Governor's Staff as extra Aide-de-Camp during the Prince's visit to the North-West Provinces.

LIEUT. J. RAMSAY, Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General at Indore, has been incapacitated for work, and is obliged to go home on sick leave. Lieut. Kaye succeeds him.

MR. LYON Private Secretary to the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, proceeds home on leave in the spring. Mr. Elliott Colvin, now serving in the Biluchistan Agency, will act in the appointment.

SIRDAR SIR DEVA SING, President of the late Council of Regency, in the Patiala State, is dead.

THE scheme for the redistribution of the frontier police on the Chittagong Hills will be considered by the Bengal Government on the conclusion of the current military operations in the Lushai country.

THE Government of India have addressed a circular letter to the Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras Chambers of Commerce asking for expressions of opinion upon a proposal to increase that portion of the paper currency reserve which is invested in Government securities. The maximum limit of investment now is six crores of rupees, which sum was fixed in 1870, when the note circulation was only 8½ crores. This year the circulation is 16 crores, and the Government propose taking legislative power to raise the limit of investment to eight crores. The invested reserve would, however, be increased by only one crore at present.

THE projected railway from Peshawur to Jamrud will probably not be proceeded with until the feasibility of a more northern line along the Kabul River route has been tested.

THE English Postal authorities have decided that the present arrangement in connection with the departure of the mails shall remain in force until the setting-in of the monsoon. After that Friday will be the day of departure from Bombay during the rainy season, and Saturday during the remainder of the year.

NOTES.

THE news from India by the Overland Mail has been nearly all anticipated by the Press and Reuter's telegrams. There is great rejoicing in Bombay that the proposal to make Sunday the day of departure for the English mails has not been carried out. The mails will continue to leave that city on Fridays, as at present, until Sept. 27. On that day a new fair weather service will begin, Saturdays at 2 P.M. being then the time of departure.

MR. BRADLAUGH, whose departure was the inspiration of a Native poet thus,

"Champion of India!!

Good-bye.

A nation's gratitude

is said to have had some presents forced upon him which he will have some difficulty in knowing how to deal with—for instance, a prayer carpet. But besides this puzzle to him the Times of India reports that he had some thirty-five silver caskets, which had been presented along with addresses, and that owing to the silver duties these must cost him a little fortune before he can call them his own. How the honourable member has got out of this difficulty we cannot say; but the Bombay paper declares that he has been completely won over to the necessity of the immediate abolition of the duty on Indian silver work.

"THE Indian Club, in Whitehall, will entertain Lord Harris on Friday, the 21st inst., at a dinner. The Earl of Northbrook is to preside, and Lord Randolph Churchill is expected to speak. His lordship has appointed Colonel F. W. Rhodes, of the Royal Dragoons, as his military secretary." This is what the Daily Telegraph tells its readers this morning. But, perhaps, regarding the military secretary, the information intended to be conveyed was that Lord Harris, not Lord Randolph, has appointed Colonel F. W. Rhodes, &c.

THE Pioneer thus "gushes":—"So far, we have spoken of the chief features of the Calcutta Carnival, but not of its chiefest, for even with a Royal Prince to grace it, without the Viceregal hospitalities, the occasion would have lacked half its lustre. Never were the wide doors of Government House opened wider nor oftener, nor have those hospitalities been more gracefully and lavishly exercised, nor more gratefully and cordially accepted. It may be said indeed—it is said from the housetops in Calcutta—that, alike in a social and personal sense, Lord Lansdowne and Lord Lansdowne's charming family circle have achieved all unconsciously a popularity that has almost reached the point of peril."

SEEING how many columns of the Indian papers are now daily devoted to chronicling the pleasure trip of Prince Albert Victor, it is somewhat of the nature of amusing impudence to read the following in one of those papers from the pen of "our own correspondent":—"The Emperor of Germany is fast becoming a nuisance to the newspapers readers of the world. Why we should all be accurately informed of the marchings and countermarchings, and of every petty little journey to every peddling little German principality that this bumptious boy performs, I am at a total loss to conceive. Fully one-quarter of the foreign telegrams relate to his Imperial Majesty, who could not obtain more attention if he were Frederick the Great himself."

WE observe, from a notification published in the Calcutta Gazette, that a Horse and Cattle Show for all India is to be held on the return of Prince Albert Victor to Bombay in March next. The exhibits are to comprise the best specimens according to the following classification:—English thoroughbreds and half-breds, Australian and other Colonials, Arabs, Persians and country-breds, and harness horses, hunters, chargers, and hacks of all sorts. The Bombay committee ask that all noblemen and gentlemen who may be disposed to exhibit will send as many animals as possible of each class, and in order that the necessary arrangements may be made in time, they desire to be informed how many animals, and of what class, intending exhibitors will be able to send.

FRIDAY night's Gazette announces the promotion of Lieut.-General G. T. Chesney, K.C.B., R. (late Bengal) E., to be Colonel Commandant, vice the late Lord Napier of Magdala. Lieut.-General Chesney entered the Bengal Engineers in December, 1848, obtaining his promotion to the rank of Lieut.-General in March, 1887. He was Secretary of the Military Department of the Government of India from December, 1880, to July, 1886, and was appointed an ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-General in June, 1886. He was present at the battle of Budleekeserai, and served as Brigade-Major of Engineers throughout the siege of Delhi, and was twice severely wounded at the assault, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving the medal with clasp and brevet of major.

THE Mahratta announces the death of the adopted son of Nana Fadnavis, the Minister of the last of the Peishwas. Madhavrao Ballal, alias Raosaheb Fadnavis, who had the high honour of being given in adoption to that historical personage, breathed his last on the 27th of December. He was heir to a noble name; but in these days of civilisation, when everything is changed, he found himself left behind. He led a quiet life, was in his own way generous, and was liked by those who formed the small circle of his friends. The small jahagir that he enjoyed was granted to him by the British Government. He received but little property by inheritance from his father. This fact, says the Poona paper, ought to shut up the mouths of those calumniators who say that Nana did not neglect the vast opportunity he had of enriching himself.

It has hitherto been the practice, we believe, with officers under the Government of India to reply direct to communications received from Foreign States and Colonial Governments without a reference to the Home authorities. The matter having come to the knowledge of the Secretary of State Lord Cross has addressed a despatch to the Viceroy deprecating such proceedings as irregular, and wishing it to be understood that in future all such communications should be sent only through the Secretary of State.

It is fortunate for the artillery that it has just now an artillery officer in command in India. It is no secret that for many years past our batteries in India were wretchedly armed, and quite unfit to take the field against such an army as that which they might at any moment be called upon to face on the frontier. It has been greatly due to Sir Frederick Roberts's persistent demand for an improved field-gun that the issue of the new 12-pr. has been hurried on. It is satisfactory to know that artillery progress is not ending there, but that the utmost that encouragement can do is being done to increase the efficiency of batteries in India.

THE editor of the Times of India, who is paying Mauritius a visit, found among the local records some suggestive correspondence between Lord Bathurst and the Mauritius Government, which shows how in former days Ministers took care of their friends. "I wrote some time back," the Minister said, addressing Governor Farquhar, "to inform you that his Majesty's Government desired you to find a place as one of the Chief Clerks for Mr. Bund. You have, I am astonished to hear, given him a very inferior appointment. I did not specify his salary, for the Chief Clerks all draw £450 per annum. Give him this emolument at once, and the moment a more remunerative appointment falls vacant, his Majesty's Government desire that Mr. Bund may be nominated to it." To this rebuke the Governor replied that Mr. Bund was utterly unfit to carry out any duties of any kind. He was perfectly useless in the minor post to which he had originally been appointed—"but, as his Majesty's Government are concerned in the welfare of Mr. Bund, I have now appointed him to a post worth £600 a year on the single condition that he never comes near his office."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 2.

The Prince's arrival at Lahore on the 25th was marked by the usual official reception. Replying to an address of welcome from the European and native community he alluded to the Queen's interest in and sympathy with her Indian subjects, and said that notwithstanding her inability to visit her Indian Empire—a fact she never ceases to deplore—she had by the greatest diligence acquired some knowledge of the Hindustani language. Other Indian provinces, he continued, might be richer and more beautiful than the Punjab, but no other could boast that it was the bulwark against foreign aggression, or could be termed the guard-room of our Indian Empire. It was one of our greatest recruiting grounds, and he was glad to see signs of prosperity and vigorous civilisation on every side. Monday and Tuesday were spent in the cavalry camp at Muridki. Monday was devoted to military sports, in which the Commander-in-Chief and many other officers took part. The 7th Dragoon Guards and the 18th Bengal Lancers specially distinguished themselves. On Tuesday a great review was held in presence of the Commander-in-Chief, the Lieutenant Governor, and a large number of visitors. About 7,000 troops, including contingents from Patiala, Bhawalpore, Jhind, Nabha, and Kapurthala, passed before the Prince. The cavalry of the Native States presented a most creditable appearance.

After the review General Luck, commanding the camp, and all the officers were called to the front, and Sir Frederick Roberts addressed them at some length. He pointed out that, notwithstanding all that had been said about breechloaders and smokeless powder, the day of cavalry was not over. Confusion was still apt to arise, and then a cavalry charge might reduce the enemy to a mob. They must learn to avail themselves of such opportunities, which were always fleeting. Officers as well as men must familiarise themselves with the use of their special weapons, swords, lance, or revolver, and cavalry commanders must learn to handle large bodies of horsemen with skill and rapidity. For this reason there had been during the last few years artillery camps and cavalry camps. It was seldom that there was an opportunity of assembling such a large force of cavalry as at Muridki, and he hoped that every one would be benefited by it. He was glad to observe the steadiness with which the manoeuvres were carried out, which was due to the systematic squadron-training of the last two years. Cavalry conditions were unlike those of infantry, where they were always the same, and he hoped he might never again see a body of cavalry galloping past with horses completely out of control. He thanked General Luck for his ability and intelligence in carrying out the manoeuvres, and he concluded by announcing that the 1st Punjab Infantry was to be named after the Prince. Before leaving the camp the Prince held a levée, where a number of native officers were presented, including some who won distinction as far back as the Mutiny.

Peshawur was the next stage of the Royal tour. The Prince arrived there on Thursday, and on the following day drove to Jamrood, where he was received by 200 men of the Khyber Rifles under Major Aslam Khan. The Order of Merit for Bravery, the equivalent in the Native Army of the Victoria Cross, was presented to the Major and several men for conduct during the Black Mountain Expedition of 1888, and the Prince addressed the men briefly. A hurried visit was then made to the Khyber Pass as far as Lundi Kotal, where he was met by the Shinwari chiefs and a section of the Zukka Kheyls.

The party returned to Peshawur in the evening, and started at midnight for Rawul Pindi. From this point the Prince's homeward journey may be said to begin. After a shooting excursion in Nepaul and a visit to Delhi he will proceed through Rajpootana to Bombay. It is arranged that before embarkation he shall witness a grand rehearsal of the plans for the naval and military defence of Bombay, under the superintendence of the Duke of Connaught.

In the Legislative Council on Friday Mr. Andrew Scoble,

C.S.I., introduced a Bill to amend the Factories Act. The principal alterations of the existing law proposed are to raise the minimum age at which children may be employed from seven to nine, to limit the hours of employment of women to eleven hours a day, to secure women and children proper intervals for food and rest and not less than four holidays each month, to secure proper water-supply, ventilation, and cleanliness, and to prevent overcrowding. In the course of his remarks the hon. member said that careful inquiry made by the Supreme and Provincial Governments showed that the provisions of the English Factory Acts were inapplicable to this country, that the work of operatives in an Indian factory was far more desultory and less exhausting than that of operatives in England, and that men employed in Indian factories could reach a standard of comfort and content not attained by persons of their own rank engaged in pursuits of a different nature.

Sir Charles Elliott, K.C.S.I., delivered an instructive address at the annual prize-giving at the Calcutta Madrasa Institution for the education of Mahomedans, which owes its origin to Warren Hastings. He pointed out how small a proportion Mahomedans still bore in the general lists of successful candidates in University examinations; and he urged his hearers to still greater exertions. He warned them against looking too much to Government employment, and advised them to turn to literature, science and art. There were no obstacles to deter Mahomedans from the pursuit of original literature, but they must be careful to avoid the inaccuracy so characteristic of ordinary Native writers. The number of books published in India, he said, increased yearly, but there was no increase in the quantity of information they contained. The number of newspapers increased, but the writers did not become more accurate or more laboriously desirous of getting at the real facts they discussed. He concluded by reminding them of the glorious traditions they inherited, and said that if they respected themselves others would respect them.

Mr. J. D. Rees, private secretary to the Governor of Madras, has published a most interesting account of Lord Connemara's latest tour. It is impossible in a telegraphic despatch to do more than mention some few of the places seen and the subjects treated. The visit to Masulipatam and some old ports on the East Coast gave the writer an opportunity to describe the ancient rivalry between the English and Dutch East Indian Companies, and to dilate on the more practical topic of the promising prospects lying before the East Coast railway of the future. The irrigation works on the Godavary, which water 612,000 acres of fertile rice-bearing land, are fully described, and the writer says that the name of Sir Arthur Cotton is still revered by the people who benefit by his great work. The Rumpa country, the scene of a little rebellion ten years ago, is now so quiet that the Governor's agent rode through it alone. The party visited the hilly country at the head of the river Kistna, where the Pitt and Regent diamonds were found, and where tradition points out the original of Sinbad's diamond valley. They found agents of the Deccan Company examining the ground for diamonds. The Singareni coalfields were also visited, as well as many other places little known at present, but likely to attain importance when the country is opened out.

The Government is about to appoint a Committee for the purpose of framing rules for future prospecting and mining operations throughout India, with special reference to the requirements of Burma. Sir Edward Buck will preside, and Dr. King, Superintendent of the Geological Survey, Mr. Robert Crosthwaite, and the Superintendent of the Umahon Collieries will be members.

It is stated that the recent rise in exchange will improve the Budget prospects by about 25 lakhs. As there has also been an improvement in opium expenditure and in the chief heads of revenue there is reason to hope that the year may close with a substantial surplus.

A meeting was held yesterday, under the presidency of the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, for the purpose of considering the best means of diffusing cheap and wholesome literature in India. A number of leading citizens attended, and formed a committee to promote the object.

The mail from Delhi to Kurnal was stopped and plundered on Wednesday night by a band of twenty men within fifteen miles of Delhi. This is only one of a series of daring robberies carried out in that neighbourhood by the same band. Its long impunity is far from creditable to the police.

A curious case respecting the property of a slave is now pending before the Bombay High Court. An African slave was purchased by a Mahomedan merchant of Bombay in 1834. The slave died in 1888, having accumulated property worth 80,000 rupees, and, having no relatives, he left his property by will to Mr. Tyebjee, a Parsee solicitor. Mr. Tyebjee died last year. His executors are now being sued by a son of the slave's master, on the ground that under the Mahomedan law a slave cannot bequeath any property he may acquire.

About three weeks ago some workmen who were making excavations near the Calcutta Custom House unearthed an old iron cannon five feet long, and evidently a 12-pounder. It was buried six feet deep at the foot of a bamboo clump, and was thickly covered with rust. Experts express the opinion that it belonged to a ship of the English fleet which bombarded Fort William after the Black Hole tragedy.

Mr. Vidal, of the Bombay Civil Service, in a Paper read before the Bombay Natural History Society, gives some interesting statistics of snake-bite mortality in the district of Ratnaghery. A very large proportion of the deaths in that district are due to a small and insignificant-looking snake, called foorsa by the Natives. It is a viper rarely more than a foot long, and so sluggish that it does not move out of the way till trodden on, and is thus much more dangerous than the far stronger and fiercer cobra.

The Mohunt, or High Priest, of the Great Hindoo Temple of Tripati has been for some time on trial before the Judge of North Arcot, on charges of criminal breach of trust and misappropriation in respect of the gold treasure of the temple. When the case closed the two Native Assessors gave their opinion that the charge was not proved. The Judge characterised this finding as most perverse, convicted the prisoner, and sentenced him to a rigorous imprisonment of three years. It is understood that an appeal will be made to the Madras High Court.

The English cricket eleven brought out by Mr. Vernon, which hitherto had a career of almost unbroken success, was defeated by four wickets at Bombay on Friday by a Parsee team. The result is said to be due to the inability of the English cricketers to stand against the Parsee underhand bowling.

The death is announced, at Hyderabad, of Nawab Munirul Mulk, the youngest and last surviving son of the distinguished statesman, Sir Salar Jung.

Mr. Gilbert, the dramatic author, visited Calcutta last week and has gone to Darjeeling.

A telegram from Tonk, in the Punjab, states that Colonel Sir R. G. Sandeman, K.C.S.I., arrived there on Wednesday, having travelled from Zhob through the Gomul Pass. He has made arrangements with various tribes of Wazirs for a permanent opening of the route through the pass to British trade. A most important advantage is thus gained, and the object of the expedition is, happily, accomplished. Sir R. Sandeman returns direct to Quetta.

Another important step in frontier communication is rapidly approaching completion, as only 100 yards remain to be finished of the Khojah tunnel borings.

A Lahore paper announces that the survey of the Cabul river railway route has been sanctioned and placed under Mr. Upcote and two Royal Engineer officers. The route from Peshawur by Lundi Kotah and that through the Mullagori Pass have been already examined and found impracticable or very difficult; but there is reason to believe that the river route will present no insuperable difficulties. The survey will be commenced next month.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

RANGOON, FEB. 1.

Hopes are entertained of the recovery of Major Forrest, of the Hampshire Regiment, who was shot through the lung in a recent skirmish with the Kachyens.

The Touhon Column is suffering much inconvenience from a deficiency of supplies.

Brigadier-General Symons reports on Jan. 27th, from Yokwa, that the general state of sickness is no worse. On the 28th he telegraphed that three officers, 17 Borderers, 19 Goorkhas, 28 sappers, and eighteen followers had been sent down from Yokwa to the hospital at Kan.

A correspondent of the Rangoon Times with the expedition telegraphs on the 30th that Captain Woollcombe and Lient. Pratt, of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, are invalided. He says that the force is melting away. As illustrating how severely the troops have suffered from malarial fever he says that on Jan. 2nd of 400 Borderers at Kan only 187 were fit for duty. On the same day 62 men of the Madras Infantry were in hospital.

The resistance of the Chins continues to be extremely feeble. Several minor chiefs have submitted. Negotiations are proceeding with the Tashons, but nothing definite has occurred. The Yokwas having failed to bring in the captives according to General Symons's ultimatum, on the sixth day the troops seized some oxen, instead of burning houses. Five captives were then surrendered, and subsequently three others. An official list prepared some time ago showed that some ninety captives were held by the Yokwas and the adjoining tribes.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 2.

News of the Lushai expedition continues to be confined to accounts of reconnaissances and opening roads and telegraph communication. The weather is excellent, and it is hoped the force will reach Haka by the end of March.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 1.

During the past week there has been a considerable rainfall throughout the province, and the paddy crops are seriously damaged. The reports received show that irreparable injury has been done to the crop in the Moulmein district, that serious damage has been done in the Lower Bassein district, while the injury is slight in Upper Bassein, and in Pegu very slight; and Akyab has escaped.

Various reconnaissances are being made in Pyinmana. The dacoit chief Kanhow has been captured, after a skirmish in which five Sepoys were wounded.

Subhadar Major Shwebo, of the Military Police Battalion, has been murdered while sleeping. The crime is believed to have been committed by one of his own men.

SIAM.

RANGOON, FEB. 1.

The Siam Boundary Commission, under Mr. Ney Elias, has arrived at Sadan after five days' difficult marching across the hills from Youthit. A considerable extent of country on the east bank of the Salwen has been surveyed. The Siamese troops still occupy the east bank of the Salwen. One party of troops at the junction of the Salwen and the Dleipai objected to Mr. Archer's party surveying.

THE CHIN EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 29.

A despatch from Mandalay states that the condition of Major Forrest, who was dangerously wounded at the capture of Lowsaing on the 15th inst., has improved, and hopes are now entertained of his recovery. Intelligence from Yokwa, dated the 26th inst., announces that the Yokwas' fines have been paid, and that a friendly Thetta reconnoitred the district, and found that the people were willing to submit. The Natives sent a mission on the 26th, requesting the British to coerce the minority who refuse to return their captives. The health of the Gookhas has improved; but all the officers of the King's Own Scottish Borderers are in a weak condition, and suffering from ill-health.

CRICKET IN INDIA.

BOMBAY, JAN. 31.

The match between Mr. Vernon's team and the Parsee Eleven was concluded to-day, and after a most exciting contest resulted in a victory for the home team by five wickets. On the resumption of play the Parsees completed their first innings for 82 runs. The visitors then went to the wickets for their second innings, but were dismissed for the insignificant total of 61, thus leaving their opponents with 77 to get to win, a task which they accomplished with the loss of five wickets. Tremendous excitement prevailed throughout the match, which was witnessed by nearly 20,000 spectators, mostly Parsees. There was much betting as to the result, and the Parsees gave long odds against the visitors' chance.

THE INDIAN FACTORY ACT.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, FRIDAY NIGHT.

At the Viceroy's Council to-day Mr. A. R. Scoble introduced a Bill to amend the Indian Factory Act. It is stated that the measure proposes to alter the present law by extending the Act to factories employing not less than twenty persons, to raise the minimum age for children from seven to nine, to limit the employment of women and children to eleven hours daily, and to secure for the women and children proper intervals of rest during the day, and not less than four holidays in each month. It is likewise intended to secure a proper supply of water for the operatives, proper ventilation and cleanliness, and to prevent overcrowding; and to give the local governments greater power to obtain returns and make rules to carry out the objects of the Act.

THE SIAM BOUNDARY.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY NIGHT.

News from the Siam Boundary Commission shows that some friction has occurred. Mr. Ney Elias found the eastern bank of the Salween guarded by Siamese posts, and a strong protest was made against his crossing. He crossed, however, with his escort, and hoisted the British flag without opposition, the Siamese declaring their position to have been forced. The Siamese Commission is reported to be still at Zimme.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS:

INDIAN AGITATION IN ENGLAND.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Whatever the Congress may or may not be able to achieve it is certain that one outcome of its consultations will be the extension to England of an agitation which has thus far been in the main confined to India. Mr. Bradlaugh returns to England, carrying with him a brief upon which, as he virtually indicated in his speech, he will act with the discrimination which is at once the duty and the right of a responsible politician. The first fruit of his visit to India will be the introduction in the House of Commons as early as may be of a Bill embodying the substance of the resolution of the Congress upon the reform of the Legislative Councils. Upon the form which he gives to this Bill, and upon the fashion in which he presents it to Parliament, will, in a great measure, depend the validity of his claims to be not an exponent only, but a guide of political opinion in India. He has claimed a right of free judgment in regard to the course he is to follow in the serving of Indian interests in Parliament, and we should, therefore, expect from him no blind adherence to the letter of the instructions embodied in the resolution of the Congress. These, it is understood, have been enlarged somewhat since the discussion took place upon them. The qualifications and disqualifications of electors to the electoral college which, according to the scheme, is to choose the enlarged Legislative Councils have been, in a necessarily academic and tentative way, decided upon. But they have been determined in committee, the managers of the proceedings apparently believing that they were not suitable matter for discussion in full Congress. Such as they are the instructions upon this point will be embodied in Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill, and if he is fortunate the sponsor for the measure will be able to take the sense of the House of Commons upon it during the coming session. We have already indicated what appears to us, and to many others on this side of India, weighty reasons against important features of the proposed measure, and there is no need to insist further upon the unwisdom that has been shown in seeking amongst the waste places of Indian society for a new constituency while the institutions of local Government that already exist are passed by. The only advantage that we can anticipate from laying before Parliament a scheme based upon a creation of new constituencies will be that such discussions as may arise upon it will bring into a strong light the special difficulties and dangers which must necessarily attend upon an incautious extension of the elective principle to the Indian populations. Fulness of investigation—investigation of the subject from each of the sides from which it may be approached—will of course be assured. Mr. Bradlaugh, confirming a statement which appeared in our columns a month since, anticipates that his own Bill may be confronted by a Government measure following entirely different lines. Except so far as this may delay the consideration of his own measure he will have little to complain of should such be the case. It may be that the Government, confronted with a demand for an elective system working independently of the local boards, may abate somewhat their hostility to the elective principle in any form, and may find a compromise in the scheme propounded by Lord Dufferin.

SIR ROPER LETHBRIDGE, K.C.I.E.

(Madras Mail.)

Sir Roper Lethbridge, M.P., is promoted from the Companionship to the Knight Commandership of the Order of the Indian Empire. It will puzzle many people to account for this. In 1881 he was a member of the Bengal Educational Department, and he had so much cause to be dissatisfied with the refusal of Lord Ripon to grant him the status that he considered to be his due on the abolition of the Press Commissionership which he held, that he resigned the Indian service, and devoted himself to a political career in England. He took a foremost part in the London agitation against the Ilbert Bill; and in 1885 he was returned as member, in the Conservative interest, for the metropolitan borough of West Kensington. He had been created a C.I.E. by Lord Lytton in 1878 in recognition of his efforts to make the Press Commissionership useful to the Government and the public, and he was created a Knight Bachelor on the eve of the General Election of 1885. Since his entrance into Parliament he has been a very busy public man, and he is now on the Board of Direction of Several Joint-Stock Companies. He has also taken an active part in advocating the cause of the Uncovenanted Civil Service to which he formerly belonged. Why, however, he should be singled out for the K.C.I.E. in preference to the crowd of Companions of the Order who have been devoting their best energies to the service of this country since his resignation we are unable to explain. Had there been several K.C.I.E.'s vacant, and had one of them been allotted to Sir Roper Lethbridge, for Indian services done long ago, which were recognised at the time, there would still have been cause for surprise; but only one appointment seems to have been available, and this goes to a gentleman who a long time ago voluntarily severed his official connection with this country, and thereby relinquished his hopes of promotion as a member of its public service. The appointment could not have been suggested by the Government of India, but it must have been made in disregard of the recommendation by the Viceroy of men who have borne with much credit the burden and heat of more years than Sir Roper Lethbridge gave to India. If a man who has not attained the highest rank in his Department may retire, when comparatively young, strike out a home career for himself, obtain unusual honour in that career, and still retain a lien on purely Indian honours which are very rarely conferred on even notable chiefs of notable Indian Departments, some injustice must be done to men in India who have strong claims on the consideration of the Government. The unreasonableness of giving the only K.C.I.E. to Sir Roper Lethbridge is increased by the fact that an "extra" K.C.I.E. is conferred simultaneously on Major-General Sir George White, K.C.B., for his distinguished services in Burma. The soldier whose record has been very full since 1878 should have been preferred to the Member of Parliament whose Indian record terminated nine years ago.

AFGHAN "NEWS."

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Perhaps the Afghan intelligence via Chardjui, which both Reuter and the Central News have endeavoured to telegraph out to us, has greatly enlightened the good folk at home as to the course of Central Asian politics; but so far as the sum of our knowledge is concerned, both agencies might have saved themselves the trouble. According to Reuter, our "Babidul Khan, a near relative of the Amir," and, according to the Central News, "Abdur Rahman's relative Babudil," has been appointed Governor of Afghan Turkistan. Who this gentleman may be we are unable to discover, for no mention appears to be made of him in any of the genealogies or pedigrees available of the Amir's family. So much for the first half of the two telegrams under reference. The second half deals with the appointment, —according to Reuter—of one "Saidar" or—according to the Central News—of "Gholam Haider" as Commander-in-Chief. Reuter's "Saidar" may be dismissed, we think, as a telegraphic miscarriage; but there are four Gholam Haideres. One, Gholam Haider "Tokhi," who is, we believe, a refugee in British Beluchistan, may be left out of the account. So, too, may Gholam Haider "Wardak." Of the others, Gholam Haider Orakzai was, according to the most recent information, Commander-in-Chief of the Turkistan Army; and Gholam Haider Charkhi commanding at Jellalabad. Our latest letters from agents across the frontier regarding the latter spoke of his return to Jellalabad—to take temporary charge of the Governorship left vacant by the death of Dad Muhammad—after a successful expedition among the Shinwaris, and of his intention to return in the spring and teach them a second lesson. Rumour at the same time has been current that the Amir contemplated transferring him to Mazar and bringing G. H. Orakhzai to Jellalabad. Possibly the success of G. H. Charkhi against the Shinwaris marked him out, in the Amir's eyes, as best fitted for the possibly critical command on the frontier exposed to Russian attack; and it is also possible that the telegram under discussion may be simply a mis-announcement of this change. According to our latest intelligence, however, G. H. "Charkhi" was still at Jellalabad; and he certainly attended the recent funeral of Dad Muhammad Khan. The point insisted upon, however, in our telegrams—coming from a Russian force—appears to be that the new Commander-in-Chief (of the Afghan or Turkistan army?) is an Anglophil; which would mean that there is no truth in the suspicions, which we have seen in print and manuscript freely expressed, that the Amir is disposed to coquette with Russia.

PROGRESS IN KATHIAWAR.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Our columns have for the past ten days recorded the incidents of the busy and interesting tour which Lord Reay has been making in Kathiawar. A closer blending of hard work with genuine pleasure could not well be imagined than an official cold weather tour in the Kathiawar Province. Hard work, however, is the essence of these undertakings, and the two days' refuge which Lord Reay is taking in Rajputana seem to be a needed rest after the mingled toils and pleasures of this interesting trip. Very early in his progress the Governor had to listen to and to make speeches. At Sanand in Gujerat the local municipality waited upon him with a loyal address, in which the most noteworthy lines acknowledged Lord Reay's fidelity to the liberal policy, inaugurated by Lord Ripon—to which policy, by the way, Lord Dufferin repeatedly avowed his attachment. The Governor in reply gave some good advice about sanitation to the address of the Sanand Municipality in particular, and to that of the Guzerat Municipalities in general. At Wadhwan, a stage further in the journey, Lord Reay alluded to his cordial relations with the Kathiawar Chiefs, expressing at the same time his regret that this would be the last visit he should be able to pay to the province. There was much in the subsequent proceedings which illustrated the excellence of the understanding which exists between the head of the Bombay Government and the Chiefs. Lord Reay's utterances at Morvi read like a sustained eulogy of the administration of the ruler of that State. But indeed there was much in the scene and circumstances to warrant the high compliments which his Excellency paid to his Highness. Morvi comes very closely within the most exacting definition of an advanced State. The presumption in India is always in favour of the prince who lays down a railway. "He loveth our nation and hath built us a synagogue," translated into the official language of an Indian Presidency is "he co-operates with our policy and has provided himself with a railway." The peculiar merit of the Thakore of Morvi's enterprise seems to be that in constructing a railway he has thought not of his own needs only, but of those of neighbouring States. It is to him that Kathiawar owes not merely the seventy miles of line which run from Wadhwan through Wankaner to Morvi, but also an extension from Wankaner to Rajkote. At least three well-known States are thus served by a line of which this enterprising Chief is the projector and the sole proprietor. And it is satisfactory to know that it yields him considerably more than twice as much as his capital would have earned had it been invested in Mr. Goschen's Consols. Of the State itself our correspondent gives an exceptionally favourable account. "Work," he said, "is plentiful there, wages are good, and most satisfactory signs of progress and improvement are to be found on all hands."

R.A. INSPECTIONS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Many military men seem to doubt whether a General who is not a gunner is fitted to inspect Artillery. According to some recent utterings of Prince Kraft, however, an Infantry General is in certain respects better fitted to inspect field artillery than a senior officer who has grown old in that arm. Frederick the Great himself was not a renowned horseman, but he knew better than anyone else of his time what he could and must demand from the cavalry; and it is, therefore, argued that practical Infantry Generals might be able to improve field-artillery matters by their criticism. It is obvious that a General who proposes to inspect field-artillery must be so far acquainted with the nature of this arm, that he knows how and where he could use it in action, and as he is called upon to handle all three arms in war, we must expect him to do the same in peace. Every non-gunner, says Prince Kraft, will from the first be of the opinion that only a gunner can inspect the practice of field-artillery. Every one is so accustomed to believe that there is something specially recondite in the practice of artillery, and that only the initiated can form a judgment of its merits. A few decades back, the artillery surrounded their art of shooting with so much scientific mist that everyone else thought that, in order to form an independent opinion upon the practice ground, one ought to be learned in mathematics, physics, and chemistry. But since then the artillery have broken off the fetters of technical science, and have laid down the mask of learning. At the most, the theoretical difference between infantry and artillery shooting is that the latter has the larger machine and missile. Prince Kraft argues, therefore, that an Infantry General is quite competent to supervise and inspect field-artillery, without having the technical knowledge to go into details. There seems to be some common sense about this, for attention to minute details forms no part of the duty of a General officer, and it is sufficient if he criticises the broad results of the training. Judging, however, from the latest military opinion at home, the point to be feared most is that Infantry Generals will not demand enough from the field-artillery with its improved armament, and will not give it sufficient opportunity to practice under really modern service conditions.

THEFTS OF ARMS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Last year the Commander-in-Chief in India issued an order calling attention to the large number of Government arms stolen from regiments serving in the Rawalpindi and Peshawar commands; but this year thefts of arms have, up to date, been at least equally conspicuous. It appears, moreover, that the theft of arms is not confined to these two districts, for we hear of several cases having occurred lately in other parts of India. There is little doubt that these losses are due to the absence of necessary precautions, and although the cost of replacing the stolen arms falls on the regiment and not on Government, still we consider that the loss of a soldier's weapon is a serious reflection on military discipline and vigilance. Sir Frederick Roberts, in his order last year, directed that, on a rifle or carbine being stolen, a guard was to be put on day and night in that particular troop or company from which the weapon was lost, and furnished by it as an additional precaution against theft of arms, the guard to be detailed daily for three months from the date on which the loss occurred; but, should the arm be recovered before the expiration of that period, the guard to be withdrawn. Also, on the line of march, each man is to have the custody of his own fire-arm, and to be required to keep it by him when asleep at night, and to be held responsible for its safe custody. The order is both a wise and a necessary one, and, in spite of its apparent non-success up to date, well calculated in time to meet the evil; but we have reason to believe that the order is not enforced, as it undoubtedly should be throughout India. Of course, the theft of arms is much more frequent near the frontier, and the order probably had special reference to regiments stationed in such localities; but the same measures are needed in all cases of theft of soldiers' arms, due to neglect of military precaution and vigilance. The rifle-hunting Pathan will soon learn where to seek his loot, if he finds that precautions insisted upon, perhaps, in the Punjab are not taken in Bombay.

THE PUNBAB POLICE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The reorganisation of the police by the inclusion of the Frontier Districts in the General Police Department of the Punjab is merely intended to relieve Deputy Commissioners and Commissioners of all the departmental routine work as regards the interior economy of the Police in their districts, and to place it in the hands of one Deputy Inspector-General as is the case in Cis-Indus, and to improve the run of promotion in the Frontier Districts. This hitherto, as each district was a circle in itself, the Deputy Commissioner being ex-officio Deputy Inspector-General, was very slow and uncertain. As the six Frontier Districts are to be brought in under one, there will be a revision of Department Circles of supervision of which there are three at present, viz., Amballa, Lahore and Rawalpindi. The changes will be that Amballa will have Hoshiarpore, Jullundur and Kangra Districts made over to it from Lahore, and will give Lahore Ferozepore. Lahore will give Rawalpindi Muzaffargarh, and will receive Sialkote and Gujranwalla. Rawalpindi, which has at present six districts—Rawalpindi, Jhelum, Shahpur, Gujrat, Sialkot and Gujranwalla—will give the last two to Lahore and have the six Frontier Districts—Huzara, Peshawar, Kohat, Bunnu, Dera Ismail Khan and Dera Ghazi Khan attached to it, and receive Muzaffargarh from Lahore. Thus Amballa will have eleven districts; Lahore will have nine districts; Rawalpindi will have eleven districts. The Railway District will be transferred from Rawalpindi to the Lahore Circle for purposes of promotions, &c. This change is really an extension of Act V. of 1861 to the Frontier Districts, which brings them under the Inspector-General and under Departmental supervision. The Inspector-General will then have only one Deputy Inspector-General to deal with instead of two Commissioners, and six Deputy Commissioners in routine matters. From the point of view of uniformity of organisation and control the change will be a decided improvement.

BURMESE AND EUROPEAN DOCTORS.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

In the paragraph on the subject of Medical Relief (Lower Burma) in the Administration Report for 1888-89, the unwillingness of the Burmese to avail themselves of European modes of medical aid is commented on. According to the last census, the Burmese form nearly 70 per cent. of the population, but barely 46 per cent. of the patients treated in the dispensaries during 1888 were Burmans. They seldom enter a hospital except as out-patients for some trifling ailment, or when they are brought there by the police to be treated for wounds received in fights or at the hands of robbers or dacoits. This prejudice of the Burmese against European medicine is the more to be regretted, as their own modes of medicine are either ridiculous or pernicious, or both. It is supposed that the chief cause of their prejudice is that all the Medical Officers in Burma hitherto have been either Europeans or Natives of India, whose knowledge of the Burmese language is generally of the most meagre description; and it is hoped that when a few more Burmese medical students have been passed through the Calcutta and Madras Medical Colleges, they will be able to induce their sick countrymen to abandon the quacks and resort more freely than they now do to duly qualified medical practitioners.

No doubt the fact of having doctors at the dispensaries, who can speak Burmese fluently, will be an advantage, and will help in some degree to break down the prejudice against going to Hospital. But we doubt very much whether the linguistic barrier is so important a one as the Report makes it. Even those Burmans who can speak English or Hindustani do not go readily to the hospitals; and the chief barrier we believe is to be found in the mental attitude of the people. Of science they have not the remotest conception—not even those who have passed through the Anglo-vernacular primary schools. The world presents itself to their minds as a place in which gnats, demons, hobgoblins and all sorts of invisible agents are constantly interfering with the ordinary course of events; and, consequently, if a person falls sick, the obvious thing to do is to propitiate the gnats or to exercise the demon who is the author of the mischief. To people living in a mental atmosphere of this kind the very simplicity of the European methods is a proof of their uselessness. A demon cannot be exercised by applying an ointment or swallowing a nauseous mixture; and no one but a fool would trust to the vis medicatrix nature.

THE HIDDEN TREASURES OF INDIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Dr. W. King, Director of the Geological Survey of India, has begun, in the current number of the Records of the Survey, the publication of the provincial index of the minerals of India, which ought to have, and indeed is intended to possess, a popular as well as a scientific interest. There are obviously many more persons interested in collieries, ironworks and limekilns than the learned few who delight in palæontology; while rubies, diamonds and other gem stones delight a vast number of persons who have never heard of the remarkable examinations of slices of Indian rocks under the microscope by Colonel McMahon and Mr. Middlemiss. Many people are under the impression that it is a geologist's first business to find out useful and practical things, and complaints have occasionally been heard that this utilitarian notion has not entirely ruled our Indian geological researches. No one, however, who has taken the trouble to look at the publications of the Survey and the collections in the Geological Museum in Calcutta will be inclined to find fault with what has been done. At the same time it is not surprising that more attention should now be paid to work which may be expected to pay in a commercial sense. Dr. King's provincial index is intended as a help towards the compilation of an annual statement showing the quantities and value of mineral products in British India, for publication in the mining and mineral statistics of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and there can be no doubt that this summary of information drawn up by an authoritative hand will be of much use to local authorities and to the public. Dr. King's classification, like his purpose, is of a broad and popular nature. The provinces or Presidencies and Native States are taken in alphabetical order, and the mineral products of each are set down with notes as to quantity, quality, and output. The mineral products themselves are divided into "Important Minerals," "Miscellaneous Minerals," "Gem Stones," and "Quarry Stones." Under the first head are included only coal, iron ores, gold, petroleum and salt. Under the second head of miscellaneous minerals come metallic ores, borax, gypsum (which for this purpose might just as conveniently have been classed as a quarry stone), asbestos, soapstone, sulphur, and the like. "Gems" include amber, beryl, diamond, garnet, jade and jadeite; while clays, limestones, marbles, kunkar, slate, &c., are grouped as quarry stones. The first instalment of the list ends with the Central Provinces. If this index serves no other purpose, it may help to dispel the common but erroneous idea that India is rich in minerals. When studied side by side with a large map, and with reference to the fact that the most useful of these treasures require a plentiful supply of fuel for their successful exploitation, it will be clear that the country is relatively poor. By far the greater part of the entries are mere indications of the reported existence of ores, while those which note a regular production of any commercial importance are but few and far between. In course of time, however, we may fairly hope that new sources of wealth will be tapped. The energies of the very limited staff of the Survey are now mainly devoted to search for coal, mineral oil and metallic ores, while mining experts, unconnected with the Survey, are busy in many directions. It seems safe to predict that Dr. King's index, towards the completion of which he invites corrections and information from those interested in the subject, will grow to be a valuable record of mining India, while much that is conjectural and fabulous will drop out of its columns, to be replaced by fuller and more trustworthy information.

Drake-Brockman, R.E., has recommended to Government that the principle involved in Sir Thomas Greenway's Patent Floating Backwater be experimented upon in the construction of the north-eastern entrance of the Madras Harbour, in view to seeing what effect monoliths constructed on the above principle would have in securing a smooth sea.

SEVERAL important changes in connection with the Madras High Court have been proposed by the Judges, and a scheme has been submitted to the Government on the subject. It is suggested that the entire establishment of the Court, including both the Original Side Office and the Appellate Side Office, should be placed under one Registrar, whose salary will be higher than the salary at present drawn by either of the Registrars, with two Deputy Registrars, one for each side of the Court, on salaries of Rs. 1,000 each, a portion of the salary of the appointment of Judge's clerk, held by the late Mr. Murray, which has been abolished, will be utilised by the appointment of two special bench clerks on Rs. 150 each. THE following Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary was issued on Friday evening:—Saturday, the 11th inst., being the day of the funeral of her late Imperial Majesty the Empress Dowager Augusta of Germany, the Governor in Council has ordered, under instructions from the Government of India, that, as a mark of respect to her Imperial Majesty's memory, the flag at the Castle Flagstaff in Bombay be hoisted half mast high, from sunrise to sunset, throughout the day.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Season report for the past week:—Jowari in parts of Ahmednugger and Sholapore and late crops generally in parts of Khandeish, Nassik, and Poona withering for want of rain, which is also needed in Hyderabad and Satara. Standing crops damaged by locusts in parts of Hyderabad and Shikarpur. Jowari in parts of Poona, and crops generally in parts of Ahmednugger affected by foggy weather. Exotic cotton blighted in one taluka of Dharwar. Crops otherwise good, except cotton in parts of Broach. Harvesting of late crops and sowing of early crops progressing in a few districts. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Khandeish, two of Nassik, and one of Dharwar. Agricultural stock generally good.

At the third day's, or Oothamna, ceremony of Mr. Pheroshaw Dhunjeebhoy, a young member of the Albless family, who died last week, his father and relatives subscribed Rs. 71,650 towards various Parsee charities. The largest contribution, Rs. 60,000, comes from the father of the deceased, and of this sum Rs. 50,000 will be held in trust for the aid of poor and helpless Zoroastrians. Of the remaining amount Rs. 5,000 is given to the trustees of the Parsee Punchayet Fund, on condition that they should spend the interest towards the maintenance of the asylum for blind and infirm Parsees, and a further sum of Rs. 5,000 is given towards the maintenance of helpless Persian Parsees living in the dhurumsala at Chowpatty. A sum of Rs. 5,000 is also given in charity out of the deceased's own property. A number of donations under Rs. 1,000 have also been made to various institutions, such as the Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy Benevolent Institution, the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Society, the Jamsetjee N. Petit Orphanage, the Albless Leper Home at Trombay, the Fort Charitable Dispensary, the Parsee Hospital, the Parsee Lying-in Asylum, &c.

THERE is romance in red tape, and there may be pathos even in an account adjustment. A Municipal communication from the Victoria Gardens shows that sanction is asked to debit the Animals' Feed Grant and credit Garden Stock Account with Rs. 3-8, the value of a goat purchased for suckling a tiger cub, and when no longer required for that purpose slaughtered to feed the lion.

Miscellaneous.

A MEETING of the officers of the Royal Engineers will be held by permission of the Commander-in-Chief, colonel of the corps, in the Levée-room, Horse Guards, Whitehall, on Tuesday, February 11th, at 2.30 P.M., to consider the subject of a corps memorial to the late Lord Napier of Magdala. All officers of the corps retired or serving are invited to attend.

ON Saturday the funeral of the late General Sir Henry Errington Longden, who died at Bournemouth, took place at Brompton Cemetery. Sir Henry attended the obsequies in St. Paul's of his old comrade, Lord Napier of Magdala, and unfortunately caught cold. It developed into inflammation of the lungs, and after a few days' illness the gallant soldier passed painlessly away. His military career was principally in India, where he took a distinguished part in many engagements, including the siege and capture of Lucknow, for which he received decorations and was frequently mentioned in despatches. The coffin bore the crest of the Lincolnshire Regiment (the Sphinx), of which Sir Henry was colonel, with the inscription: "General Sir Henry Errington Longden, K.C.B., C.S.I., Colonel 10th Foot. Died Jan. 29, 1890, aged 71 years."

THE case against the proprietor and editor of a paper called the Delhi Punch, which was recently heard by the Assistant Commissioner of Lahore, shows that the Raja of Faridkot deserves well of his countrymen and the country. The paper had for months consistently abused the Raja, and had made accusations against him touching his private, his political and his public life, not the least unfounded and malicious of which was that he was an adherent of Dhulip Singh. With commendable courage the Raja instituted criminal proceedings, and then the editor and proprietor entirely changed his front. He offered the most humble apologies; desired to lay his turban at the Raja's feet; and endeavoured to win the favour of his prosecutor by unscrupulous flattery. The defendant pleaded guilty, and forthwith inserted apologies in twenty papers published in the Punjab. Very properly, however, his apologies were refused, and the case was pressed. In the end the Court sentenced him to a fine of Rs. 1,000, or three months' imprisonment. The fine was paid. If Native gentlemen who are vilified and insulted in the Native Press would oftener display the courage of the Raja of Faridkot we should hear less of the atrocious system of blackmail which is more or less rampant throughout the country.

EXAMINATION FRAUD.—A typical case of examination fraud lately came on in appeal before the District and Sessions Judge of Hughli. The facts of the case are that, in the Lower Primary Examination, held at Jehanabad in the month of March last, one Woomesh Chandra Sen, a teacher of a village school, introduced into the examination hall two passed candidates. Parameshur and Fakir informed the authorities that they had come up to appear in the examination from his patshala, and gave out their names as Panchanan and Peary, which were really the names of their younger brothers, who were the true candidates. Parameshur and Fakir, who had passed the Lower Primary Examination last year, were induced by the teacher, Woomesh, to commit this fraud; and he was guided by the motive of gaining the reward from the District Board—according to the rule prevalent in the Primary Examination that every teacher from whose school candidates are sent up is to be rewarded according to the number of students who come out successful. This fraud having been detected Woomesh was tried for cheating the District Board of Hughli by personation, and convicted and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment by the Deputy Magistrate, Mr. Mahomed Israel. The two young boys, who were the real candidates, but who never went up for the examination, were only eight years old, and did not know even how to read and write a syllable. When the answers written by their elder brothers were given to them to read they could not decipher a single word. The District Judge did not see any reason for interference with the order of the lower court, and so the appeal was dismissed. No action was taken against the two candidates who presented themselves in the examination, on account of their extreme youth.

THE FIRST INDIAN MILITARY MURDER.—According to "Miles," who writes in a Bombay paper, and à propos of the Deesa tragedy, it was in 1772 that the first recorded military murder took place, and it excited so much horror among the comrades of the murderer that it is worth recalling. The battalion in which it took place was commanded by Captain Ewens, and was being reviewed. "The officers having taken post," says the account, "Captain Ewens began the exercise, and had got about the middle of the Manual, which in those days was performed six deep, when a sepoy was observed to quit the ranks, but it was supposed to be upon some cause of no consequence. He was perceived coming round the right flank with recovered arms, but as it was supposed he was not well, and wished for his captain's permission to quit the field, no notice was taken of him. He therefore walked on until he came within two yards of Captain Ewens, when he levelled his piece and shot him through the body. On Captain Ewens falling the battalion instantly broke and rushed forward to avenge his death; but Captain Carnac, with great presence of mind, ordered them to return to their ranks, and that justice should be done. He ordered a drum-head court-martial to try the murderer, who was sentenced to be drawn asunder by tattoos. The horses being fastened to his limbs, many attempts were made to draw them from the body, but without success; and then the sepoys were allowed to put him to death, which they did with their swords."

THE Maharaja of Jaipur is at present defraying the first cost of publishing a fine collection of architectural and decorative drawings from Indian buildings in Rajputana, prepared by Colonel S. S. Jacob, the State engineer. Colonel Jacob had at first undertaken the collection of the materials at his own expense, and partly to enable him the better to finish the Albert Hall and Museum in Jaipur city. Four years ago Dr. Burgess saw the drawings, and, struck with their value, he called the attention of the Government of India to the desirability of completing and publishing the collection. This opinion having been communicated by Lord Dufferin to the Jaipur Darbar, the Maharaja and his minister, Babu Kantichandra Makharji, Rao Bahadur, at once supplied the needful support to the undertaking. Mr. W. Griggs, of Peckham, is now bringing out the work, which is to be issued in ten portfolios of plates, each plate measuring fifteen inches by twenty-two. The first contains copings or cornice mouldings; the second, pillars—capitals and bases; and the third, carved doors, chiefly from Ambâr, in sixty-six plates. These will be followed by seven containing brackets, arches, balustrades, wall decorations, &c. The drawings are drawn to conveniently large scales—many of the details to half the original size, thus forming working drawings suitable for the practical architect and artisan. The inlaid ivory doors have been produced by Mr. Griggs in colours. We understand that, when the first three portfolios are quite ready, copies will be offered for sale. Such an undertaking reflects much credit on the Raja's munificence; and the examples of Indian art published in these portfolios are so beautiful that they only need to be examined to be highly appreciated.

SUICIDE OF A EUROPEAN GENTLEMAN.—A most distressing case of suicide occurred on January 2nd at Tollygunge, when Mr. Donald Dickson of Norman Bros., blew out his brains with a revolver while in a state of temporary insanity. It appears that Mr. Dickson returned on Thursday to Calcutta from Darjeeling, where he had been staying for the benefit of his health. After paying a visit to his brother in Camacstreet he purchased a revolver, and then went to see the race for the cup. In the evening he hired a ticca gharry and drove towards the Tollygunge steeplechase course. The driver heard a shot fired, and looking into the vehicle found Mr. Dickson lying back with his brains blown out, and a revolver beside him. The body was removed to the mortuary in the 24-Per-gunnahs, where Dr. McConnell made a post-mortem examination, which proved that the deceased had placed the muzzle of the revolver to his mouth and fired, the bullet coming out of the top of his head. The funeral took place from his residence in Chowringhee on Saturday morning. Mr. Dickson was well known and liked in Calcutta, where he had many friends. His father occupied an important position in the Bank of Bengal, and he has two other brothers in India. Mr. Dickson had just succeeded to a large property in the "old country," and no motive can be assigned for the rash act which was committed under the influence of temporary insanity.

ALLEN AND Co.'s PUBLISHING BRANCH.—Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., the well-known publishers of Waterloo-place, London, have opened a branch establishment at Wellesley-place in Calcutta. This will be a great advantage to readers as well as local authors, for the firm will not only supply the latest books, but will have on hand a large stock of Oriental publications as well as popular and standard works by the best writers, while local and other authors can be treated with for the publication of their books. Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. are publishers to the India Office, and publish three very useful and entertaining magazines, namely, Knowledge, Colburn's Magazine, and the National Review. The first is a valuable aid to science students, the topics dealt with—and they range over a large field—being treated in a clear, popular manner, or, as we are told in the title-page, they are simply worded and exactly described. The illustrations and the engravings are beautifully done, and are remarkable for their accuracy, clearness, and finish. It was conducted for a long time by that great populariser of science, the late Richard Proctor, and is now edited by A. Cooper Ranyard. The merits of the National Review are well known to all readers of magazine literature, and it might almost be said that with it, and two other leading reviews on the table, one has always the means of a liberal education in contemporary events, or at least of being kept informed of the current topics, political, scientific, and literary, of the day. Colburn's United Service Magazine appeals more to the two services than to the layman in military and naval matters, but no person wishing to have an intelligent knowledge of subjects pertaining to the army and navy, both of past times and the present, as well as the two services in other countries, should be without this magazine, which is never dull, and is always interestingly written. We mention these facts connected with the firm to indicate the nature of their business, and to show that they are in a position to meet the most varied wants of the reading public, while at the same time their connections and experience will be valuable to, and perhaps greatly availed of by litterateurs and those who wish to obtain rare and special works, particularly such as relate to Oriental literature.—Statesman.

THE IMPERIAL REVENUE OF CHINA.—The Chinese Times of Tientsin, in an article on the revenue of the central government of China, estimates it at 84,932,000 taels, or about £21,000,000. The main items are 15,800,000 taels from the foreign Customs, and the same amount from sundry duties; 12,880,000 taels from the salt revenue, 12,850,000 from the likin or inland transit duties, 10,750,000 from the land tax, 7,900,000 from opium, 4,600,000 from inland customs, and smaller sums from other sources. But, the writer says, at least twice this total sum is actually collected from the people, "the half which is unaccounted for being absorbed by the provincial officials, a fraction only being applied to any local public purposes." Even if a sum of £42,000,000 is collected annually, it leaves taxation very light, for at the very lowest estimate of the population it is only about 3s. of English money per head. In India the taxation is about 4s. 6d. per head, and the people of India are certainly not wealthier than the Chinese.—But the Indian gets a fully-equipped army, a railway system which enables his produce to compete in the markets of the world, education, a trained and pure judiciary, an admirable civil administration, river conservancy, an almost absolute guarantee against famine, and much else which the Chinese have not. China might well yield more taxation without hardship; but the slipshod methods of administration would render the additional funds useless. Thus the Board of Revenue is not startled when a provincial governor announces that he has found in his treasury half-a-million taels belonging to no particular account, and which he is, therefore, sending to a neighbouring province to relieve distress there.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares on Saturday were rather dull. Mysore and Ooregum Preference declined 1-16, but Balaghat-Mysore improved 6d. Mysore Shares were last quoted 5½ to 5¾, Nundydroog 1½ to 1¾, Indian Consolidated 2s. 9d. to 3s. 3d., Balaghat-Mysore fully paid (£1) 6s. to 7s., Ooregum Ordinary 2 to 2½, ditto Preference 2 to 2½, Devala-Moyar 3s. to 4s., Nine Reefs New (16s. paid) 2s. 6d. to 9s., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 11s. to 12s., Mysore-Wynaad (18s. paid) 1s. 9d. to 2s. 3d., South-East Mysore 2s. to 2s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 2s. 9d. to 3s. 3d., Gold Fields of Mysore 13s. to 14s., New South-East Wynaad 6d. to 1s., and Mysore West (46s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d.

THE CONGRESS AGITATION IN ENGLAND.

ENGLISH opinion in India is being exercised not a little in discussing the probable result of Mr. Bradlaugh's presence at the meeting of the Fifth Congress at Bombay. The presence of Sir William Wedderburn, gratifying as it was to the delegates, does not appear to have elicited more than complimentary remarks, and his doings and sayings have been passed over as ephemeral matters of little interest or import. There is little doubt but that Sir William was overshadowed by the bulkier form of the Member for India—intellectually as well as otherwise. Mr. Bradlaugh showed the wisdom of discretion also, which is more than Sir William did. The latter, however, may gather consolation for any disappointments he may feel in another banquet to his honour at the National Liberal Club. But Mr. Bradlaugh is looked upon as having accepted a grave, political mission to the people of England, of which he is expected to give an account to the people of India. "The first fruit of his visit to India," says the Bombay Gazette, "will be the introduction in the House of Commons, as early as may be, of a Bill embodying the substance of the resolutions of the Congress upon the reform of the Legislative Councils. Upon the form which he gives to this Bill, and upon the fashion in which he presents it to Parliament, will in a great measure depend the validity of his claims to be not an exponent only, but a guide of political opinion in India." This latter opinion is one, of course, which chiefly concerns Mr. Bradlaugh himself, who has certainly not yet established his claim in the House of Commons to be the exponent or guide of political opinion in India. But our Bombay contemporary is evidently under the idea that the House of Commons will give its attention to Mr. Bradlaugh's exposition of the Congress views, and will go into a serious deliberation as to how far Parliament can meet them to the satisfaction of the honourable gentleman himself and of the Native gentlemen who have furnished him with his brief. Our contemporary thinks that the "sense of the House" will lend itself to a discussion or deep investigation as to the wants and aspirations of the Congress; and, accordingly, a note of warning is sounded lest the House allows its sympathies to be too much carried away when the great Northampton orator touches on the vexed question of Legislative Councils reform. "The only advantage that we can anticipate from laying before Parliament a scheme based upon a creation of new constituencies will be that such discussions as may arise upon it will bring into a strong light the special difficulties and dangers which must necessarily attend upon an incautious extension of the elective principle to the Indian populations. Fulness of investigation—investigation of the subject from each of the sides from which it may be approached—will, of course, be assured." Indeed? We wonder if the writer of this "assuring" assertion has ever been in the House of Commons when an "Indian discussion" comes before it? Has he ever been present on an "Indian Budget" night? If not, he has a novel experience yet before him; but if he has, he surely must have come to the conclusion that some mighty change has come over the "sense of the House" if he believes that when Mr. Bradlaugh rises to introduce his Bill honourable members will remain to listen instead of "skedaddling" to the dining, smoking-rooms, or anywhere else out of hearing. Mr. Bradlaugh, it appears, contemplates that his own Bill may be confronted by a Government measure following entirely different lines; but in this case, says the Bombay Gazette, "except so far as this may delay the consideration of his own measure he will have little to complain of. It may be that the Government, confronted with a demand for an elective system working independently of the local boards may abate, somewhat, their hostility to the elective principle in any form, and may find a compromise in the scheme propounded by Lord Dufferin." The Government, it is possible, will not put itself to any further trouble beyond referring the honourable Member to the Secretary of State for India and to the powers invested in that official. And Mr. Bradlaugh, if he insists on "orating" further, will, in all likelihood, have to address his remarks to empty benches.

But the Bombay Gazette is troubled upon another point:—

"There are indications that an endeavour is to be made to make this problem the subject of an energetic popular agitation in England. Here, again, there would be no occasion for anxiety if we could be certain that those who will be at the head of it would present the case to their audiences with due precautions against a popular misunderstanding of the interests involved. The tendency of the constituencies is to look at all questions connected with the distribution of political privileges and functions from an a priori point of view. Generous, trusting, and disinterested the English public is sure to be in its judgments upon the claims of unrepresented nationalities."

Our contemporary need not, we think, be under any alarm. The "disinterested" English public outside the House will trouble themselves as little on the subject as their "disinterested" representatives within it.

JUST as we go to press we learn with great regret—a regret that many Anglo-Indians will share in—of the death of Mr. Robert Knight, the Nestor of Indian journalism—former editor and proprietor of the Times of India, and latterly of the Statesman and Friend of India. He had been ill at Calcutta for some weeks past, and had been advised to leave India for good; but he held on—as too many have done—until too late, and on Monday last he passed away from the contentious scene in which he had been so often and for so long a prominent factor. His loss will be mourned by relatives who were devotedly attached to him, and by many friends, European and Native. In bygone days, when Indian problems and British rule were discussed with, perhaps, more acrimony than in these politer days, we were not fortunate to be always on the side which Mr. Knight did battle for with all the vigour of his impulsive nature and of his trenchant style. He had the pen of a ready writer, and he was a journalistic foe always worthy of one's steel. But he was also a genial, generous-hearted gentleman, who could win friends and keep them. Life towards its close was perhaps to him still a fitful fever, but now that the longed for rest has come only kind words should be spoken of him.

SMELTING IRON ORE.

TO THE EDITOR.

["The management of the twyeres requires considerable skill and practice, and the profitable working of a furnace depends very much upon the way in which this part of the business is conducted."—Encyclopædia Metropolitana, Vol. 8, p. 402.]

SIR,—It is said that the rich and mighty ironmasters of Cleveland and Glasgow will prevent Parliament from encouraging the manufacture of iron in India.

On the contrary, I look to these rich and mighty ironmasters for the enterprise and skill required for utilising iron ore in India. Indian iron is required for cheap feeders to the great railways.

Think for one moment of what has been done in England and Scotland during the past fifty years—of the enormous wealth which has been created by iron! The jubilee of the iron trade shows that the production has been increased twentyfold. What was the state of North Yorkshire and Lanarkshire fifty years ago? Who could have foreseen, during many centuries, the hidden wealth?

So it is with India. She possesses wealth with which she might pay off the whole of her national debt in one year, and yet all our Indian statesmen are constantly groaning over her impecunious condition. We are searching for rubies and gold, and neglect the iron under our feet.

In the Saletkri Hills we have incalculable treasures stored. Cannot one Englishman or Scotchman be found to utilise them?—Your obedient servant, January 30th.

THE military manoeuvres which have been sanctioned with a view to showing how Calcutta could be defended against an attack from sea will last from Feb. 14th to 15th.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

AN inspecting officer for the selected troops of the Nizam's army is likely to be shortly appointed.

THE Calcutta Naval Volunteers had a most successful trip down the Hughli in an armed launch. They were put through various exercises, including gun-drill and repelling an attack by boarders.

THE question of the European garrison at Delhi, whether, small as it already is, it should be still reduced, has been lately under discussion. The conclusion appears to be that things should remain very much as they are.

LIEUTENANT WOOLMER, Lacashire Fusiliers, a well-known sporting subaltern now attending the Transport Class at Poona, met with a serious accident on Jan. 8th while taking one of his horses over some fences on the Kirkee racecourse.

It is likely that a small flotilla of four or five steam-launches to ply on the rivers in Arakan will shortly be sanctioned. In connection with the operations in the Chin-Lushai no-man's-land they might be of much use as a means of communication, if the rivers turn out to be practically navigable.

THE temporary appointment of Third Brigadier-General in Burma will probably be made a permanent one, as efficient control over so large an area, which will be further extended by this season's operations in the Chin country, cannot be exercised with only two districts. Brigadier-General Symons on the conclusion of his little campaign proceeds to England on leave.

Truth asserted a month ago that it had been decided to extend Sir Frederick Roberts's term of service as Commander-in-Chief from November next, when his present terms expires. As a matter of fact nothing has been settled, nor, in India, at any rate, seriously discussed. To begin with, Sir Frederick himself will have to be consulted. But if the universal opinion that the good of the State requires the prolonged presence at the head of the Army of the man who has, in all sorts of ways, done it such admirable service, could settle the matter, the matter is already settled.

THE military authorities consider some change of tactics desirable in the Chin-Lushai Expedition. Owing to transport difficulties and sickness among the troops it is manifest that these operations are coming to a standstill, though the opposition offered is next to nothing. On the other hand, if small selected parties could be pushed forward in the first place towards Haka, the main bodies being held in reserve at the bases on either side, we might see something accomplished before the working season closes. And this will probably be the plan adopted.

If, as seems possible, the re-armament of the army in India with the magazine rifle will take three or four years to accomplish, it is likely that a large supply of barrels of the new pattern will be indented for to be fitted on to the Martini-Henry stock. This change could be made at no very great expense to the country, and the soldiers would then have a weapon which would be quite good enough for all the practical requirements of a campaign. There are a very large number of Martinis available in India, and it would be better to utilise them in the manner suggested than to have three different kinds of rifles in use. The Snider should at least be discarded as quickly as possible, for the majority of rifles of this pattern are now so worn that accurate shooting with them is impossible.

THE following notification appears in the Gazette of India:—The Viceroy and Governor-General in Council has much gratification in announcing to the Army that Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of India has been graciously pleased to approve the grant of the India medal with a new clasp, inscribed "Burma, 1887-9," being extended to all troops engaged in the military operations in Upper Burma, and to those actually engaged on Field Service in Lower Burma, between May 1st, 1887, and March 31st, 1889, both dates inclusive. A bronze medal and clasp, of similar pattern, will be issued to all authorised Government followers who accompanied the troops so engaged. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is requested to be so good as to issue the necessary subsidiary orders for the early submission, in accordance with the regulations, of medal rolls of all officers and soldiers who may be entitled to the decoration.

A LARGE RELIEF MAP.—Messrs, George Philip and Son are preparing for the Jeypore Museum a large Relief Map of India, size 10ft. by 9ft.; vertical scale, 5,000 ft. to 1 inch. It will be coloured to distinguish lowlands, highlands, and mountains, the water around the coasts will indicate depths by tints of colour. Trunk lines of railways and roads will be shown, and about 500 of the principal towns and villages marked in Native characters.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL SIR H. E. LONGDEN, K.C.B., C.S.I.

We regret to announce the death of General Sir Henry Errington Longden, K.C.B., C.S.I., which took place on the 29th ult., at the age of 81, being the result of a chill caught at the funeral of the late Lord Napier of Magdala. Sir Henry Longden, who was born in January, 1819, entered the service in September, 1836, obtained the rank of lieutenant-general in October, 1877, and was placed on the retired list with the honorary rank of General in July, 1881. He was Adjutant-General for India, 1866-9, and was appointed colonel of the 2nd Battalion Hampshire Regiment in June, 1883, being transferred to the colonelcy of the Lincolnshire Regiment in November, 1888. Sir Henry Longden served with the 10th Regiment in the Sutlej Campaign of 1845-46, and was present at the battle of Sohraon (medal). He served also in the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and was present during the whole of the siege operations before Mooltan, including the affair of the 9th September, storming the enemy's strongly-entrenched position before Mooltan, 12th September; action of Soorjkoond, carrying the heights, on 27th December, in command of the regiment, and surrender of the fortress as field engineer. He was afterwards present at the surrender of the fort and garrison of Chenote, and battle of Goojerat, receiving the medal with two clasps, and brevet of major. He served in the Indian Campaign of 1857-58, and commanded a field force in the Azimghur and Jounpour districts in 1857, including the capture of the fort of Atrawleea. He also commanded an advanced guard of picked marksmen and guns of Frank's force in its advance to Lucknow, including the actions of Chanda, Umeerpore, and Sultanpore, and attack on the fort of Douraha. Sir Henry was attached to the Goorkha troops at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and was present at the storming of the Begum's house and serai, the storming of the Enaumbara and Kaiserbagh, and the attack on the Moolvie in Abbasoodowlah's Kunbullah, being mentioned in despatches. He was present with a wing of the 13th Light Infantry at the first relief of Azimghur, was appointed chief of the staff to Lugard's force, and was present at the passage of the Touse, second relief of Azimghur, capture of Jugdespore, and several skirmishes in its vicinity, receiving the medal with clasp.

SURGEON-MAJOR EDWARD CAMPBELL, a native of East Loos, whose death recently took place, entered the service of the East India Company in 1840. Shortly after his arrival in India he proceeded with a convoy to Afghanistan, and was appointed to the medical charge of the 54th Regiment Native Infantry, then stationed at Cabul. After the destruction of the British force at that place, he was for several months a prisoner with Akbar Khan, but regained his liberty on the recapture of Cabul by General Pollock. He subsequently served in the campaign against the Sikhs at the battle of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Aliwal, and Sohraon, obtaining the medal and clasps. He retired from the service in 1864, and for several years resided at Plymouth.

THE LATE LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

A deputation waited upon the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House on Tuesday last, for the purpose of urging upon him the desirability of commemorating in some substantial form the services of the Late Lord Napier of Magdala. Amongst those present were Lord Chelmsford (who introduced the deputation), Lord Alcester, Lord Mark Ker, Mr. Roger Eykin, Colonel Prendergast Walsh, Major-General Gordon Pritchard, Sir R. N. Fowler, M.P., Sir Reginald Hanson, Sir Frederick Goldsmid, General Sir Frederick Chapman, General Sir Frederick Haines, Sir Peter Lumsden, and others. Lord Chelmsford, addressing the Lord Mayor, said the object of the deputation was to ask him to open a subscription list at the Mansion House for the purpose of securing funds to commemorate in a fitting manner the services to his country of Lord Napier, whose work as a soldier, a counsellor, a statesman, and whose bearing as a man had brought him not only the approbation of his Sovereign, but the devotion of his civilian countrymen, and of the soldiers he led and loved so well. The Lord Mayor, in at once acceding to the request of the deputation, said that he, in common with the other citizens of London, could not fail to have admired the great services rendered to his country by the late Field-Marshal. He had become acquainted with the late distinguished soldier when he was installed as Constable of the Tower, and in their acquaintance since had always been struck by his modesty of character, his kindness, his cordiality, and his consideration for everybody rather than himself—in fact, his great characteristic was his peculiar self-abnegation. He (the Lord Mayor) felt sure that the citizens of London and of the country generally would regret if, from any want of response on their part, such a proposal as that put forward by the deputation for a lasting memorial to be built to one of England's heroes were to be allowed to fall through.—Sir R. N. Fowler, M.P., then moved, and Lord Mark Ker seconded, that those present should form a committee (with power to add to their number) to consider the best form of carrying out the objects of the deputation; and a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor, moved by Lord Alcester and seconded by Sir L. Nicholson, brought the proceedings to a close.

Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, Lord Brassey, Sir John Fowler, General Sargent, Admiral Sir Leopold Heath, Admiral Sir George Tryon, and others, have added their names to the Mansion House Committee of the Lord Napier of Magdala Memorial. Among the subscriptions received were from Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and Sons, £100; General Sir Peter Lumsden, £100; Mr. Sligo de Pothonier, £21; and General Sargent, C.B., £25.

THE CONGRESS.

The Indu Prakash says:—The Fifth Indian Congress is an accomplished fact. Every year since 1885 the Congress has come to be looked forward to as the crowning event of the year. All India rings throughout the year with the din of Congress preparation, and the Christmas week has become an occasion of a national festival. To us in Bombay the Congress, ever since the commencement of this year, had special attractions, special cares and anxieties. Each succeeding Congress has surpassed its predecessor in point of brilliance, organisation and attainment, and Bombay felt her responsibility when she was called upon to undertake the work of organising and arranging for the Fifth Congress. As Mr. Bradlaugh said in reply to the address, the Congress is as much an educational movement as one for gaining immediate concessions of political rights. In its first capacity it has been decidedly successful. In its direct results, too, it is not without a record of work. The spirit of concession which marks official utterances in regard to the constitution of Legislative Councils is a distinct effect of the prayers of the Congress, although, as Mr. Pherozsha pointed out, our opponents say that was a concession long contemplated, independently of the Congress. If the Congress had not so firmly agitated the question, it would have been long before the reform would have come, if it came ever.

The Gujerati remarks:—If our Parsee friends could with safety co-operate with the Hindus for the last quarter of a century in all provincial matters, and even in others which have now been taken up by the Congress, it does not reflect much credit on the intellectual honesty of some now to raise their voice against the Congress or advise their co-religionists to hold themselves aloof from it. It may be, some members of the older generation are indifferent, but it cannot be said that they are actively opposed to the movement. The younger generation is entirely in favour of the Congress, and this body of growing opinion is well represented by such influential Parsee organs as the Mumbai Samachar, the Kaiser-i-Hind, the Jame Jamshed, and others. Again, granting for a moment that the Zoroastrian community of this city accept the gospel of selfishness preached by some charitable gentlemen, how does that affect the position and attitude of the people, a thousand times more numerous, who are determined to have a Congress to represent the grievances of that larger class? The Parsee community is but a drop in the ocean. If they join the Congressionists, these will gladly extend their right hand of fellowship. If they remain sulky and sullen, they are at liberty to do so. India had a glorious past without the aid of what our Parsee friends call themselves, strangers, and a movement which has the support of the most intelligent and cultured and farseeing Indians and Europeans is not likely to suffer much by unimportant secessions.

THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF INDIAN INDUSTRIES.

In compliance with the instructions of the Secretary of State contained in a recent despatch to the Government of India, that Government has impressed upon the various Local Governments and administrations the need of introducing the use of stores manufactured in India in preference to imported stores. It has directed that this be always borne in mind, and that the substitution be effected wherever feasible. An examination of the Home charges has convinced the Secretary of State that it is only in the item of cost of stores imported into India that any material reduction can be effected, and this can only be attained by utilising to a greater extent than is now done the resources of this country. His lordship therefore urges that the departments in India may accustom themselves to use articles made locally, when of an ordinary character, and not needing special inspection during manufacture. These might be procured of sufficiently good quality, even though so somewhat inferior to those which would be obtained by paying a higher price in England.

CINCHONA'S FOE.—The Wynaad Planters' Association allude in their last annual report to a disease that is killing out young cinchona clearings wholesale in many parts of the district, and propose to address Government for the services of Mr. Lawson to investigate the matter. If it is a disease it is not novel, as the unaccountable dying off of cinchona seedlings has repeatedly occurred on the Nilgiris, and the cause is veiled in mystery. We trust the Director will be able to throw some light on the subject, as from his annual reports it would appear the phenomenon is not unknown on the Government Plantations.—South of India Observer.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour. — Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name — J. W. KAY, Athenæum Club, June 25, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims. — Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India. — Westminster Review.

BROAD ARROW

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPEN N.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 24th Jan. ; from Allahabad and Madras to the 22nd Jan. ; and from Calcutta to the 21st Jan.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR during the past week has visited Lucknow, Cawnpore, and Agra.

THE Prince's shooting party in the Terai will number only six guns. Major Durand, the Resident of Nepal, will have general management of the trip.

THE Calcutta University Convocation was held on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 18th, when the Viceroy addressed the gathering.

HIS EXCELLENCY remarked that at present the list of Fellows contained the names of many gentlemen who, either from the fact that they resided at a distance from Calcutta, or from other causes, were unable to take a useful part in the affairs of the University.

THERE was a great deal to be said in favour of the view that it would be desirable to effect a gradual diminution in the number of their Fellowships, and he proposed to make a beginning by filling up every year only a portion of the vacancies which might arise.

A CURIOUS mistake occurred in connection with the expedition sent to punish some rebellious Kachins. Two columns were instructed to join hands at Manton. One arrived there before the other, and the last on approaching the village commenced to shell it, not knowing that the first had arrived. The fire was responded to, but fortunately the mistake was discovered before any serious damage was done.

THE Duchess of Connaught, who has been suffering from inflammation of the foot with some fever, is now convalescent.

THE Duke of Connaught has left Bombay for a tour of inspection in the Sind, Quetta, and Mhow districts.

THE official survey of the progress of education during the year ended March 31st last shows that the total number of pupils on the registers of all schools of the country, public and private, amounted to 3,544,000, giving an increase of 83,000 on the previous year. The total expenditure on education was nine lakhs more than in the previous year, while the receipts from fees, subscriptions, and endowments increased by over six lakhs.

EVERYTHING continues to go well with the Zhob Valley Expedition. Negotiations with the Wasir Maliks were brought to a most successful conclusion, and Major Sandeman marched for the Gomal Pass on Jan. 16th, accompanied by the Maliks.

NEWS received from Mazar-i-Shariff up to the end of December states that all is going on well there. The winter has been abnormally mild.

THE Ameer has formally announced his intention of visiting Herat after the Naoroz or the Persian New Year, commencing on March 21st.

MR. VERNON'S English team has defeated the North-West Provinces and Oudh Eleven by four wickets.

MR VERNON'S team also secured a victory over Northern India by six wickets. Mr. Walker contributed a brilliant score of 108 runs for the Visitors.

IN case the proposed relief of troops composing the Sikkim Field Force is found necessary in March a detachment of the Buffs will replace the Connaught Rangers at Gnatong.

THE Government of India will gradually carry out certain of the recommendations of the Railway Conference of 1888, the India Office having accorded general sanction to them.

IT is likely that a committee will be appointed by the Government to frame rules for the guidance of Customs House officials in the working of the Merchandise Marks Act.

ESTIMATES approximating seven and a quarter lakh have been sanctioned on protection works at Dera Ghazi Khan.

THE Budget Statement will, according to present arrangements, be made in Council at the usual time—towards the close of March.

THE Indian Factory Act Amendment Bill will probably come up for consideration by the Legislative Council during February.

ALL the Local Governments have now furnished their reports on the points connected with the Excise administration in India raised by Mr. W. S. Caine and others in Parliament.

LIEUT. FOSTER, King's Own Scottish Borderers, has been killed in the Chin country, having been shot dead by some men in an ambush.

LIEUT. STEWART, 10th Bengal Lancers, has been badly bitten by a mad dog at Umballa. He has left India for Paris to place himself under M. Pasteur's treatment.

MR. J. C. ROBERTSON has just retired from the service. Mr. J. R. Reid, now in England, will be gazetted to succeed him in the Board of Revenue, Mr. Kaye meanwhile officiating in the vacancy. Mr. Reid's leave expires in April ; but it appears very doubtful whether he will return to India then, and quite possible that he may not return at all. His plans will be known by April.

THE Commissionership of the Rohilkhand Division becoming vacant by Mr. Kay's transfer to the Board of Revenue will be filled by Mr. Alan Cadell, who has chosen that division in preference to Agra. The Agra Commissionership in turn goes to Mr. W. E. Neale, at present holding the Commissionership of Lucknow.

MESSRS. ROE AND FRIZELLE, Judges of the Chief Court, Punjab, leave on furlough on April 1st and Feb. 15th respectively.

COLONEL CONWAY-GORDON has returned to Calcutta from his tour of inspection of the open lines of railway in Burma.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL STEDMAN, Inspector-General of Police in Burma, has returned to Rangoon from Calcutta.

UPON Mr. Brooke assuming charge of the Telegraph Department in April Mr. Lane will be confirmed as Deputy Director-General, and Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Luke as Directors in charge of Traffic and Construction respectively. Mr. Maclean from Karachi is to be appointed Personal Assistant to the Director-General, Mr. Nigel Jones, the present incumbent, proceeding to Assam.

MR. E. J. SINKINSON has returned from leave in India and resumed the Secretaryship in the Financial Department.

It is stated that H.E. the Governor of Madras is about to proceed to London to answer the charges brought against him by Lady Connemara in the Divorce Court.

ONE of the native papers lately suggested that prayers should be offered to the Almighty God on behalf of Mr. Bradlaugh when he was ill, whereupon another native paper said, rightly enough, "but Mr. Bradlaugh believes there is no God ; to which deity therefore is the prayer to be offered ?"

NOTES.

THE telegrams from India to-day are chiefly on the usual topic—the tour of Prince Albert Victor. His visit to India has been one unclouded success, and he will carry home with him only pleasant memories of the land and its peoples.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, it is reported, has arranged to leave India about the end of March, but as he returns home via China, Japan, and the United States, he will not reach our shores until June. On his arrival he will spend some time with the Queen, and then settle down for a short rest at Bagshot prior to his assuming further military employment.

WHAT that “further military employment” will be is now pretty openly guessed at. A service contemporary, not possessed, perhaps, of more knowledge, but having, perhaps, less bashfulness than its rivals, goes beyond “guessing,” and says:—“The Headquarter Staff of the Army is likely to undergo very important changes before long, and there is much speculation as to who will eventually be included in the personnel thereof. The retirement of the Duke of Cambridge as soon as the convenience of the service will permit seems to be definitely settled, as it is stated that he has given formal intimation to Her Majesty of his desire to do so. It is equally certain that the Duke of Connaught will succeed him. What the other changes may be remains still a subject for conjecture. It is understood, with much satisfaction, that the Duke of Cambridge has expressed his willingness to give the benefit of his long and varied experience to the Duke of Connaught so long as he is willing to accept his services as adviser.”

WE think that if the opinion of the Army generally, officers and men, could be gauged, it would be found that the appointment of the Duke of Connaught as successor to the Duke of Cambridge would be a popular one. It is to be hoped, however, that the retirement of the latter is not so near as the club service gossip-mongers would have it to be. His Royal Highness is still hale and hearty, and, although his office is no sinecure, and he has to encounter no little friction at the War Office, yet he has done his work so well, and, on the whole, has administered the patronage entrusted to him so fairly, that his retirement now would be a matter of great regret throughout the Services.

VARIOUS suggestions have been made as to the character which the proposed memorial to the late Lord Napier of Magdala should take—such as a public statue, ornamental brasses in St. Paul's Cathedral and the Tower Chapel, and, if funds permit, pecuniary help towards the Soldiers' Daughters' Home and the Gordon Boys' Home. The latter suggestions, if carried out, would, we feel sure, be more in accordance with what the dead man would have desired himself; but, of course, much will depend on the amount of the donations received. It has been resolved by the Mansion House Committee to request the permission of the Commander-in-Chief to make an appeal to the various regiments of the Army. This we cannot regard but as a mistake. By all means let the Committee accept all offerings from the soldiers who, in Lord Napier's demise, lost a true friend, but let such offerings be spontaneous ones. An appeal through official channels will be looked upon in every regiment as a “command” to give.

A CORRESPONDENT to a military paper, touching on this matter of a memorial to Lord Napier, calls attention to the neglect which the country has shown to the memory of Lord Napier's gallant predecessor in the Indian command, Sir Hugh Rose, whose brilliant services he thus sums up:—“Constantinople saved from a coup de main by the Russian fleet in 1853—Gwalior, the Central Provinces, and, indeed, the British Indian Empire, recovered in 1858—splendid generalship, daring and desperate fighting, when our great Eastern Dominion was hanging in the scales of victory and defeat, acknowledged by the Times in these sentences: ‘Had Sir Hugh Rose lived in the days of the Roman Empire, the citizens, to do honour to such a general, would have turned out to draw his chariot of victory in triumph from the gates to the Capitol.’ This is all true. No soldier of England better deserved a monument to his memory than the one thus referred to; but why his countrymen should have been so apathetic in their regard is a question not easily answered. He certainly did not outlive his fame.

It is a pity that a would-be hero should be a fool. The latest act of the young Duc D'Orleans suggests the aphorism. His attempt to win popularity by enlisting in the ranks of the French army has ended in a fiasco, and his cause will fall under that ridicule which in France always “kills.” He did better in India, and his “services” there were better appreciated. He served for six months with a British regiment, and was for a time Honorary A.D.C. to Sir Frederick Roberts.

BUT he chiefly devoted himself to sport. A contemporary says:—“He was interviewed last September by a journalist at Sheen House, whom he received in the midst of the skins and heads of tigers, pythons, crocodiles, and cobras. He spent nearly twelve months in India, visiting the Duke of Connaught, Sir F. Roberts, and Lord Dufferin. His chief hunting expedition was made in Nepal, where he went with the Duke of Montrose and sixty elephants. He had the good luck to kill eight tigers, and one—a tigress—very nearly killed him. They had shot two of her cubs, and she leapt on to the top of his howdah, smashing his gun to pieces before he had time to fire. Fortunately she tumbled backward and made off. But the Duc's elephant bolted in panic, and for a quarter of an hour he was in peril of his life. The elephant was brought up at last, and next day he shot the tigress almost in the spot where she had attacked him the previous day.”

A SIGNIFICANT comment upon the state of the Jumna is afforded, says a Service paper, by the refusal of the Indian Government to take her over for their local troop-service. This position will be fully appreciated by all engineers of the Royal Navy who have been so unfortunate as to serve in that ticklish trooper. A first-class school for educating young engineer officers in the philosophy of break-downs and remedies for the same was supplied by the Jumna, so that after all she had her uses, even if they were the sweet ones of adversity. Let us hope that with her new triple expansion engines and high pressure boilers she will be a more successful ship.

Vanity Fair is responsible for the following:—“I hear from India that Prince Eddie has been a little ill-used by newspaper correspondents in that part of the Empire. One telegram, which describes him as having been ‘much interested,’ and shaking hands with a number of Burmese dancing girls, would have been better if the explanation had been added, that the ‘dancing girls’ were little creatures whose employment in England at so tender an age might have brought them within the reach of the Cruelty to Children Act. The explanation, however, was of course left out; and succeeding telegrams of other nautch-girls' songs to the Prince—in which they innocently described themselves as ‘sweet little maids,’ and of the half-holiday which he obtained for a girls' school in Calcutta, have, even in India, produced sufficient effect to justify a native editor—in his own eyes—in sapiently observing that the Prince takes after his ancestors!”

LORD HARRIS will be accompanied to Bombay by his Military Secretary, Colonel Rhodes, Royal Dragoons. Lieut. the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, King's Royal Rifles, A.D.C., and Surgeon-Major Findlay are to be in attendance upon Lady Harris, who arrives in India three weeks earlier than his Lordship. She will thus escape the hot season in the Red Sea. Lord Harris intends to visit Berbera, as well as Zeilah and Perim, en route. Lady Harris proceeds to the Hills as soon as possible after her arrival.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

[CALCUTTA, FEB. 9.]

Prince Albert Victor, on his way back from Peshawur, made a short stay at Rawul Pindi. He arrived at Lahore on Sunday, and on the following day laid the foundation-stone of the Jubilee Museum and Technical Institute of the Punjab and formally opened the Jubilee Victoria Townhall, the foundation-stone of which was laid by Lord Dufferin two years ago. In a short speech at the former ceremony his Royal Highness spoke of the pleasure his father would feel on learning that the Punjab was about to have an institution based on the same lines as the great Imperial Institute he had laboured for in England. Tuesday was devoted to visiting objects of interest in Lahore, and Wednesday to shooting at Chunga Munga. Thence the party went by train to Amritsar, where they arrived on Thursday morning. Only a few hours could be spared for the sacred city of the Sikhs, and these were spent in inspecting the celebrated Golden Temple and visiting the principal manufacturing of the famous Amritsar carpets. A short railway journey took the Prince to Kapurthala the same afternoon, and a well-filled day closed with an interchange of formal visits with the Rajah. Next morning the Rajah accompanied his Royal Highness to his preserves near the capital, where they had a good day's sport pigsticking. Eight boars were killed; the Prince secured one, the first speared. Patiala, the next stage in the Royal traveller's tour, was reached the same night. Here he met with a magnificent reception. The Maharajah and his Ministers had been for some time making preparations on a Royal scale, and the scene on Friday night seems to have been exceptionally brilliant. The festivities were continued yesterday. It is said that the Maharajah intends to commemorate the honour conferred on him by reviving the project originated by his father after the Prince of Wales's visit, and building a town to be named after the illustrious guest. Towards the end of the month his Royal Highness makes a shooting excursion to the Nepaulese terai under the guidance of Major Durand, the British Resident in Nepal.

The Maharajah Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, chairman of the Calcutta Reception Committee, has issued a report of the committee's proceedings, in which he states that the most pleasing feature connected with the reception of Prince Albert Victor was the cordial union and goodwill which animated both Europeans and Natives in this great popular expression of loyalty. He adds that this union was not confined to the metropolis, but extended to all parts of the province, and that, so far as he knows, there has not been a single discordant note.

The fifth annual general meeting of Lady Dufferin's Fund was held at the Calcutta Town Hall on Friday, the Viceroy presiding. There was a large attendance, including many European ladies and gentlemen and several members of the Hindoo and Mahomedan aristocracy. The Hon. Mr. Hutchins presented the report of the central committee, which records a steady and satisfactory expansion of the work of the association during the first year of Lady Lansdowne's tenure of office as lady president. The formation of a branch in the United Kingdom is described as one of the most interesting and important events of the year, while the decoration of Lady Dufferin with the Order of Victoria and Albert is a further sign, if any be wanting, of the warm interest taken by Her Majesty in the work. The organisation of a provincial branch in Beloochistan is also mentioned. A number of small local branches have also been formed in various towns throughout the country. A list is given of 238 students who are studying at different medical schools, and it is mentioned that several past students are now doing well in private practice or in connection with institutions under the fund. It is added that many Native States are sending students to be trained at the central colleges, and several acts of liberality in the foundation of scholarships and the giving of prizes are also mentioned.

Mr. Hutchins spoke at some length. He described the progress of the association throughout the country, made an earnest appeal for the half-lakh of rupees still needed for the buildings of the Dufferin Zenana Hospital, and concluded by thanking the lady president, who, with the aid of the honorary secretaries, had borne the brunt of the daily work and correspondence.

Justice Ameer Ali, in moving the adoption of the report, expressed regret that Bengal, and especially Calcutta, had not hitherto given the movement the same enthusiastic support as other parts of the country. The tree planted by a large-hearted English lady, he added, which, under the care of another, was now spreading its branches all over the land, needed but Native help to take root firmly in the soil.

The Honourable Rash Behary Ghose, in seconding the motion, said India was distinguished for its charity, and the only thing now needed was its diversion into new channels.

The Honourable Mr. Nulkar followed with a long speech, in the course of which he expressed confidence that the day would soon come when the women of India would wonder how they ever got on without professional help from their own sex.

Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose said if the voice of India could be heard that evening, then in every accent and every tongue spoken would rise a chorus of gratitude for the services of the association.

The Lieutenant-Governor gave a short account of the work of the Bengal branch, and mentioned several instances of individual liberality, such as that of the Maharajah of Durbhanga, who had established a complete hospital at his own headquarters, and that Rai Dhunput Singh Bahadur had offered to bear the entire cost of a female dispensary at Moorshedabad. With such instances of liberality, was it impossible to raise a lakh of rupees in Calcutta to finish the hospital which bore the honoured name of the foundress of the association? He concluded by moving a vote of thanks to the Viceroy for presiding.

The motion was seconded by the Maharajah of Durbhanga.

The Viceroy, after assuring the meeting of the deep interest he took in the welfare of the association, said the past year was one of special interest for Lady Lansdowne and himself, as the first year she had occupied the position of lady president. He thought the association had now passed out of the period of emotion, sentiment, and excitement, and had steady-going businesslike surroundings. He confidently hoped that it had gone safely through all the ailments of infancy, and was now entering what promised to be a robust and vigorous youth. After referring to some of the most gratifying features of the report, he proceeded to express Lady Lansdowne's deep gratitude to the ladies and gentlemen who had so loyally assisted her, and her deep regret that the association was about to lose in Lady Reay one of its most energetic and intelligent supporters.

The conviction, on a charge of criminal misappropriation of property, of the Mohunt or High Priest of Tripati, mentioned last week, appears to cause much excitement amongst the Hindoo community of the Madras Presidency. This is no matter for wonder, as the Tripati Temple is one of the most sacred places of pilgrimage in Southern India, having a history stretching back to legendary times, while its Mohunt is among the highest ecclesiastical personages in the country. Full particulars of the trial have now been received. It seems that some years ago treasure amounting to about two lakhs of rupees was found buried in the temple grounds. It was sent to the District Court, but returned, as belonging to the temple, and placed in the custody of the late Mohunt. About two years ago the present Mohunt gave out that it was buried under a flagstaff which he had erected within the temple precincts, but information given by one of his assistants led to a suspicion of fraud and to proceedings which ended in the recent trial. The Mohunt made every effort to prevent a search, alleging that it would violate the sanctity of the temple, and so on; but the authorities insisted, and an excavation was made, with the result that instead of gold coins they found only old copper coins with a thin layer of gold on the top. The Mohunt, when put on his trial, attempted to shift the blame on to the temple servants. He called 120 witnesses in defence, but the Judge found the case clearly proved, and, disagreeing with the assessors, whose verdict he described as perverse, passed sentence of three years' imprisonment. The Mohunt has appealed to the Madras High Court, and an application for admission to bail is now pending.

The feeling of the Hindoo community appears to be one of horror at the idea of so sacred a personage committing such a crime, but a certain section seem to look upon his trial as hot sacrilege. This, however, is not the first occasion on which British justice has vindicated itself at the expense of criminals of the highest repute for sanctity. Only a few years ago the Rajah of Pooree, the hereditary guardian of the famous Temple of Juggernaut, who in the estimation of orthodox Hindoos ranked almost as a god, was convicted of murder and transported to the Andaman Islands, where, I believe, he is still living.

Certain clauses in the Calcutta Port Bill, now pending before the Provincial Legislature, are causing uneasiness among commercial men, as they appear to give the Government power to remove without compensation any private wharves or jetties situated on portions of the river Hooghly which may be hereafter included within the limits of the port. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce have sent in a memorial, supported by the opinion of their counsel, Mr. Woodroffe, a leading member of the Calcutta Bar. They state that they view with the strongest feelings of alarm the suggestions to delegate to the Port Commissioners powers capable of the greatest abuse, that similar powers have been so abused in the past, and they protest in the strongest terms against what they describe as a perpetuation of the power of plunder in travesty of justice. They urge that the Bill should be altered on the lines of Lord Hobhouse's Port Act of 1875, and say that by so doing the Government will allay the feeling of distrust now agitating the whole community. The Bill comes on for discussion next Saturday.

A Madras telegram states that the people of Masulipatam last May memorialised the Government, praying that the Nizam's State Railway or the Bellary-Kistna State Railway, whose termini are at Bezvada, should be extended to Masulipatam. The Government has received the memorial favourably, and has requested the provincial administration to arrange inquiries on the spot.

The Times of India publishes the rules which the Bombay Government, with the assent of the Governor-General, has drawn up for regulating the marriages expenses of the Kadva Kanbi caste in the district of Ahmedabad and Kaira. Power to make these rules is given under the Act for the prevention of female infanticide. Some of them are curious. The chenllo, or present given at betrothal by the bride's father to the bridegroom's father, is not to exceed one rupee and seven supars and betelnuts. The marriage chenllo payable to the bridegroom's father may be one rupee and shall not exceed Rs. 100. The value of the cocoanuts distributed at the marriage procession is not to exceed Rs. 10, and the same limit is fixed on the value of the mosalu, or present by the bride's maternal relation. The payment at the ceremony when the bridegroom touches with his finger his mother-in-law's dress must not go beyond two rupees. The number of dinner parties given by the bride's family is not to be more than five, and the number of guests at each not more than twenty-five. The marriage party going to the bride's village are not to spend more than 30 rupees, and when the bridegroom is invited to a social evening at his father-in-law's house he is not to be paid more than two rupees nor to take with him more than five men.

It is understood that the Sanitary Commissioners of Bengal have made a representation to the Government on the dangerous consequences likely to follow the proposed action of the Benares Municipality in discharging the city sewage into the Ganges. It is to be hoped that the Government will interfere promptly in this matter, which is of more than local interest, as anything which tends to affect the sanitary conditions of Lower Bengal—the birthplace and home of cholera—increases the already existing danger to the health of Europe.

During the military manoeuvres held near Bangalore lately a squadron of the 3rd Madras Cavalry, disregarding the rules, entered a village held by a dismounted party of the 21st Hussars and engaged in personal conflict with the defenders. In at least one instance swords were drawn by the Madras Cavalry. General Bengough, in a garrison order, says that the individual directly responsible for this breach of discipline is the officer commanding the squadron in not halting his men outside the village, and his plea of ignorance of the rules cannot be accepted. The General, however, is unable to overlook the conduct of the men who permitted themselves to employ their weapons against their own comrades, and he directs that the men of the 3rd Squadron of the 3rd Madras Cavalry shall not wear swords at field manoeuvres till further orders.

BELOOCHISTAN.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 9.

Apozai, the new headquarters of the Zhob agency, will shortly be joined by telegraph with Quetta. The railway is expected to reach New Chaman, on the further side of the Khoja-Amram range, about the 10th of March. A temporary line is being laid through the Khoja tunnel.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 9.

It is stated that the Ameer's proposed visit to Herat in the spring has reference to complaints of oppression by the local authorities, and disregard of orders as to properly repairing the fortifications, rumours of Russo-Persian intrigues, and the settlement of the question whether the rising ground commanding Herat should be secured by a strong outwork, with siege artillery.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

RANGOON, FEB. 9.

Brigadier-General Symons has descended from Yokwa to Kar to meet and confer with Sir Charles Arbuthnot and General Gordon. They will not ascend the Chin hills. The difficulty of transport has caused Sir C. Arbuthnot to abandon his intention to visit the advanced posts. Major Stoney, of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, commands the advanced troops during Brigadier-General Symon's absence. Some progress has been made in the advance towards Haka, but the difficulty of the road continues to increase, and progress is likely to be slower than ever. The reconnaissances have been extended to within five miles of Haka. Two hundred Hakas have come in and tendered their submission.

Hanta, the independent Chin village which had harboured the Shwaygyobu Prince, has been burned by a company of Bengal Infantry commanded by Captain Hunter.

The health of the troops shows no material improvement. A correspondent of the Rangoon Times telegraphs from Kar that of the reinforcement of 100 Borderers just sent from the headquarters of the regiment scarcely half will be able to reach the front, and adds:—

"The men are absolutely rotten with fever, remittent, intermittent, and other—mostly other. It is certainly desirable that full inquiry should be made to ascertain whether the extraordinary outbreak of sickness among the European and Native troops forming the Chin field force is merely due to the malarious nature of the climate or to neglect of necessary precautions, or whether, on the other hand, it is not largely attributable to wholly different causes, resulting from recent changes in the laws regulating cantonments."

A correspondent of the Rangoon Times with the Chin column, who, it is believed, on this subject represents the officer commanding the force, loudly demands an inquiry into the treatment of the Punjab coolies attached to Brigadier-General Symon's column. He states that before leaving Calcutta they were kept for two days without tents or covering on exposed ground during pouring rain, and had to lie down in some inches of water. He adds that the result of this carelessness was that, out of 900 coolies despatched, 800 men were either dead or in hospital before the Chin column had been 48 hours in the hills.

The Tonhon column has been skirmishing with the rebels, who appear to be somewhat numerous. Two villages on the Momeit road were burned. Captain Sewell, of the Norfolk Regiment, one private of the Hampshire Regiment, and one driver were wounded. The enemy keep up desultory firing on the camp.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 9.

The most important news from the Lushai force is the surrender of Mongpunga, a powerful Howlung chief. A telegram states that he came, bringing a gyall and a pig, and requested Mr. Murray, the political officer, to swear the oath of friendship according to the Lushai custom. The ceremony was performed with full rites. The gyall and the pig having been killed Mr. Murray and Mongpunga smeared one another with the blood of the victims, and each ate a portion of the liver, after it had been cooked. Mongpunga then stated that another chief, Lienpunga, who had heard that a force was marching against him from Cachar, was going to surrender to it, taking with him the captives raided from British territory last year.

The remaining news from the force deals chiefly with the construction of roads through the jungle and over mountains, a process which is apparently making a strong impression on the Lushais.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 9.

Considerable want of discipline appears to prevail in the police force. A private of the Shwebo police battalion has been arrested on a charge of murdering a subadar major, and a non-commissioned officer and three privates are charged with abetting the same crime. At Henzada two privates of the police opened a fusillade from the roof of the barrack on the townspeople, and three Chinamen and three Burmans were killed. One of the policemen was dangerously wounded by the fire of the troops who were turned out. The other committed suicide on finding escape impossible.

The Mandalay Herald announces that the Brigadier-General Commanding at Mandalay and the Commissioner of the Northern Division, with 200 troops and two guns, start immediately to explore the hills east of Bhamo for a suitable sanatorium.

Dacoits have attacked a patrol party in the Magwe district, killing the Burman magistrate accompanying it.

The rain has ceased, and crop prospects are improving.

UPON Mr. Brooke assuming charge of the Telegraph Department in April, Mr. Lane will be confirmed as Deputy Director-General, and Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Luke as Directors in charge of Traffic and Construction, respectively. Mr. Maclean from Karachi is to be appointed Personal Assistant to the Director-General, Mr. Nigel Jones, the present incumbent, proceeding to Assam.

UPPER BURMA SILVER AND LEAD MINES.

(Rangoon Times.)

The short notice of Silver and Lead Mining in Upper Burma in the last Administration Report is not satisfactory. "The Bawzaing silver and lead mines are situated in the Myelat. These mines were visited and reported on in September, 1888. They are situated about one mile north-east of the village of Bawzaing on the slope of a small hill, and extend over about 100 yards square. The ore is usually found in small quantities at a depth of about 10 feet, but the shafts descend to about 300 feet before the miners begin to follow up any veins. The mines appear to be rich, and the miners state that there is as much ore as they can work. The ore varies in quality, yielding from 2s. to 10s. weight of silver per basket of about 365lbs. The tools used in working the ore are a small hand-pick, a mallet, and a cold steel chisel. Two men take it in turns to pick at the rock, while others carry the ore to the surface. The progress of extracting the metals from the ore is carried on close to the village of Bawzaing independently of the miners, who sell the rough ore at the pit's mouth. The furnaces used can each reduce about five baskets (1,825lbs.) of ore daily. Silver is sold at £1 8s. per  $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. of weight, and the rolled lead at 3s. to 4s. per 100 viss (365lbs.). There are between 60 and 70 people employed at and living on the proceeds of the mines. The main profits were in former years derived from the sale of the lead, but the sale in Upper Burma being now forbidden there is little or no demand for the metal. A considerable quantity of lead has accumulated at the pitheads, and endeavours are being made to obtain a market for it in Rangoon for export to Europe. There are also lead and silver mines of about the same quality at Kyauklut." The italics are our own, and we hope, if no arrangements such as are spoken of in the report have been made, that the local Government will at once take steps to have these mines worked on their own account. It seems hard that an industry which is said to be rich and profitable should be stopped, because lead is not allowed to be sold in Burma. The metal is useful in many ways, and so long as decoits are not supplied with the material for manufacture of bullets there seems no reason to put a stop to the working of our silver and lead mines from fear of them. The Government might arrange to purchase all the lead at the mines, and thus encourage an industry which it would seem has now been stopped. We are not in favour as a rule of Government taking the place of private traders, but it is certainly better that they should do so in the matter of this lead-mining industry than that silver and lead-mining should be stopped throughout the province, as would seem to be the case owing to the Arms Act.

GOODY-GOODY LEGISLATION.

(Madras Mail.)

The Hon. Sir Raymond West, K.C.I.E., the Junior Civilian Member of Lord Reay's ill-starred Government, brought in a Bill, in the Bombay Legislative Council, last Wednesday evening, to amend what is called the Prevention of Gambling Act. It seems that in go-a-head Bombay, the home of time and other speculative bargains in business nearly related to gambling, a "certain class of gamblers" evade the local law, by offering and taking bets, or odds, on the rainfall. The miserable creatures forming this class are believed to have little money to lose; and empty purse is usually played against empty purse, with little advantage in the long run to anybody. Were each of the wagers placed in the receipt of a comfortable and certain Rs. 5,120 per memsem, like a Member of Council, he might scorn to gamble on the rainfall; but experience proves that wagering on the weather "becomes a fascinating pursuit." Sir Raymond West is painfully exercised by the conviction that the gamblers "risk larger sums of money they can afford to lose, which demoralises those who take part in it, and frequently leads to disastrous results in the case of those who lose their money." He would, therefore, like to make them virtuous by Act of the Local Parliament. His own soul doth not incline unto wagering, and it shocks him to think of the corruption around him. He is probably aware, as a member of the Byculla Club, that his countrymen who frequent that institution play whist habitually with one rupee points, and a gold-mohur on the "rub;" nay, more, he may have reason to believe that the more hardened among them play "pool" with rupee lives and a four rupee pool. But he does not propose to reform that haunt of unblushing iniquity; indeed, it is just conceivable that in his day—although not nowadays, perish the thought!—he has himself played whist and billiards, and paid or exacted pecuniary penalties. Then he is on terms of friendship with the pillars of the Bombay Turf, who make bets without the slightest regard for the Gambling Act, and under the august noses of Governor, Councillors, and Commissioner of Police. The difference between betting in public at a Race Meeting, and betting in public on the pluvios performances of the Clerk of the Weather is one of degree, and the rain gambler may not see the justice of being run in by the police for indulgence in sporting proclivities very similar to those of another class, which the police wink at. But we all know that "that in the Captain's but a choleric word which in the soldier is flat blasphemy."

After his achievements in connection with the mamlutdars no one would, perhaps, care to credit Sir Raymond West with the possessions of an inconveniently large stock of common sense, so it is gratifying to find that it occurred even to him that there is some inconsistency in his legislating against rain-gamblers while he does nothing to put down the fascinating pursuit of betting on the Turf. He has a touching confidence in himself, so when he says dogmatically that "as to the general idea and principles of the Bill there can be no diversity of opinion" we smile at the good man's profound ignorance of the world in which he lives. He added:—

"It might be thought that by interfering with this form of gambling betting on horse-racing would, by a logical consequence, have to be put a stop to; there is something to be said for that, but if you carried out the idea to the end, then even insurance offices would be doomed. Although the ground principles are extremely hard to determine, the general applications are easy, and Government who have to look to the good of society in general have been obliged to take the matter up in a practical rather than a systematic way."

The Government, of which the speaker is a member, would do better to refrain from fussy legislation, and to confine its attention to what may be called legitimate business. That Government must be well aware that there is an enormous amount of gambling in stocks and shares in the City of Bombay; but it would not venture to make itself the laughing-stock of the world by declaring such gambling to be penal. Vast as the transactions of the kind referred to are in Bombay, they are small in comparison with those that take place in London. The Times of the 14th ult. contains the advertisement of a stock and share-dealer who is not a member of the Stock Exchange, in which he states that "the amount of stock I have dealt in this year up to the end of last account was over one hundred and thirty-seven and-a-half millions." We have no means of verifying this statement, but we ask ourselves what proportion do the sums that change hands in Bombay in connection with rain wagers bear to £137,500,000? Sir Raymond West is thrown away on the Bombay minnows. He should hie away home; persuade a constituency to take him with all his ingenuous crotchets; and then, entering Parliament, he should preach a crusade against mammoth gamblers. "In matters of this kind," says he, "we have not so much to look at the difficult and somewhat subtle principles that underlie the subjects and to determine where the moral offence begins and ends, but rather to the good order and welfare of society, and to the prevention of practises which in effect are seriously injurious." This is very beautiful, but it would be more to the purpose if he looked at the matter from the standpoint of a man of the world.

The Hon. Mr. Latham, the Advocate-General of Bombay, was by virtue of his official position bound to say "ditto" to the mover of the amending Bill. He considers that "the matter is one which does call for legislation." He should have stopped here; but having admitted that a "very high authority in the English Church has said that gambling in moderation is no offence at all," he went on to remark: "We in the Council can have no hesitation in saying that where a temptation is held out to people to indulge in conduct which is pernicious or extravagant, and which might lead to large losses of money, it should be put down; and I am in a position to say that this rain-betting is a gaming house on a very large scale, which leads not only to people losing their own money, but to clerks and other employes risking the money they have been entrusted with by their masters." The learned gentleman cannot be supposed to be ignorant of the fact that every word of this is applicable to the innumerable gambling transactions on the Stock Exchange of Bombay. Why, then, does he not first attack the greater evil? Rain gambling is, we believe, confined to the period just before the monsoon; but Stock Exchange gambling goes on all the year round. But, although as Advocate-General he supported the Bill, the inherent good sense of Mr. Latham, the individual, peeped out, and prompted him to warn his honourable colleagues in Council that "they should consider the matter well before going on with it, for it opens up several very wide questions":—

"For instance, you will have to consider the question of betting on race courses, and it will be impossible to let that implement of betting, the totalisator, continue to be used. That has been the furthest point to which this question has been stretched in England. I know there are many people who are much in favour of these totalisators. They say it makes betting on a race-course fairer, as it takes the matter out of the hands of the bookmakers. But the making of gambling pleasanter is making it a greater temptation, and I have seen private soldiers flock to these instruments and risk their money, which would have been better spent on their families. Whenever there is a public invitation to gamble, it is sure to be accepted; and as this Bill purposes to put down one special form of gambling, I am in entire accord with it." So the legal luminary of the Bombay Council has his eye on the totalisator, and if he and Sir Raymond West are given a free hand, not only will that "implement" be put down by the best of all possible Governments, but Club Race sweeps, whist and pool parties, stock-jobbers, rain-wagers, time bargainers, cotton and freight speculators, will be so sternly repressed that Bombay will not know herself. But it may be as well to suggest to the legislators of that city who are "righteous over much," that what they propose to do in the direction of making a clean sweep of gambling in all its branches should be done quickly, for it cannot be reasonably supposed that their projects will have much fascination for the sportsman who has accepted the succession to the Governorship of the Western Presidency.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 21.)

THE Viceroy has addressed the following letter to Maharajah Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, President of the Committee for the Reception of Prince Albert Victor in Calcutta:—

"Government House, Calcutta, January 15th, 1890.—My dear Maharajah,—The departure of his Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor of Wales from Calcutta was, as you are aware, of a private character. No opportunity was therefore afforded him of giving final expression to his appreciation of the arrangements made for his reception and entertainment in Calcutta. On the evening of his departure his Royal Highness referred to this matter in conversation with me, and expressed regret that he should not have been able before leaving to offer his renewed thanks to the Reception Committee. He desired me to write you to this effect. His Royal Highness was pleased to say that he was delighted with all that had been done to render his visit interesting and agreeable to him. That he cordially appreciated the liberality with which the citizens came forward to do him honour. He referred with especial warmth to the arrangements made by the Reception Committee, and assured me that he was particularly pleased, both with the welcome accorded him on his arrival and also with the interesting series of fêtes given upon the maidan on the evening of the 7th. I have much pleasure in conveying to you and to the members of the Committee his Royal Highness's thanks. I venture to add one word of congratulation from myself on the complete success with which your efforts were throughout attended.

At the annual convocation of the University of Calcutta, held Jan. 18, H. E. the Viceroy as Chancellor of the University opened the proceedings by congratulating the newly-appointed Vice-Chancellor on his accession to office. He then referred to the present composition of the list of Fellows. Considering that the Fellowship of the University is not only a high honour, but also an important trust, no precaution should be neglected to secure that the Senate is in best possible manner, which was not the case at present. The list contained names of gentlemen who have position and character, but who are from various causes not likely to take a useful part in the affairs of the University. Hitherto a considerable number of fellowships were bestowed not upon the ground that persons receiving them were likely to take an active part in the administration of affairs of the University or because they had specially connected themselves with educational questions, but as a mark of distinction and compliment in the same way as honorary degrees as bestowed in British Universities. The list was, therefore, needlessly large, since not more than twenty or thirty members attended even when questions of special interest were being discussed. It would, therefore, be desirable to effect gradual diminution in the number of fellowships. The Chancellor also proposed that M.A.'s be allowed to select by themselves from among themselves one or two gentlemen to represent them in the Senate. He would give this subject careful consideration before another convocation comes round.

For the first time in the history of British India the Armenian community of Calcutta met to discuss political questions. Pursuant to notice circulated it was proposed to hold a general meeting on Jan. 20 at the Armenian College to form an association for the consideration of the grievances of Armenians in Turkey. Mr. Gasper took the chair, and after referring to the terrible sufferings of his countrymen under the rule of "the unspeakable Turk," he said they could be removed by the help of Russia, but that would mean to be absorbed in Russia, and to have their nationality completely blotted out. There was another difficulty, as England would stand in the way of such proceedings. Admitting all these, he saw no reason why they should not persevere in the general object which was set before them. After some further discussion, it was proposed by Mr. Gasper, and carried unanimously, that another meeting be convened on Sunday next for the purpose of forming an association for furthering the interests of Armenians in India, Armenia, and in every country where they have established themselves.

MADRAS.

(Jan. 22.)

A CORRESPONDENT states that the Madras Presidency will shortly have an acting Governor, as Lord Connemara has decided to proceed to London, where he will remain some months, to answer Lady Connemara's complaints. Some of the allegations made by the petitioner in the plaint lodged involve the reputations of several well-known names in Madras society. But it is fair to state that in Madras the accusations preferred are regarded as in the highest degree improbable, and it is believed that Lord Connemara will be able to rebut the charges which have been levelled at himself and others.

PROBABLY with a view to effect a saving, the Government of Fort St. George has decided, reports the Madras Times, with the approval of the Supreme Government, to carry out certain reductions in the establishment of his Excellency the Governor's Body Guard. At present this gallant force consists of 4 European officers (including 1 sergeant-major), 6 Native officers, 10 Native non-commissioned officers, and 100 troopers. All of these are drawn from the four cavalry regiments of this Presidency. The complement of chargers is 128. The strength of the corps is supposed to be greater than it need be, and it has now been decided to abolish the appointment of sergeant-major, to reduce the number of Native officers to four, and the number of chargers to 100. The senior Native officer will have the rank of subedar-major and the office of jemadar-adjutant. The sergeant-major and officers affected by this new scheme will be provided for elsewhere. The saving likely to be effected is, we understand, very nearly Rs. 1,000 per month. An idea was entertained lately that the Body Guard might be constituted a distinct corps, but the Government of India apparently prefers the continuance of existing arrangements, subject to the reductions now to be effected. These will date from 1st April next, we believe.

A correspondent having written a letter to a Madras paper calling upon Dewan Bahadur R. Ragonatha Row to "enlighten" a certain class of objectors to widow-marriage, their objection being that widow-marriage would encourage husband-killing, he says:—"I must once more repeat that my mission is to show that the Hindoo Shaster does not prohibit re-marriages of women, that a widow who feels that she could not lead a celibate life may marry again, rather than lead a wicked life, and that if she could lead a celibate life she should be encouraged to do so. I beg to add that I have held that baby marriages are no marriages, and that, even if these be marriages, the virgin widows ought to be encouraged to marry again. My advocacy does not go beyond this. Now regarding the objection urged, I beg to state that by the experience of the countries where women are allowed to re-marry, husband-killing has not been prevalent, and that it is impossible in the case of baby-wives. As the custom of the people and judge-made law sanctions the free love of a widow, there is a greater likelihood of wives killing their husbands for securing this free love than for securing another husband, and certainty of losing her inheritance from her deceased husband. Thus it will be seen that, in my advocating and encouraging virgin-widows, there is no fear of any husband-killing."

THE Madras Mail writes:—Mr. R. A. Sterndale, the Assistant Accountant-General, Madras, who has retired from the service, leaves Madras at the end of this week, proceeding to Bombay, where he will embark on board the Nubia, homeward bound. He will reside for some time on the Continent, most probably in Switzerland, where he will have ample scope for employing his brush, and accumulating more "Lichens of an old log."

A FULL bench of the High Court has been engaged for two days investigating a charge of unprofessional conduct preferred against Mr. Laing, solicitor, in connection with an insolvency case in which he was employed by the Official Assignee.

The Court suspended Mr. Laing from practice for six months.

BOMBAY.

(Jan. 24.)

IN view of the advent of a new Governor the long-disused Government House at Parel is being put in order, repainted and decorated, and the gardens reconstituted, so that Lord Harris may have the option of residing there instead of at Malabar Point should he prefer to do so. It is the custom of late years for successive Governors to take the Government Houses alternately. Sir Philip Wodehouse resided when in (or near) Bombay at Parel; Sir Richard Temple lived at Malabar Point, which he decorated and improved, changing it from a barn into the most charming of marine residences; Sir James Fergusson made Parel his headquarters when in the Presidency City; Lord and Lady Reay wisely reverted to Malabar Point. The Parel house and grounds, spacious as they are, have the great disadvantage of being five miles from the nearest residences of those who have the pleasure to be invited to official dances and dinners. This is a drawback which has been much aggravated by the insanitary and squalid houses and their unsavoury surroundings which now render the old Parel-road so unpleasant to traverse, especially at night.

ACTIVE measures are in progress with a view to holding a public meeting in the Town Hall early next month with a view to organising a suitable reception of Prince Albert Victor of Wales when again visiting Bombay before his Royal Highness's departure for England.

THE mail steamer Ganges to-day carries home six 9-inch R.M.L. Woolwich guns, recently dismounted from the Harbour Defence Works at Colaba. The guns, though excellent in themselves, are not deemed suitable for the Colaba Batteries, where ordnance capable of more rapid manipulation and of greater range are desired. The 9-inch guns are, therefore, to be conveyed to the Woolwich Arsenal and there converted into howitzers.

It has been discovered that there is something wrong with the screw of H.M.S. Serapis. The nature of the defect is as yet unknown, for although divers were yesterday sent down, they could ascertain nothing on account of the thickness of the water. Orders are expected to-day, upon the receipt of which she will be placed into dry-dock and put in a seaworthy condition.

WE are glad (says the Times of India) to learn that it has been determined to form an Association in Bombay for the purpose of taking active steps to improve the position and prospects of the officers of the European Civil (late Uncovenanted) Services in the matter of leave and pension, and of laying their grievances before Parliament. Two powerful, energetic, and able Associations have been in existence for the last two years in Calcutta, Madras, and Simla, and some departments have already obtained substantial measures of redress; and it is felt by many officers stationed in Bombay that this city should not be behindhand in any movement affecting the interests of the Services, and that an endeavour should be made to form a Bombay Association with an executive Committee as influential and representative as those of other Presidencies. It will be the object of the new Association, as we have already stated, to draw up a case for the Services, and to enlist so far as is possible the sympathy and support of every officer in the Presidency. In doing so the members will have no wish to interfere in any way with the existing Association at Poona, but rather to co-operate with it for the common good, assist it so far as may be in their power, and perhaps, eventually amalgamate with it; and they do not ask any officer who is already a member of that Association to join the Bombay one. It is proposed that a public meeting shall be held in the "Durbar Room" of the Town Hall, Bombay, at 5 P.M., on Monday, the 27th day of January, for the purpose of electing a Committee to represent the various Services, framing rules for the guidance of the Committee, fixing the rate of subscription, and considering the form of a petition to be presented to the House of Commons during the Session of 1890; and discussing the most effectual means of obtaining redress. As Parliament meets early next month the petition should be adopted and signed with as little delay as possible. The subscription will probably be fixed at the rate of Rs. 10 per annum, and membership will be open to all European members of the Geological and Topographical Survey, the Education, Public Works, Finance, Police, Judicial, Forests, Telegraph, Opium, and other allied Departments, which have hitherto been generally classified as the "Uncovenanted Services," in contradistinction to the Covenanted and Military Services, which were constituted before the establishment of these departments.

ALLAHABAD has beaten the representatives of the English team at racquets by four games to two.

THE leading piece goods firm of Hazarimul Natmul, Delhi, has failed with ten lakhs of liabilities. Terrible excitement prevails in the Chowk.

As the infantry now being levied for war service in the Punjab States and Cashmere number 7,000 men, the inspecting officer, Captain Hogge, is to be given the services of an assistant, Lieutenant Harris, 11th Bengal Infantry.

EXPERIMENTS will be commenced at Rawalpindi to graft wild olive trees with the sprouts sent out by the Minister of Agriculture at Rome. If it prove successful, many hundred villages and many thousand people may be enriched by the new industry.

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, accompanied by Colonel W. F. Cavaye, Military Secretary, and Mrs. Cavaye, Colonel A. W. R. Becher, Equerry, and Captain A. G. Fergusson, A.-D.-C., arrived at Callian by the mail train at 5 A.M. on the 16th of January from Jubbulpore, which place the Ducal party left at 4.20 A.M. on Wednesday. After staying at Callian for a few hours the Duke and Duchess and the party joined the down passenger train, which started from the Victoria Terminus at 8 A.M., and continued their journey to Poona. According to the former programme their Royal Highnesses were to leave Calcutta on a tour in Darjeeling and other places, and were expected to return to Bombay on the 3rd of next month, but owing to the indisposition of her Royal Highness the programme has been altered and the tour abandoned. On Tuesday information was received in Bombay that the Duke and Duchess would arrive here from Jubbulpore on Thursday morning, and after staying for a day they would leave for Poona. On Wednesday evening, however, a telegram was received here, conveying the information that the arrangement had been cancelled, and that their Royal Highnesses would leave for Poona direct from Callian.

Yesterday morning, when the telegram appeared that their Royal Highnesses would return to Poona on the same date, it excited no small amount of concern, as their Royal Highnesses were not expected back until the end of the month, and various rumours were abroad, mostly to the effect that something must have occurred in relation to the health of some member of the Royal Family which necessitated so speedy and unlooked-for a return. Sympathy was at its highest stretch, but no reliable report was forthcoming, and that was a matter to be regretted, for it taxed our loyalty. It was announced in the General Orders issued yesterday that the Royal party would come in by the 2.33 P.M. train; and in consequence of it there were many private individuals, all loyal subjects, present on the platform to see for themselves what really was the reason. It was a private arrival, and so there were no officers present, and it had also been wired up that the platform was to be kept clear. The train arrived punctual to time, and those who managed to get a sight of it were pleased to see his Royal Highness standing at the door of his compartment and acknowledging the homage paid him by the lieges of his mother and their gracious Sovereign. Even before the train had come to a dead stand Colonel Becher, the trusted equerry, stepped out of his carriage and made his way at once to the compartment of royalty. The train, after a short interval to allow of the luggage of the Royal party being taken out, was cut off, and their Royal Highnesses' carriage were shunted on a little ahead and stopped in front of the private wicket of the station. Sympathy grew stronger on account of the ominous movements and the still more ominous behaviour of the Royal Staff, but the way was not clear, for it had been cleared of all outsiders, and policemen stopped the way towards the Royal carriages. Soon after a stretcher was seen coming out of a saloon carriage carried by four officers, and lying on it was recognised the familiar and popular form of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, and when it was seen it looked a silent sympathy that cannot be described in words. Our representative tried to get some information, but he was unable to do so, so great was the concern of all the members of the Royal staff and household. We trust to be supplied with information that shall appease popular excitement, for there is nothing in which Englishmen are more interested than the welfare of the Royal Family.—Deccan Herald, Jan. 17.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Government of India have sanctioned a redistribution of the regimental and depot transport in India.

IN case the proposed relief of the troops composing the Sikkim Field Force is found necessary in March, a detachment of the Buffs will replace the Connaught Rangers at Gnatong.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM O'MEALY, of the 1st Punjab Cavalry, has, the Civil and Military Gazette hears, been nominated for the recently-created appointment of Commandant of Thal levies in Biluchistan.

VOLUNTEER CORPS will not in future be supplied with iron targets. They will be granted an allowance of Rs. 55 per section of a range with which to provide themselves with canvas targets and appliances.

THE services of Captain R. C. Temple, Cantonment Magistrate of Mandalay, have been placed at the disposal of the Military Department in connection with the drawing up of the new rules under the Cantonment Act.

THE new map of Upper Burma, in which all the latest information is embodied, will shortly issue from the Survey Department. The preliminary edition, in which the mountain ranges are not given, has already been published, and it is in every respect an excellent piece of work.

ESTIMATES approximating to seven and a quarter lakhs have, we understand, been sanctioned on the protective works at Dera Ghazi Khan. The charges are to be borne in equal shares by the Imperial and Provincial Governments, and a loan to be raised by the Municipality. The latter will, of course, have to be on the security of the Punjab Government, as the threatened town can hardly have much security to offer.

AN officer changing his pay circle, whether it be to one in his own or another Presidency, must obtain from his late Paymaster or from the Treasury Officer by whom he was last paid a last-pay certificate, which he must forward to the Pay Examiner of the circle he is leaving, for counter-signature and despatch to the Pay Examiner of the circle to which he is proceeding. This last-pay certificate is to be attached to the first pay-bill he submits in his new circle.

THE following change in the designation of the Native Batteries of Artillery in India has been made. They will now be known as Indian Mountain Batteries, and the No. 5 Garrison Battery of the Punjab Frontier Force will be "the Punjab Garrison Battery" in future.

NEW DESIGNATION.

- No. 1 (Kohat) Mountain Battery.
- No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
- No. 3 (Peshawar) Mountain Battery.
- No. 4 (Hazara) Mountain Battery.
- No. 5 (Bombay) Mountain Battery.
- No. 6 (Bombay) Mountain Battery.
- No. 7 (Bengal) Mountain Battery.
- No. 8 (Bengal) Mountain Battery.

THE MURIDKI CAVALRY CAMP

(Bombay Gazette Correspondent).

JAN. 20

The Division formed up in what is technically known as rendezvous formation at half-past ten to-day. To the uninitiated this means that each brigade was drawn up in line of squadron columns at close interval, with ninety yards' distance between each brigade. Colonel Fred. Lance, C.B., late of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, commands the 1st Brigade, consisting of the K.D.G.'s, the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, the 14th Bengal Lancers, and H and T Batteries, R.H.A., under Majors Blakesley and Turnbull, in line of batteries on the right flank of the 1st Brigade. The 2nd Brigade, under Colonel Pennington, C.B., consisting of the Queen's Bays, the 1st and 3rd Punjab Cavalry and the 9th Bengal Lancers formed the second line; whilst the 3rd Brigade, under Colonel Corry Bird, C.B., formed the third line, and comprised the 3rd Dragoon Guards, 5th Punjab Cavalry, and the 16th Bengal Cavalry.

Before commencing operations General Luck called the officers to the front and pointed out the faults that had occurred during the previous brigade manoeuvres, namely, squadron leaders being prone to keep too great intervals, and, in changing front, to wheel the outer flanks too much up. Otherwise he saw immense improvement in the steadiness of all ranks, and was much pleased with the cordial and intelligent co-operation of the officers.

The force then moved off preparatory to formation for division drill. The 1st Brigade in line of squadron columns deploying at interval and reinforced by the Bays, formed the first line; the 2nd Brigade, 200 yards in rear of the right flank, with a support of four squadrons from the 3rd Brigade, with one in rear of each regiment of the first line formed the supporting squadrons to Colonel Lance; whilst Colonel Corry Bird's brigade in line of squadron columns at close interval formed the reserve. Colonel Pennington's brigade moved in like formation, and the horse artillery moved in rear of the supporting squadrons, and about 200 yards from the centre of Colonel Lance's brigade. The site was extremely fine, the leading brigade forming a line of sixteen squadrons moving with the utmost steadiness and precision.

The General put the division through a few simple movements, changing the front half left, by which Colonel Pennington's brigade became the attacking line with Colonel Corry Bird's supporting and Colonel Lance's as a reserve; and then again changing to left, Colonel Corry Bird's brigade leading, Colonel Lance's supporting, and Colonel Pennington's forming the reserve. The horse artillery in both cases were on the outer flank. At one o'clock the force halted to feed and water. Major Benson, of the 17th Lancers, was then sent out with a skeleton enemy representing 36 squadrons, and General Luck, with the division, moved forward to meet him. Our front was covered by three squadrons, one each from the Queen's Bays and the 1st and 3rd Punjab Cavalry. Colonel Pennington's brigade formed the leading line, moving in line of squadron columns deploying at interval, with Colonel Corry Bird's in support on the right and Colonel Lance's echeloned in reserve on the left, both moving in line of squadron columns at close interval. The horse artillery, as usual, were in rear of the centre leading line.

As almost invariably happens, both in mimic manoeuvres and actual war, contradictory or, at any rate, conflicting reports came in as to the position and strength of the enemy. Our artillery, with the 1st Punjab Cavalry, was sent out to the right flank with the intention of turning the enemy's left; but Colonel Lockhart found Major Benson drawn up on his right and not his left flank, with eighteen squadrons in his front line, twelve echeloned on the rear right as support and six on the rear left in reserve, and he at once came into action at about 2,000 yards. General Luck, seeing that his whole division was moving past the enemy's front, changed front to the right. The 3rd Brigade, reinforced by the 9th Bengal Lancers, advanced at the gallop, Colonel Pennington's force falling into echelon on the left as a reserve and Colonel Lance taking his position in rear of the right as a support, and the whole force swept down on Major Benson regardless of the broken ground.

I have been too short a time in the Camp to venture on detailed criticism; and such, after all, is merely an expression of opinion on the part of an individual. But I may be permitted to say that, after an absence from India for many years, I see a marked change for the better equipment and steadiness of Native cavalry and the mounting of British corps. There are regiments at Muridki that would be hard to beat by any nation in the world. To me it appears marvellous the state of perfection our Indian cavalry has reached, which permits them to be manoeuvred in the same line with English Dragoons.

On Tuesday morning the Division formed up on the ground to the south of the Commander-in-Chief's camp in a mass of squadron columns at close interval. General Luck, prior to commencing some divisional manoeuvres, made a few comments on the previous day's operations, pointing out the absolute necessity for officers commanding reconnoitring parties to state the hour and the position of their parties when sending information. The information was of a contradictory and conflicting character, leading General Luck to suppose the enemy were on the left flank, whereas in reality they were to the right. With the present organisation of the Native cavalry reconnaissance duty tells heavily upon the British officers, on whom the sole duty of despatching reports rests. With British corps every trooper has sufficient education to send in a simple report, thus lessening the duties of officers. In spite of this difficulty the duties of reconnaissance are generally well performed in Native regiments.

We then halted for half-an-hour whilst Major Benson and a skeleton enemy representing thirty-six squadrons moved off. After a sufficient interval Colonel Lance sent a squadron of the 14th Bengal Lancers and squadrons of the 2nd Punjab

Cavalry as contact squadrons, and receiving information of the enemy's position Colonel Lockhart, with two horse artillery batteries, galloped off to the right flank at once, coming under the fire of Benson's guns on our right front. General Luck then moved forward in attack formation, Colonel Lance, who was leading, having been reinforced by six squadrons from Pennington's brigade, who also sent four others in direct support. Brigadier Bird now dropped back in echelon on the right rear. Brigadier Pennington being echeloned on the left. Our advance was under heavy fire from the enemy's guns, who it is true were under the fire of ours, but we must have suffered heavily in executing such manœuvres; and in the final charge, owing to a misconception of orders, Pennington's brigade remained too far in rear, thus allowing our left flank to be turned. Such mishaps are inseparable from peace manœuvres, but under a leader of Brigadier Pennington's calibre would be impossible in actual war. In Egypt he showed himself possessed of unusual dash and resource, and if conduct in mimic war can add to a soldier's reputation, Brigadier Pennington has succeeded in showing that if he has achieved success he has certainly deserved it.

The troops having halted half-an-hour, we again moved against a skeleton enemy who barred the passage home. Once more the Lancer brigade led. Colonel Pennington this time echeloned on the right and Colonel Bird on the left. The Lancer brigade had again been brought to sixteen squadrons by a reinforcement to six squadrons from Pennington, whilst Bird moved four squadrons in immediate support.

The reconnoitring squadrons here failed egregiously. One of Napoleon's most stringent orders was "Save your horses;" yet here two squadrons were galloping aimlessly about on an open plain seeking information, whereas an unoccupied hill lay to the right front, whence an admirable view of the whole of the enemy's position might have been obtained by one officer and so signalled back. The officer in command of the artillery seemed to me to come into action at much too close a range. It is useless to supply horse artillery with guns of abnormal initial velocity and an accurate range of 3,000 yards if they throw away all these advantages by galloping up to within 1,000 yards of the enemy's guns before opening fire. However, this again was an accident that could not happen with our efforts directed towards playing the game as we can with the limited means at command, and everyone regrets that the brigades are unwieldy and the artillery insufficient. Five brigades of eight squadrons and five batteries of artillery would have been far more instructive; but, then England recognises the political axiom that military efficiency must be subordinated to financial consideration.

Major Knox, C.B., R.H.A., met with an accident riding from the station, breaking his collar-bone. There have been very few casualties amongst the troops, but the horses of the 14th B.C. still have a large percentage of sick. Out of 458 there are 60 in hospital, whilst the 5th P.C., with 479, and the 16th B.C., with 510, have 14 and 16 respectively. In the case of the 14th the horses are old and scarcely fit to undergo the work of a campaign, whilst the two latter regiments are excellently mounted.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

"Puddings and Sweets. Three Hundred and Sixty-five Recipes Approved by Experience," by Lucy Jones (W. H. Allen and Co.), was a little book which, being found thoroughly practical, obtained a wide circle of readers when it was first published. Its good repute still continues, and another edition having been called for testifies to the appreciation in which good housewives hold Miss Jones's sweet experiences.

"The Beginners' Guide to Photography." By a Fellow of the Chemical Society. (Perken, Son and Rayment.) Amateur photographers, whose name is now "legion," cannot do better than possess themselves of this excellent little manual, which gives them in clear, concise terms all the information which they can possibly require, from the first purchasing of a camera to the final touch on the picture it produces. The book is practical, sound, and instructive.

The National Review (W. H. Allen and Co.) deals with the dull subject of "Political Economy and Strikes," and the weary one of "Local Government for Ireland," but Mr. Parr's "Recollections of Corsica" are easier reading, and Mr. Macnaghten takes us into Utopia in dealing with "Temperance and Public Houses."

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) has a very good number for the current month. Rear-Admiral Colomb continues his valuable chapters on "Naval Warfare;" the Rev. G. Miller gives, with considerable freshness, the story of the battle of Edgehill and Dr. T. M. Maguire commences a review of the American War of 1861-65, which promises interesting reading. We hope that the talented war correspondent does not intend to bring his wanderings to a close, for his graphic pen and pencil will be missed by many. The editorial work and selections are always praiseworthy in this magazine, which should have a good hold on all Service men.

Our old friend Colburn's United Service Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) gives a number of excellent articles this month; and although it has one on "Decapitation," we are glad to find it keeping its own head so well upon its shoulders. The articles are varied, and touch on matters of present interest—for instance, Colonel Bucknill's paper on "Torpedoes and Submarine Mines," and Major von Bieberstein's "Tactical Importance of Smokeless Powder"—which are specially appropriate to military and naval students at this time.

THE CROWN AND THE ARMY.

THE officers of "John Company's Bahadur's" armies—now that Mr. Justice Mathew has given judgment in the case of Mitchell v. Regina—have reason to congratulate themselves that although they are now all "Royal" they yet retain some privileges which the "Royals" with whom they are amalgamated have not. The Army and Navy Gazette of Saturday last, commenting upon the good fortune in the way of promotion and distinction which has fallen to the lot of several Indian officers of late years, says that it was at the time of amalgamation a heavy blow and great discouragement to the officers of the Indian to be merged in the Royal army, which had all home traditions, family influence, patronage, and, in an Imperial sense, prestige at its back. Old and young Indian officers were "sorely distressed." Transferred from the Company to the Crown "they felt they were 'done for' Macpherson, Norman, Donald Stewart, and many other officers of the Company on the way to the good things in store for Sepoys who could endure to the end thought they were 'dished.' They have found out since, however, that they were served up in very sweet sauce. Stewart has been Commander-in-Chief, member of Council, and might, it is said, have had a peerage. Norman is Governor of Queensland, and has held other high offices; and there is scarcely a survivor of the old Indians of 1857 who has not done well. Roberts is Commander-in-Chief in India. Sam Browne, Daly, Brind, Olpherts, Tod Brown, Probyn, and many others were certainly none the worse for 'amalgamation.' This may be allowed, although we do not altogether understand how some of those named have to thank "amalgamation" for their good fortune, whatever it has been. But in what follows our military contemporary is certainly "altogether" correct:—"The fate of Indian officers with their off- reckonings may well be envied to-day by the Regulars on whose vile bodies Mr. Secretary Stanhope executes his feats of military surgery. We do not see why Orders in Council about 'off- reckonings' should be more sacred than Royal Warrants concerning rates of pay and pension on retirement. But Indian officers are 'kittle cattle to shoe,' and the War Office is generally wise enough to let them alone."

They are fortunate in this exemption, and are therefore to be congratulated; but how long will the exemption last? The old officers may be free of War Office and Royal Warrants, but what of the young officers who are now daily qualifying for Indian service? Will the old faith be kept with them, or will they find themselves in the unique position which all "Queen's" officers are now in according to Mr. Justice Mathew's decision—namely, without any rights or privileges whatever?

Into the personal matter of Colonel Mitchell's complaint against the Crown we do not propose to enter in detail. His claim was for compensation for monetary loss incurred by compulsory retirement. He had been granted a pension of £450 on retirement, and an additional £150 as compensation for the retirement being compulsory, but he held that this latter sum was not in correct accordance with actuarial calculations, and in this view he was confirmed by a well-known public actuary to whom the case was submitted. The War Office has, however, a soul above those of public certified accountants and members of the Society of Actuaries. It makes its own calculations and sticks by them, but it keeps its method of reckoning a secret. This question of account, however, is only a personal affair affecting Colonel Mitchell himself, although we think it a grave scandal that the matter should have been allowed by the War Office to take the shape it did of an officer suing Her Majesty for money said to be due to him. But the question is a wider one than that of a disputed account. Colonel Mitchell was put out of Court because the Attorney General put in a "demurrer," which was upheld by Mr. Justice Mathew, that "the Secretary of State for War's decisions and determinations are final and conclusive, and that the Court had no power to go behind any such decision." The learned Judge, in support of this contention, said: "There is no rule of the Constitution better established than the one which treated all the engagements between those in the military service of the Crown and the Crown as voluntarily only on the part of the Crown and as giving no occasion for an action in respect of any breach of contract. An officer owed his position to the will of the Crown, and he might be dismissed at any moment, his active pay might be stopped, his half-pay might be stopped, and any promise might be withdrawn, although there was no probability that any of these circumstances would take place. An officer, according to the clear rule of law, was without remedy, by action or petition of right, in case the Crown should think fit to adopt any one of the courses mentioned. There was no contract in respect of pay, retired pay, or half pay; all the cases cited established that. That disposed of the case on the question of law."

The importance of this judgment cannot be over-rated, so far so far as the officers of Her Majesty's army are concerned, whether at home or abroad. Mr. Justice Mathew's decision is doubtless perfectly correct as the law stands, but the doctrine involved is not the less startling. For it means this, as our contemporary, the Army and Navy Gazette points out, that "the British officer is the only man in Her Majesty's dominions who has no Court of Appeal and no protection against arbitrary acts." Royal warrants are a sham if they can be withdrawn or interpreted as the authority issuing them chooses. The pledged word of the Crown, hitherto considered sacred, becomes under this dispensation idle and worthless, because it has no binding power. This doctrine has been called by several contemporaries who have commented upon the case "monstrous"—but it stands. What will be done in the future can only be decided by Parliament, for it may be taken for granted that the position cannot be accepted by the officers of the Service as it has now been defined to them. They are honourable servants of the Crown—not chattels of the War Office. But this decision makes them the latter. The real "authority" responsible for Royal Warrants is the Secretary of State for War. That political has to depend upon the advice of the permanent clerks of his office—and these civilian gentlemen now rule the Army at their own sweet will. It is impossible that such a state of things can continue without protest. The question is one not only affecting the individual rights of every officer in the Army, but one affecting the very stability of the Service itself. For an army in which discontent and distrust reign in the commissioned ranks must sooner or later become—a danger, not a strength to the country.

THE INDIA OFFICE RECORDS.

THE limited space which a newspaper such as the MAIL has at its command prevented us from doing more than giving a condensed report on the 20th ult. of the valuable and interesting paper read by Mr. F. C. Danvers, the able Registrar and Superintendent of Records at the India Office, before the Society of Arts, Jan. 17th. The full report of the paper has now been published in that Society's Journal, and we commend its perusal not only to all Anglo-Indians, but to all readers who take an interest in the rise and growth of that great Empire which Englishmen boast of as being now "the brightest jewel in the British Crown." Mr. Danvers' task has been no easy one, but it has evidently been to him a labour of love, and the India Office is fortunate in possessing an officer who has shown such patient care and intelligence in the work undertaken by him. In his eloquent peroration to his able paper he modestly says:—

"I have attempted to give a brief sketch of the India Office Records; complete it cannot be called, but like a scaffolding it affords some indication of the form and size of the building behind, though but little of its interior arrangements. Within this scaffolding I hope to commence the erection of a monument worthy of the memory of those bold adventurers who laid the foundation of British Empire in the East, and of those noble and able administrators who have upheld and maintained the honour and dignity of the Queen-Empress in India. It is not in the order of events that this monument should ever be completed, but the scaffolding will I trust remain, and prove of service to those master-builders to whom the working tools shall be entrusted after those who are now employed upon the work shall have laid them down."

The "Discussion," as it is called, which followed, is reported as follows:—

Sir William W. Hunter said this most interesting and erudite paper was peculiarly opportune at the present time, when Indian affairs were becoming more and more frequently the subject of discussion in Parliament and in the Press. Under these circumstances, the Indian records must become more and more a national concern, and he was glad to hear that so much had been done recently in the India Office towards the preservation of these valuable heirlooms. His own experience with regard to Indian records extended over twenty years, and he was sure that anyone who remembered how little attention they used to receive twenty years ago will rejoice at what Mr. Danvers had told the meeting regarding the efforts now being made for their classification and arrangement. It was not until four years after the downfall of the Company that Sir Charles Aitchison's magnificent collection of Treaties and Engagements placed the honourable facts of the Company's dealings with the Native Princes before the English nation, and thirteen years elapsed after the downfall of the Company before the first general census of India was attempted. Nor was it until a later date that any systematic attempt was made to place before the public the facts connected with the administration and resources of each British district in India. He perfectly agreed with Mr. Danvers in the charge which he brought against Indian historians to the effect that they went on repeating what their predecessors had said without correction or verification from the manuscript records. The only attempt at a scholarly history of early British India was James Mill's, of which the first edition was published in three volumes in 1817. Mill went to the India Office records and worked from them, and until Indian historians of our day will take the same trouble to go to the original sources, Mill will never be superseded. It was a great misfortune that Mill's history should not be superseded, because, though Mill wrote with a command of exact language and with great knowledge of facts, he also wrote as a philosopher who started with preconceived ideas, and who only found in the facts of Indian history a confirmation of his preconceptions. That book had, nevertheless, dominated the public conception regarding the government of India. In reading the discussions in 1858, he found it quoted in Parliament, in the Blue-books, and in the Press. But its influence was not confined to England. For example, in the great rent suit in Calcutta in 1865, which readjusted the general rent system of Bengal, he found that while some of the learned judges of the High Court went back to the original records or to Harrington's Analysis, the majority contented themselves with what Mr. Mill had printed in 1817. During the last twelve or thirteen years the whole system of land tenures in Bengal had had again to be readjusted. A Commission was issued, and after a long inquiry the case was placed before the Legislature. He well remembered how in the Select Committee, as each clause of the Bill was torn to pieces, when either side wanted to quote something against the other, and were at a loss for an authority, they fell back on Mill. But he must say one word in defence of the historians. It had been his duty to attempt to write a general history of India, and when he began his task, about twenty years ago, he found there were no local materials to refer to. He went to the District Record Rooms in Bengal, and made a collection of materials. But to go through fifty record rooms in a single province would have taken half a lifetime, and to do the same throughout all India would have required three or four lifetimes. Accordingly he tried the more central Record-office in Calcutta, the Board of Revenue, and there he made a précis of upwards of 14,000 letters which the Government had very generously printed. But the tradition of secrecy was still so powerful that they were not published to this day. He also went to the Board of Revenue in the North-West Provinces, and made a précis of their records. He should add that both Sir Alfred Lyall, when Lieutenant-Governor, and Sir John Strachey, had endeavoured to render the most important of those records available to the public. In Bombay, too, efforts had been made to publish the records, and the valuable minutes and despatches of the Hon. Mountstuart Elphinstone, which contained some of the finest prose writing in the English language, and which formed a reservoir of political knowledge and wisdom, had been edited. But while something was being done in India, more required to be done in England, not only with regard to continuous effort in rendering the records of British India available to the British nation, but also in seeing that after the records were printed they should reach the people who knew how to use them. He had more than once received from enthusiastic compilers the initial proof-sheets of a series of records which were about to be printed, but of which he never heard anything more. Either they did not go on with the work, or when the records were printed there was no mechanism for their circulation. He ventured to hope that Lord Harris, when he took up his great office in India, would spare a few minutes from the weightier concerns which would fall upon him, to give his influence in favour of the continued publication of the Bombay Records. He (Sir William) fully realised that the publication of records was an expensive undertaking, and the task of rendering them available to the public (even after they had been edited and printed) was a somewhat complicated one. But he felt sure that the proceedings of that evening, and the vote of thanks which would be unanimously given to Mr. Danvers, might be taken as a proof of the cordial sympathy of the Society of Arts with the efforts of the Secretary of State, and those under his authority, to make the Indian records really available as the materials for Indian History.

Sir Owen Tudor Burne seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Seton-Karr said that when Lord Harris arrived in Bombay he would find that some records had already been inspected and published by Mr. Forrest, and there was no more competent person to do what Sir William Hunter said ought to be done in making them available for public information. He would also add that if there was any person competent to give a complete history of India, it was Sir William Hunter.

The Chairman (Lord Harris) said he sincerely joined in the vote of thanks which had been passed to Mr. Danvers for his exceedingly interesting paper, which, from the public point of view, was exceedingly valuable. If he might offer any opinion upon the paper and the remarks which had followed, he would say that he thought the East India Company had been a little hardly treated. After all, it must be judged by the circumstances which affected it, not by those which prevailed at the present day. The Company was in the position that many present were, and which thousands were in the City of London—they were merchant adventurers, and he did not know that it was the custom nowadays for merchant adventurers to be very anxious to make public all their private affairs. He was, therefore, anxious to gloss over as much as possible the little weaknesses of the East India Company in not keeping public records, or occasionally in surreptitiously destroying a few that might be awkward in certain circles, when they knew there was considerable competition against them, and competition not only by other merchant adventurers, but by Government itself. He preferred, therefore, to think of the great debt of gratitude which the nation owed to those few men who had the pluck so long ago, to start with great success what had proved to be the most magnificent undertaking the world had ever seen. Mr. Danvers, who no doubt had the very best information on the subject, said that in this state of advanced civilisation we were so economical that we were actually using worse material for the purpose of keeping our records perfect than the old East India Company; indeed, far worse than the Pagans and heathens of some 2,000 years ago, whose records remained as perfect, probably, as when they were put up. He thought we ought to be very grateful to the East India Company for the honour it had brought on England. Mr. Danvers, in the preparation of this paper, had done him the honour of displaying upon the screen the portrait of his ancestor, though there were many far more distinguished men whose likenesses might have been presented.

Up to date no less than twenty-three rifles have been stolen from regiments on the march in the Rawalpindi and Peshawar districts. Can no inventive genius suggest a simple plan for the safe keeping of rifles when regiments are under canvas? asks the Civil and Military Gazette. A station order has been issued at Pindi directing that men should attach their arms to their bodies during the night; but it cannot be conducive to a comfortable rest to find oneself chained to a gun at every turn. A trench for the guns dug in the ground, and the beds of the men laid on the top, would, we should say, be equally secure, and more likely to ensure a night's rest.

THE Burma Gazette of January 4th contains the following notification:—"On the departure of his Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor from Burma the Chief Commissioner desires to thank the officers of all departments who have been responsible for the arrangements made for his Royal Highness's comfort and convenience, for the excellent and efficient manner in which the arrangements have been carried out at all places visited by his Royal Highness. From first to last there has been no failure or confusion of any kind. Sir Charles Crossthaite desires also to put on record his appreciation of the excellent spirit which animated the people of Rangoon, Mandalay, and other places which rendered the maintenance of order an easy task. The Chief Commissioner is authorised to express his Royal Highness's sense of the loyalty towards Her Majesty the Queen-Empress which has been manifested in the cordial welcome accorded to the Prince by all classes and races of Her Majesty's subjects in Burma throughout his tour in this Province."

THE COLLISION WITH H.M.S. MALABAR.—The inquiry into the collision between H.M.S. Malabar and the Erymonthe, off Cadiz, terminated at Portsmouth on Saturday. The evidence showed that Captain Fanshawe was on deck at five o'clock in the morning, owing to the dense fog, and took charge of the ship. For a considerable time the foghorn of the Erymonthe could be heard on the starboard, while the troopship also sounded her horn in reply. Both ships eased down their engines when they found they were approaching each other; but at six o'clock, when the French steamer was seen, they were so close to one another that Captain Fanshawe was unable to get out of the way. The finding of the Court has been forwarded to the Admiralty as a confidential document. It is stated that it exonerates Captain Fanshawe from all blame.

GOOD NEWS FOR TEA DRINKERS.—The latest innovation in connection with tea is "santha." It is well known that a large number of persons are invariably obliged to refrain from tea on account of dyspeptic troubles. This proportion in the United Kingdom is about 3 per cent. In "santha" the tanpin is combined with its antidote, so that everyone will now be able to take tea, and an increase in its consumption, from this valuable scientific invention, to the extent of something like five millions of pounds annually, is therefore possible. "Santha" can also be made direct in the teacup, and will aid in this way also the extension of tea-drinking, especially in countries where it has at present made but little progress, owing to the ignorance that exists as the best mode of brewing the exhilarating beverage.

"There is a good deal of useful information combined with much sound advice in Sir W. Bellairs's book. . . . Parents will find in it how commissions are to be obtained, the examinations necessary to be passed and their scope, the cost of outfit, and the amount of private allowance that is advisable. . . . and detailed statements of all the articles which are necessary for a complete but not extravagant outfit. . . . The author's estimates are perfectly reasonable, and can be safely followed."—BROAD ARROW.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, and is generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "12 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances of the efficacy of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell St., W.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine, which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep, WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The

IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell St., W.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 31st Jan.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 29th Jan.; and from Calcutta to the 29th Jan.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR'S shooting party in the Terai will number only six guns. Major Durand, Resident in Nepal, will have the general management of the trip. His Royal Highness has arrived at the Cavalry Camp of Excise at Muridki, visiting Lahore en route.

THE Amir of Afghanistan has formally announced his intention of visiting Herat after the Nauroz or Persian new year, commencing 21st March. It is not yet known what number of troops will accompany the Amir to Herat, but he will probably take only a strong escort, as the Maimana district of Afghan-Turkistan through which he will pass is in an absolutely peaceful state. Ishak Khan had few supporters there, but the Maimana garrison remained loyal as a body. No orders have been issued regarding the reduction of the number of troops at Mazar-i-Sharif, which now seems likely to remain the principal military post beyond the Hindu Kush.

THE Nawab Munir-ul-Mulk, younger and only surviving son of the late and great Sir Salar Jung, died at Hyderabad on Sunday. With this sad occurrence the last chance of the name and repute of the renowned Minister being perpetuated in Hyderabad disappears.

THE Home Government have expressed a generous appreciation of Sir Charles Crosthwaite's successful administration of Upper Burma, thus endorsing the opinion of the Government of India made public last autumn.

JUSTICES TOTTENHAM, TREVELYAN AND BEVERLEY, of the Calcutta High Court, are all likely to go on furlough within the next two months, Mr. Justice Tottenham probably retiring after the vacation. Messrs. Rampini and Gordon, of the Bengal Civil Service, and C. H. Hill, of the Allahabad Bar, who have already acted in the Court, may be again nominated to officiate.

MR. A. H. BENTON is gazetted to be a Judge of the Chief Court of the Punjab in the place of Mr. Burney, retired. Mr. H. T. Rivaz has been appointed temporary additional Judge.

MESSRS. METCALFE AND GARDINER resign the Bengal Civil Service from October 29th and November 26th, 1889, respectively.

SIR BENJAMIN SIMPSON has returned from his tour in Burma.

MR. C. J. LYALL AND DR. LETHBRIDGE were to return from the Andamans about the middle of February, after having made a careful investigation of the working of the penal system at Port Blair. Their report will therefore be furnished to the Government of India with as little delay as possible, Mr. Lyall having to take over the duties of Secretary in the Home Department in March, when Mr. MacDonnell leaves for England.

WHEN Colonel Lindsay, R.E., goes home in the spring, Mr. J. Craik, the Traffic Manager, will succeed him as Manager of the South Mahratta Railway Company.

CAPTAIN KUNHARDT, R.E., who has managed the Tirhoot State Railway so well, goes to Lahore as Deputy Manager on the North-West Railway when the Tirhoot line is made over to the Bengal and North-Western Company.

EVERYTHING continues to go well with the Zhob Valley Mission. The negotiations with the Wazir Maliks have been brought to a most successful conclusion, and Sir Robert Sandeman has marched for the Gomal Pass accompanied by them.

It has been settled that the Chinese Amban will visit Calcutta in February, when the negotiations on the Sikkim question will be finally closed.

SPECIAL attention will probably be directed to the numbering of lepers during the coming census operations. Any comprehensive legislation upon the leprosy question is likely to be suspended until the Commission which is being sent out from England has made its report.

THE Local Governments have all replied on the subject of the Forest Amendment Bill, which will be passed in the course of the current Legislative session.

THE day fixed for the Byculla Club dinner to Prince Albert Victor is Thursday, March 27th.

LORD REAY presided at the annual Convocation of the Bombay University on Jan. 28th.

DR. MACKICHAN, the Vice-Chancellor, stated that the new endowments amounted to Rs 50,000, which had, with two exceptions, for their object the promotion of medical education amongst the women of India.

H.E. LORD REAY on Jan. 27th, accompanied by Lady Reay, and attended by Lieut. Pinhey, A.D.C., laid the foundation-stone of Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit Hospital for Women, her Ladyship also laying the corner-stone of the Awabai Bhowmuggree Home for Nurses, both of which buildings are situated in the compound of the Grant Medical College and J. J. Hospital.

AT a well-attended meeting held at the Town Hall on Jan. 27th, under the presidency of Captain Sir Henry Morland, it was resolved to form an Association of European members of the Civil, hitherto styled the Uncovenanted, Services in the Bombay Presidency, for the purpose of promoting and protecting their interests, and bringing their case to the notice of Parliament.

RESOLUTIONS were also passed thanking Mr. H. S. King, M.P., Sir Roper Lethbridge, M.P., K.C.I.E., the other members of Parliament who had supported them, and the London Committee of the Association, for the efforts they were making on behalf of the Services. An influential Committee was appointed, and a set of rules for their guidance was approved, as was a petition setting forth the grievances of the Association for presentation to Parliament.

THE annual Administration Report of the Indian Telegraph Department shows that nearly 17½ lakhs of rupees were expended on capital account during the year, while the net receipts were under twenty lakhs, giving a dividend on the capital of 4.45 compared with 5.46 in the previous year.

THERE was a marked decrease in State telegrams, but a great growth in private traffic, which increased in value by over four lakhs.

A CRICKET match was played on Jan. 27th and 28th between Mr. Vernon's English team and the Bombay Gymkhana, and resulted in a victory for the visitors by an innings and seventy-four runs.

ONLY a distance of one hundred yards is now left to separate the working parties in the Khojak tunnel, so the heading will be driven through within a very short time.

THE local Governments have all replied on the subject of the Forest Amendment Bill, which will be passed in the course of the current Legislative Session.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS leaves Calcutta for Assam on the 17th Feb., spends three days, from the 2nd to the 5th March, at Shillong, and returns to Calcutta by 14th March.

A PARTY of Marris are reported to have raided in the neighbourhood of the Gambaz post, north of the Harnai route, but did no serious damage.

THE actuals of the next Budget statement will probably show a surplus of something like 120 lakhs, or about ten times the surplus of the forecast.

NOTES.

NEITHER by wire or "dak" is there much news of importance to record from India to-day. Prince Albert Victor's doings still continue to absorb the chief attention of officials, municipalities, and individuals. There has been some little loss of temper and manners in Bombay in connection with the attempt to arrange the programme for his reception on his return to that city. Somebody has denounced Mr. Grattan Geary as a Fenian, or objected to his becoming Chairman of the Reception Committee, owing to his sympathy with Fenians. Mr. Grattan Geary has given his accuser the lie, and so, it is to be hoped, re-established harmony, but he has not been made chairman. Mr. Justice Bayley was elected to that honour "with loud cheering."

THE Parsi community are in high glee. They are to be allowed to enrol themselves in the local battalion of Volunteers. One of their number, "Khan Sahib Dinshaw D. Khainbata"—rather a mouthful of a name to call out on parade—has been "assiduously and silently" working for this end, and now his efforts have been crowned with success. A Government resolution has been passed sanctioning the measure "on the usual conditions." What these are is not stated in the Deccan Herald, which chortles in its joy thus:—"We congratulate the Parsis community on this appreciation by the Viceroy of their loyalty, and we trust they will work with heart and soul and justify what Sir Richard Temple said about the blue blood still running in their veins."

Surely nothing that Sir Richard has ever said requires justifying. But how will the Government justify itself now to the Bengali Babú, who wants to be a man with a musket too?

IT may be owing to this decision that the Admiralty at home consider that India is now sufficiently defended—for they have decided not to send the new fast torpedo gun-vessel Grasshopper to the East Indian station as ordered a few days ago. This vessel is one of 3,000 horse-power, with a speed of about nineteen knots an hour. She is now to be sent on service to another station, and "my lords" are sending to India "a very different type of ship," one, in fact, of about a third of the Grasshopper's horse power, and of half her speed. This confidence in the security of the Indian Empire is, of course, gratifying, even if not intended as a compliment to the Parsi Volunteers.

THE intelligent traveller from Europe, says the Pioneer, should find some economic problems worth his study in India. One of these which would puzzle him considerably would be that presented by our collieries. He would find that, although coal of the best quality can be produced very cheaply at the pit's mouth, the high rates charged for its transfer by rail from point to point make the use of it prohibitive at any great distance from the mines. His wonder at this state of affairs would be increased when he learned that coal from England was imported in large quantities, and commands a ready sale at Bombay and other ports. The railways and mills which purchase it apparently find that this imported fuel is cheaper than that which can be got in the country itself. We will take one case in point. The Singareni coalfields are distant less than seven hundred miles from Bombay, and are connected with that port by the broad gauge lines of the Great Indian Peninsula and the Hyderabad State Railways. The coal raised is particularly good, and yet it cannot be "placed" at Bombay at a cost which would enable it to compete successfully with English coal.

THERE is a rumour current that the offices of the Examiners of Medical Accounts, Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, will, with effect from the 1st of April next, be amalgamated and placed under one Examiner. The office, it is expected, will be located at Calcutta, and be controlled by the Controller, Eastern Circle, Bengal. This is a step leading to economy which might well be followed in making one Ordnance Office and one Clothing Office for all India instead of three as now. One officer and one superintendent would suffice for the amalgamated office instead of three of each, and it might be located at Calcutta, where there will be plenty of accommodation available soon.

THE builders of the Tower of Babel may not have been Freemasons, but a meeting of Masons at Lahore last month must, judging from the following, have been somewhat like a Babel meeting after the collapse of that building:—"At a recent meeting of Lodge 'Industry' of Freemasons at Lahore for the installation of a new Master there were only about one or two-and-twenty brethren present, yet no less than six European and seven Oriental languages found exponents. The speakers were:—Bro. A. Grey in French, Bro. Stoddard in German, Bro. Dr. Calthrop in Latin, Bro. König in Italian, Bro. Manasseh in Hebrew, Bro. Dhulip Singh in Urdu, Brother George in Persian, Bro. Mukerji in Bengali, Bro. Mohan Lal in Sanskrit, Bro. Dr. Calthrop in Hindi, Bro. König in Dutch, and Bro. Jusrawali in Guzerati. The Right Worshipful Brother Parker, the District Grand Master, who had previously spoken in English, wound up with a most amusing specimen of the lingua franca spoken by the Punjab pleaders practising before the Chief Court.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT, in the course of his speech at the prize distribution of the Calcutta Madrassa on the 22nd ult., said to the students with reference to the complaint of "poverty" for so few original works being published from Native pens:—"It is quite true that a man may compile a really good book of history, or fiction, or science, and yet be too poor to publish it, or if not absolutely too poor, may feel that the cost of publishing is so great and the number of the reading public so small that he cannot risk the venture. I am glad to be able to tell you that there is a prospect of better things in this respect. An enterprising firm of publishers in London, Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., has determined to set up a branch in Calcutta with the express object of stimulating the Native literature of the country, and offering to Native authors a better opportunity than they now have of printing and publishing their works at such a low price as may be remunerative to the author and yet secure the sale of a large number of copies to the public. I see that the representative of this firm, Mr. Danby, is present here to-day, and I am glad to be able to introduce him to you, for I am sure that if his enterprise is successful, it will be a great advantage to you and a source of much literary development to the country."

THE two columns sent from Momeit on the south and Bharno on the north to punish the rebellious Kachins in the neighbourhood of Shweli river have joined hands at Manton, but it seems that a curious mistake was made before the movement was effected. Captain Greenway's column was already in Manton when Major Blundell and his men were coming within range, and being unaware of the arrival of the other column began to shell the place; thereupon the column in occupation mistaking the firing for that of the Kachin Jingsals hastened to reply, and serious damage might have been done had not the error been discovered in time.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 16.

Prince Albert Victor's progress during the past few days presents no feature of great interest to the public. Last week must have been one of comparative rest to him, for, although it was devoted to an almost incessant round of sightseeing, there were few State functions or public receptions. Leaving Patiala on Saturday night, his Royal Highness arrived at Delhi early on Sunday morning. On Monday he drove to the ancient tower known as the Kutal Manar, visiting en route Humayan's tomb—the scene of the capture and execution of the Delhi Princes by Hodson. Tuesday was spent in inspecting the old fort and palace of Jumna Musjid and the spots connected with incidents of the great siege of 1857. The party had the advantage of having as guide Colonel Ewart, Deputy Inspector-General of Police, who served with the Delhi field force, and was able to point out much that was of peculiar interest. After a day's snipe shooting on Wednesday the Prince went on to Jeypore, which was reached on Thursday morning. The Maharajah, with the principal nobles and the British Resident, received him at the railway-station, and an elephant procession was formed, which proceeded through the picturesque native city to the Residency. The streets, which were densely crowded, were lined by the Maharajah's troops and by the retainers of the nobles, and were spanned at intervals by triumphal arches. The scene is described as presenting a remarkably fine Oriental display. In the afternoon visits were interchanged with the Maharajah; and the Albert Museum, the foundation of which was laid by the Prince of Wales, was inspected. The remainder of the stay at Jeypore was given up to sport, beginning with a successful day's pig-sticking on Friday.

The committee appointed to organise the reception of the Prince at Bombay had a stormy meeting on Friday, a question having arisen who should be chairman of the executive committee. Sir Henry Morland proposed that Mr. Grattan Geary, president of the municipal corporation, should be elected. Another gentleman proposed Mr. Justice Bayley as rival candidate, and read a telegram from Sir Frank Forbes Adam expressing the opinion that, as the municipal corporation was pledged to plans which might clash with those of the general committee, it was advisable to elect an independent chairman. Mr. Grattan Geary denied that the corporation was pledged to any such plans, whereupon Mr. Symons rose and said that, as Mr. Grattan Geary had openly expressed sympathy with the Fenians, he was not a proper person to be at the head of such a movement. A scene of great confusion followed, and it was some time before Sir Raymond West, who presided, could restore order. When at last Mr. Grattan Geary got an opportunity to speak, he declared that he had no political sympathy whatever with the Fenian party. Ultimately Mr. Justice Bayley was elected.

Lord Reay has signalled the last few weeks of his term of office by getting into a quarrel with the University of Bombay. About two years ago a Bill to effect certain reforms in the University was drafted by Sir Raymond West, then Vice-Chancellor, and, after careful consideration, was approved by the Committee of the Senate, of which the Hon. Mr. Latham, Advocate-General, was chairman. The Bill was sent more than a year ago to the Bombay Government for submission to the supreme Government, as a preliminary step to being brought before the Legislature. Since then the Senate has heard nothing of the proposed measure, and the Government has given no reason for its silence. Lord Reay, speaking as Chancellor at the University Convocation held at the end of last month, thought fit to make some jocular remarks on the subject, saying that since Sir R. West ceased to be Vice-Chancellor the Bill had been left without a father, natural or adoptive. The Senate have, not unnaturally, taken offence, and Mr. Latham and several other prominent members have called a special meeting, which will be held on the 28th inst., and which will probably witness a lively discussion.

The recently-published administration report of the North-Western Provinces contains some remarks on the Native Press which carry peculiar interest and force, coming as they do from Sir A. Colvin, who is well known as a warm and sympathetic friend to the Natives of this country. The Native Press of the North-Western Provinces is, the Lieutenant-Governor says, to a great extent free from the excess which characterises the Press of many other parts of India, but there is a tendency—probably a growing tendency—to imitate the violent style and unreasoning methods of the Native Press elsewhere. This is much to be regretted, as it robs the press of its value as a guide and help to the Government. While admitting that certain Native papers in no way expose themselves to these strictures, he goes on to say:—

"Nevertheless, the Native Press is in too great measure in the hands of needy men, who use it to blackmail respectable fellow-citizens, and, apart from its uselessness as a guide to general Native opinion, the license which characterises it is in the highest degree odious to the large and important class thus laid under contribution."

Although not at present seeing any ground for believing that the general tone of thought among the people has been corrupted, Sir A. Colvin says:—

"It is difficult to believe that the uninterrupted and increasing circulation of newspapers, habitually imputing to the Government the basest designs and to its officers the most unscrupulous conduct, can fail in course of time to create among very ignorant people, such as are the masses here, a strong feeling of hostility to a Government which is confidently, and so far as they can see without contradiction, stated to be animated by such motives and served by such subordinates. All that can be said at present is that the ignorant classes seem, so far, to have formed and retained juster conceptions on the subject than those who have assumed the mission of instructing them."

A great fire broke out on Wednesday evening in the most crowded part of the Native city of Bombay. Eight or nine houses were destroyed, and several people are believed to have been killed. The damage is estimated at ten lakhs of rupees.

For some days past the entire garrison of Calcutta has been engaged in a series of manœuvres for the purpose of testing the defensibility of the city against an enemy supposed to be attacking from the sea and to have landed a force near the mouth of the Hooghly. The report on the operations is not yet issued. The manœuvres derive special interest from the fact that a clever brochure, written in the style of "The Battle of Dorking," has lately been published and largely circulated. The writer tells how a large Russian naval and military expedition, starting from the Amoor, managed to reach the Mutlah mouth of the Ganges unperceived, and, after landing troops there, proceeded to seize the approaches of the Hooghly, and then bombarded Fort William and captured the city before anyone was aware of their vicinity. He draws the moral that the military authorities are mistaken in trusting to the difficulties of the Hooghly navigation, and that Calcutta is really one of the most exposed, worst protected, and easily assailable towns in the Empire. During the absence of the regular troops Fort William was garrisoned by Volunteers.

The foreign land trade of India for the first seven months of the financial year shows a large decrease on the corresponding period of last year. The decrease is due chiefly to the falling off in the imports from Cashmere, Nepaul, and Karennee.

Favourable reports continue to be received from the new pearl fishery at Tuticorin. Oysters are plentiful, and some beautiful pearls have been found, but owing to the want of buyers, the prices realised have been rather low.

The Madras newspapers now give good reports from the Mysore gold-fields. Recent crushings have been most promising, and the prospect seems to look very hopeful.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 16.

The Ameer has appointed Colonel Wali Ahmed, son of the late General Ameer Ahmed, to act temporarily as agent with the Indian Government.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

RANGOON, FEB. 15.

The latest telegram from Brigadier-General Symons, dated yesterday from the camp at Haka, states that the troops arrived very tired after a long march, during which they crossed a ridge 7,600 ft. high. The troops were received in a friendly manner. The chief of the Lantin tribe, through whose territory the column under Colonel Tregear advances, was at Haka in search of a wife. Brigadier-General Symons reports that this chieftain was so extremely drunk that he had not yet been able to see him, but hoped by an interview to facilitate Colonel Tregear's advance on the Chins. It was reported that Colonel Tregear had arrived at Mouranipin, fifty-five miles distant from Haka.

An advance will be made from Haka on the Tashon Ywama (capital). The Tashons and Hakas are fighting among themselves. The Hakas state that the Tashon Ywama is only three marches distant. Brigadier-General Symons reports that Haka is suitable for a permanent camp. There is no material change in the condition and health of the troops.

The Tonhon column reports a good deal of desultory skirmishing. Two Sepoys and some artillery mules have been wounded. The insurgents continue defiant. The troops have burned some villages, and are destroying crops and killing cattle.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 16.

Beyond the accounts of the surrender of some chiefs, there is not much news of interest from the Lushai force. Lionpunga surrendered to the frontier police, under Mr. Daly, and another chief, Vantura, gave himself up to Colonel Tregear. The latter brought in Lieutenant Stewart's pistol.

Jahuta, who, it is believed, was the instigator of the attack on Lieutenant Stewart's party, is still at large, but the column will probably reach his stronghold in a few days.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 15.

The various Shan States have been informed by the Government that, besides tribute, the Government reserves to itself all forests, mines and minerals. If railways are constructed the land is to be provided free of cost.

From some cases now being tried in the Rangoon Police-court a regular slave trade with the Madras coast appears to have existed. Girls were brought to Rangoon on the promise of employment, but on arrival were closely confined and subsequently sold to men they had never previously seen, at prices varying from 70 to 90 rupees.

The Mandalay Herald makes serious charges against the local officials of the Maymyo Sub-division. It states that at a station near the ruby mines women and children, supposed to be relatives of dacoits, but against whom nothing can be proved, are kept confined and treated with great harshness. In its issue of Feb. 11, the Herald alleges that these persons are kept in a lock-up, and not allowed bedding or covering of any kind, although the weather is bitterly cold at night, the thermometer standing at 42 deg. It adds that one woman lost her child recently, it being literally frozen to death.

The delay which has taken place in carrying out the recommendation of Mr. MacDonnell, late officiating Chief Commissioner, to appoint a judicial commissioner in Upper Burma is being attended with very injurious results. It is daily becoming more urgent that the action of the local tribunals should be efficiently supervised.

The Municipality of Rangoon announce that there is an epidemic of small-pox in Rangoon.

SIAM.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 16.

According to the latest news from the Shan-Siam Boundary Commission, the work is progressing, and there has been no repetition of the slight show of opposition which was met with on first crossing the frontier, but there appears to be a good deal of sickness among the members and the escort.

It is to be hoped that matters will soon improve in this respect, and that the Commission will succeed in throwing additional light upon a country which will become one of great interest and importance should the Government be induced to take up the scheme for a Burma-China railway, so ably and steadily advocated by Mr. Hallett and Mr. Colquhoun.

RANGOON, FEB. 15.

The Siam Boundary Commission has arrived at Kaluton, three marches north of Sadan. The health of the Commission and the escort is indifferent, fever being prevalent. Doctor Close and a number of Sepoys and followers have been invalided. The main body of the Commission has left for the ferry over the Salwen, and crosses into the State of Maukme Bawliwa.

THE INDIAN EXPEDITIONS.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY.

Haka, the place where the Chin and Lushai columns are to meet, was occupied by the southern Chin column on Thursday. The local Chiefs maintain a friendly attitude.

The Tashon Chins continue their defiance, but are sure to submit when the force now ready to march against them from Fort White reaches their capital.

The troops in Sikkin are not to be withdrawn, but relieved at the end of March by one company of the Buffs and two companies of Native Infantry. They are continuing to hold Gnatong.

The Chinese Amban is still at Darjeeling.

JEYPORE, FEB. 15.

Prince Albert Victor and party yesterday morning went pig-sticking and killed eleven boars. In the afternoon news was brought of a tiger being in the neighbourhood, whereupon the Royal party set out in pursuit. The beast was tracked and the Prince succeeded in wounding him, Captain Harvey afterwards despatching him.

AGRA, FEB. 16.

Mr. Vernon's cricket team yesterday concluded a match against an Eleven of Agra, the former defeating their opponents with ease by an innings and 66 runs.

THE ELECTIVE SYSTEM IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The Expansion of the Legislative Councils—inmoderation—is a step which is now recognised by public opinion generally as one which may with safety be taken; but any movement in this direction which the Government can contemplate must be a wholly different matter from the creation of electoral bodies sending representatives by the score to these Councils and making them petty Parliaments empowered to interfere in executive details and to meddle with the finances of the country. If India is to be governed at all, in its present state, there must of necessity be an official majority in every Council. Otherwise Government will constantly find their administrative machinery clogged and their carefully considered measures of legislation rejected simply because they bear the official stamp. India is no place wherein to try the tactics which Her Majesty's Opposition are by tradition privileged to make use of in Parliament. Its administration has well been described as a "sensitive, delicate, and dangerous machine"; and interference with its many parts by unskilled hands may lead to disastrous accidents. The control of its internal affairs, the direction of its foreign policy, the management of its large army, the development of its resources and the financing of its revenue are not tasks which can be handed over to rhetoricians and essayists. They have taxed the powers of men of tried ability and long experience in the past, and there are no signs that the labour and anxiety inseparable from the ruling of a great Empire are likely to become less in the future. Representative institutions are no doubt an excellent form of Government among people qualified to form a judgment upon the acts of those whom they themselves have vested with authority; but they are not unmixed blessings always in such cases as modern Republics prove. To apply them suddenly to India, with its millions still sunk in ignorance of all but the petty concerns of their daily life of toil, divided by race and religion in many instances, and with but the vaguest ideas of moral responsibility, would, indeed, be a blunder so great that England would deserve to lose India forthwith if she were to take such a course. The consolidation of her rule has been a slow and painful process. The right gained by conquest has been confirmed by the reasonable recognition of the claims of the people to some share in the management of their own concerns, with the prospect of a gradual extension of this concession; and it is only those who are impatient of control and resentful of the discipline which a strong administration exacts who would now venture to inaugurate an era of disintegration. Their schemes of "reform" are so varied that it is difficult to follow their intentions or to focus their aspirations; but one central idea seems to dominate them, which is, that opposition to constituted Government is the best way of serving the interests of India—and their own. They may disclaim selfishness and parade the "justice of their cause," arrogate to themselves the right to represent millions when they are the head only of some insignificant clique or association, proclaim themselves leaders when they have no followers, and pose as champions while their flimsy shield is thrust aside by those whom they would protect; but the affectation of a militant patriotism is too transparent. This is the conclusion which is being borne in upon thoughtful men among both the European and Native communities of India day by day, and one has but to study the tactics of the Congress to recognise how just it is.

THE FRONTIER TRIBES.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

The other day we commented on the amount of trouble which the Chins have caused to the British authorities ever since the annexation of Upper Burma. Yet it was not from this quarter that anyone knowing Upper Burma would have predicted most trouble, but rather from the neighbourhood of Bhamo. There so many wild tribes gather, and men's minds have been accustomed so long to the state of uneasiness and unrest which perpetual raids involve, that the most prolonged trouble was to be expected there. The strong wooden palisade of posts which used to surround Bhamo was a sufficient proof of how constantly attacks had occurred; and every village in the neighbourhood had its bamboo stockade, while those in immediate vicinity to the Kachin hills kept watch every night to guard against a surprise. Kachin raids were painfully frequent occurrences, and the Bhamo district was within reach of Chinese and other filibusters as well, so the people lived in a state of chronic uneasiness, every man sleeping with his hand on his dah, as it were, or with a loaded revolver under his pillow. In such a place as this, one would have expected a more protracted struggle with the elements of anarchy which have so long reigned supreme in that unhappy border-land; but apparently the work of pacification and of bringing the wild border tribes under some sort of check has progressed much more rapidly there than in the Chindwin.

The State of Momeik borders on the Ruby Mines and Bhamo districts, and at first a good deal of mischief was brewed there. A part of Mohlaing had been added to Momeik, much to the disgust of Khan Hlaing, who claims the Sawbwaship of Mohlaing, and who consequently became one important element of disturbance. Another was found in the person of Saw Yan Naing, one of the numerous grandsons of Mindone Min, who had established himself in an almost inaccessible position among the mountains. Towards the end of 1888 these two worthies planned a simultaneous movement on a large scale at various points on the northern frontier. Owing to imperfect information a few men of the Hampshire Regiment attacked a body of the dacoits in a strongly stockaded position, and suffered serious loss; but a few days later the tables were turned, and the dacoits were severely defeated and dispersed by the troops and military police. Since then only small bands have had to be dealt with. Then a band, consisting chiefly of Chinese brigands and deserters from the Chinese army, had to be put down. In January last year these gentry were attacked by the military police, and entirely dispersed with the loss of at least 50 killed. This lesson seems to have sufficed for the Chinese filibusters, who were perhaps the most dangerous of all the discordant elements there, and who in the latter years of Theebaw's reign had been strong enough to take Bhamo itself and held it for a time in spite of the Burmese troops.

Then the Kachins had to be dealt with. The Pônkan tribe had proved most troublesome, but the troops which had been engaged in the Mogaung expedition in the early part of last year succeeded in bringing this tribe to submission before returning to Bhamo. They occupied Karwan, the chief village, and, before they evacuated it, the headman of the Pônkan villages entered into a solemn engagement to abstain from raids in the future. But other tribes had also to be dealt with; and four separate expeditions were sent last cold season—one against the Lepei tribe; one against the Ithi tribe; a third against the Sana Kachins of the Lataung tribe; and a fourth against the Makan and other tribes in the neighbourhood of Sinbo. In these four expeditions 46 villages were destroyed, together with large stores of grain; and there were 22 engagements in all. The result of these operations has been most satisfactory. The occupation of Kamaing and the establishment of a military post there has opened the road to the jade-mines. Up to the end of May 1889, 98 villages had tendered their submission; and practically all except a few villages have been brought to submission. The rest of the work is merely a question of time and patience; but already an immense advance has been made, and one of the wildest borderlands in the East is now in a state of peace and security such as it has probably not known for centuries, if, indeed, it was ever the abode of anything but the wildest anarchy. Of course there will be occasional raids still. The raiding instinct has been ingrained into these people by its indulgence for centuries, and occasionally it will break out, in spite of all lessons and solemn engagements. But anything like combined opposition is now probably at an end, and we trust that in future no more serious operations will be necessary than merely punishing an isolated village for a cattle raid. Even this should become gradually more and more rare; and with growing peace and security the trade with Western China should increase as much as it is possible for it to do until railways reduce the cost of carriage over the hills, and Chinese officials cease to be leeches, killing the trade by their exactions, legitimate and legal, or the reverse.

THE EURASIAN—HIS FUTURE.

(Indian Spectator.)

David Emanuel Harkenburgh White, founder and first President of the Eurasian Association of Southern India, died in February last, and his funeral was very largely attended by people occupying positions in the public service, from the highest to the lowest. He was very widely known and highly respected. A good deal has been written about our lamented friend. The latest public utterance in connection with him is an address delivered by his nephew, Mr. E. I. S. White, to the members of the East Indian community. From this address, brought out in pamphlet form, we learn that David White was so named after his cousin David Dyce Sombre, General Sombre's grandson. The General, as is known to students of history, distinguished himself by his valour in the field, his talents and ingenuity being exercised against the British, standing by his guns with a handful of men, after the disorganised rabble army had fled, and retiring afterwards, though not without honour, under the cover of darkness. David White was the leader of a movement which had for its object the promotion of the best interest of the Eurasian community, if need be, by establishing themselves as a distinct Indian race. The writer of the pamphlet under notice inherits some of his uncle's zeal, but we fear he is carrying it too far. He says the East Indian is under the bane of an actual curse, handed down from father to son from the earliest times when the race had its being. It is the curse of its European paternity. He says the Eurasian is an Indian, and can never become a European. With all our sympathy with him, we fail to follow Mr. White here. It is many years now since we saw Madras, and therefore we cannot speak with full knowledge regarding the Eurasian class of the place which has been continually before his eyes. But are this particular Madras species as unprogressive as the red Indians? In our own Presidency we certainly see around us evidences which convince us that the Eurasian community is no exception to the laws which operate generally throughout animate nature. There are many hundreds of families who, by intermarriage through several generations with Europeans, have lost every outward characteristic of Native extraction, and are almost as European in their habits, aspirations, and general conduct in life as the Anglo-Indians in India. There are others who have also reached this condition, except to a trifling extent in outward appearance. Such Eurasians are not, as Mr. White asserts, "a pitiful travesty of the European." A man is not to be called a travesty of the European because he has not lived in England, because he has been born in India, and has never left India; and because India satisfies his wants, and he has no burning desire to leave it and take up his abode in the British Isles. There is a multitude of Europeans who have been born in the country, who are not distinguishable in these respects from Eurasians. It is possible, also, for the domiciled European, in the course of, say, thirty years' residence in India, to be quite as Indian in his habits and ideas as that class of Europeans who have been born in the country. Of the Madras Eurasian, we must repeat, we know but little personally. . . . In conclusion, we have only to add that because faults are found in a system, it is wrong to maintain that therefore the entire system should be swept away as so much rubbish. It is very seldom that any system is altogether bad. If Mr. White and his party do not see that good accrues to the Eurasian community by being welded into the European, we do. If, as Mr. White seems to think, the Eurasian is incapable of imitating the good qualities of the Englishman, but can only copy his vices, then, as member of a separate race, he may copy the vices of the Natives, and sink lower and lower. There should be a continual infusion of blood from the higher race, and this is what Mr. White's system excludes. We are sorry to differ from him so far. His theory is rather attractive to a Native journalist, but it is wanting in coherence and forethought. Let the Eurasian copy the good qualities, both of the European and the Native, his relatives on the father's side and the mother's, and let him adapt himself as far as practicable to the circumstances of India. That is about all we can expect him to do, to his own credit and of his ancestors.

CHEAP PASSAGES.

(Planters' Gazette.)

One line, in England, has offered to the "E.I.P.A." ships on time-charter at current rates, and has further guaranteed to fill them up, outwards, with passengers and cargo, if the Association will do the same on the homeward voyages. It is very probable that this offer will be accepted; the details are being worked out, and proposal slips, for the opinion of members of the Committee, will soon be circulated. To facilitate calculations, such members of the Association as can procure or provide freight are requested to send details, mentioning quantity, description, port, time, and usual rates per ton, to Captain K. M. Foss, Kasauli, who is making a compilation. It is not too much to say that this is an opportunity, not likely to occur again, for a defensive combination among planters and business men generally, in order to obtain favourable terms for their freight. The lists still remain open, and are headed by ten Generals, many of the headquarter staff, Commissioners, leading Civilian, and officials of all grades, and the movement has found marked favour in the leading journals in every presidency, so that any attempt to "boycott" its steamers would meet with a stern reception, as the Association have adopted as their motto, "Defence, not Defiance," and have three or more times humbly invited twenty-five of the leading S.S. Companies in existence to see if no amicable arrangement is practicable, as an alternative to the present system. Ship-wners should remember that in the last two years the leave rules have been changed and increased facilities offered for furlough, while the depreciated rupee acts as a burdensome tax upon the military officer, who up to twenty years' regimental service only draws some Rs. 550 a month clear, and loses nearly a quarter of his small saving out of this amount by the rate of exchange, when remitting home for the benefit of his wife and bairns! Think of this, ye gentlemen of England, who live at home at ease, who own ships, and can influence the Boards of Direction. Many of our fellow-countrymen have been serving their Queen and country in the Land of the Sun and of the Savage for, say, nineteen and a-half long years. When their monthly bills and subscriptions are paid, by denying themselves everything possible, they may be able to remit home £125 per annum, for the maintenance of their wives and the education of their children as gentlemen's sons, but to join the family circle they cannot hope with the present usually prevailing prices, so it will be seen that this is no groundless agitation.

THE COST OF CIVIL JUSTICE.

(Madras Mail.)

"Figures may be made to prove anything," and the Government of India may be congratulated on the success of its laborious efforts to prove by figures that the opinion hitherto held and expressed by Provincial Governments, and by the Indian and Home Press, that the Government makes and accepts a large profit on the administration of Civil Justice is erroneous. The Government of India has had what it calls a "complete and accurate" statement of receipts and charges drawn up for the year 1885, and it "believes that the figures, though not up to date, sufficiently illustrate the question in dispute." What, then, are Receipts? The Government replies in a Resolution that the undermentioned items may be included under that head:—

(a) Receipts in Court-fee stamps. This item was to represent the value of all Court-fee stamps filed in Civil Courts with plaints or petitions, and in connection with the service of processes. The value of the Court-fee stamps on probates, letters of administration, and certificates was not to be included.

(b) Receipts in cash. This item was to include all cash receipts finally credited to Government. Amounts which are merely paid into Court in order to be paid away again, such as diet money for witnesses, or sums paid in proceedings for the execution of decrees, were not to be included.

Then, what are Charges? This is the most serious part of "the question in dispute," and unfortunately it is just that part of it which it is in the power of the Government to shape in accordance with its wishes. The Government wants to show that it is idle to allege that Civil Justice is carried on at an indecent profit. Local official authority has set down that profit at about eight lakhs per annum for Madras, and 250 lakhs for the whole of India. It is all a question of what is debited to Civil Justice under the elastic term of "Charges." What, then, are the "Charges" according to the Supreme Government's present view? The Government replies that the following items should be so included under that head:—

(a) The whole of the salaries of officers and establishments and the contingent and other expenditure of Courts which, like Small Cause Courts, are engaged solely in the administration of Civil Justice.

(b) A share of the salaries of officers and establishments and of the contingent and other expenditure of Courts which are engaged only partly in the administration of Civil Justice. It was stated that the share might be determined in proportion to the time devoted by the Courts to civil work, but that each Local Government should determine it on principles which seemed to it fair.

(c) A share of the cost of the Stamp establishment.

(d) A share of the discount on the sale of Court-fee stamps.

(e) The refunds of Court-fee stamps used in Civil Courts.

(f) A share of the expenditure on "Law Officers."

(g) A share of the cost of pensions and leave allowances of officers who have been engaged during any portion of their service in the administration of Civil Justice.

(h) The rent actually paid, or, in the case of buildings which are the property of Government, a fair rent according to the Public Works Department valuation of the building, for the buildings or portions of buildings used by Civil Courts.

(i) Cost of stationery and printing for the several Courts.

By applying the above definitions of income and expenditure, the Government of India has arrived at the conclusion that in Bengal there is a surplus, which amounts to 14½ lakhs; that in Madras the receipts and charges are "practically equal"; and that in all other provinces the charges are "much in excess of the receipts, so that the deficit on the whole account exceeds 12½ lakhs." This is startling enough, but, bad as it is, it is not as bad as it ought perhaps to be. "The calculations," we read, "are extremely intricate, and, notwithstanding the labour that has been bestowed on them, the results can only be considered to be approximately correct. If the full measure of the expenditure involved in the administration of Civil Justice could be shown, it is probable that the deficit would be somewhat greater than that now obtained." The Government feels that it would be entitled to include the cost of Police guards, Treasury charges, share of rent of Stamp offices, and the cost of manufacturing and despatching from England the stamps by which the revenue is realised. But the Government is merciful. It reserves the right to "pile it on;" but at present it is content with the fact that the charges show an excess over expenditure.

We turn once again to the Madras High Court's Report, dated Aug. 7 last, on the administration of Civil Justice in this Presidency, and we find in the appendix an elaborate statement "showing the Judicial Receipts and Charges of Civil Courts for 1888." From this statement we obtain these totals:—

Courts.	Receipts.	Charges.
High Court ...	Rs. 1,17,542	Rs. 4,17,110
Small Cause Court ...	" 1,72,954	" 1,01,154
District Courts ...	" 30,50,907	" 20,29,940

Total Rs. 33,41,403 ... Rs. 25,48,204

The High Court considers, and the Government is of the same opinion, that these figures show a surplus of Rs. 7,23,199. The High Court gives particulars of the charges it has allowed for, and so does the Government of India: but there is no means of checking the debits of the latter. But we note that the Government of India make a charge of Rs. 1,15,000 for "rents for buildings used by Civil Courts," whereas no such charge appears in the High Court's statement. "Pension and leave allowances" figure for Rs. 3,42,000 in the former, but do not appear at all in the latter statement. The Government of Madras said in its order of Aug. 30 last, that in 1885 the receipts of Civil Courts in the Presidency amounted to Rs. 32,54,651, and the charges to Rs. 24,67,478, so that the year gave a surplus of Rs. 5,65,015. But the Government of India contends that the receipts in that year were Rs. 32,25,000, and the charges Rs. 31,88,000, so that the surplus was only Rs. 37,000. Not only so, but the Government of India is prepared to prove this—by figures!

THE ANGLO-INDIAN EASY LEAVE ASSOCIATION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It was a gorgeous idea, I can't help thinking so now, though it has not been received with approbation. The old Colonel, when I broached the subject to him, said something about encouraging d—d malingerers; and the Commissioner, to whom the Colonel blurted out the whole matter, observed that the ingenuity of the scheme was only surpassed by its lack of principle.

The theory on which we—for a partner was necessary—was as follows. The Cheap Passage Association are going to make a trip home a possibility to the civilian or soldier officer, no matter how meagre his pockets are lined; but what use of a cheap trip to them if lack of leave prevents them from taking it? No man with a reasonable desire to keep in the swing of the great world should ever miss seeing more than two successive Ascot weeks, and ought to whistle the airs of every alternate Gaiety burlesque; yet men to whom Goodwood was not a necessity, and who did not see the necessity of a knowledge of the current music-hall songs, have laid it down that a soldier is not to have long leave until he has been three years in the country, and that a civilian must grill for eight. A rule is a rule, as Generals and Colonels, L.G.'s and Commissioners are constantly impressing on their flocks; but—and it was on this but that we were to found our Association—should an officer be blessed with a fine crop of "Urgent private affairs," and can be spared, he can take leave sufficiently often to be able to accord a personal interview to his English bootmaker whenever he wants a fresh set of boots, which is an important matter.

Our brilliant idea was to supply to our clients the necessary "Urgent private affairs." Each member of the Association who paid his entrance fee and monthly subscription would receive once in each two years a telegram which would be sufficient to ensure his leave home being granted. These telegrams are so carefully worded that neither the sender nor the recipient could feel their consciences, however delicately balanced, jarred—for, though the Colonel appealed to Hades when I informed him of the fact, my partner and myself have consciences. I was to register the names and take the money, and my partner was to send the telegrams.

A few selections from our schedule of telegrams will, perhaps, more thoroughly explain matters. Take for instance,

No. 3, "Return at once, or you will be too late." Could anything be simpler or more uncompromising than that? Yet, attached to an urgent demand for leave and forwarded with the remark that "the enclosed telegram speaks for itself," it should be good for at least six months.

No. 15, "It is impossible for you to take up the rents on your property unless you are present in person," and No. 23, "A sum of money has been left you. Return at once to claim it or you will surely lose it," combine humour with practicalness. The happy recipient, on arriving at home, would find his rents on an old coat donated by the Association, or his sum of money, say threepence in coppers, left for him by the same benefactors at the office, on condition he claimed it at once.

Nos. 106 and 113, "Uncle dead, affairs in utmost confusion, return at once," and "Will discovered, return at once," are triumphs of vagueness. It is not stated whose uncle died, or whose will was discovered, and it is an undeniable fact that uncles do die daily, leaving their affairs in confusion, and that lost wills are perpetually turning up.

It was a great idea, though the Association is quashed, and I hardly think that the Commissioner was justified in his remark when he said that its inception showed a moral obliquity that was almost criminal.

SUCCESSFUL TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN SIND (Times of India.)

An interesting and remarkably successful experiment in technical education is detailed in a resolution of the Educational Department acceding to the request of Mr. Jacob, the Educational Inspector in Sind, for an increase of some Rs. 16,550 in expenditure on schools in that province. The claim of the Sind local boards to larger grants in aid of education is freely admitted, and will probably be provided for in the coming budget. Appended to the resolution (in which, by the way, Mr. Jacob is warmly and very justly commended for the energy he has shown in promoting education in Sind and in bringing the requirements of the province prominently into notice) is an extract from a letter of Mr. Jacob, in which he gives some details of the practical system of technical education, which has been instituted in the Nausahro schools by Khan Bahadur Kadirdad Khan. We learn from this extract that what has made these schools so popular with the industrial classes is that the people see clearly that boys can earn just as high wages in the workshops or the industrial school as they would do if put out to work elsewhere; while the school holds out a balance of advance by giving skilled instruction in a handicraft, side by side with the three R's or with an English education. "To the ordinary industrial school," says Mr. Jacob, "which offers no wages but gives merely instruction, the craftsman living from hand to mouth cannot afford to send a son who is old enough to join the bread-winners of his family. In any case, sending such a boy to an industrial school of this kind is a sacrifice which only the enlightened few can be expected to make, for it is like locking up so much capital which is urgently needed for present circulation. Mr. Kadirdad Khan was the first to meet this hitherto insuperable difficulty by the opening of his schools at Nausahro, which demand no sacrifice from the parents, but, on the contrary, offer them a substantial gain." The industries taught embrace Sind embroidery, tailoring, joining, and cabinet work, smith's work in iron and brass, electro-plating, mason's work, pottery, &c., and the attendance at all the classes is continually increasing. The boys in the workshops are divided into "gangs," each gang being headed by a senior boy who has displayed exceptional skill. The schools are in close touch with the market; and, as orders come in, they are distributed among the gangs, and the profits of the work when delivered are divided among the members of the gang in proportions fixed by the teacher, and regulated by the degree of skill possessed by each individual. The head of one of the gangs at Kandiaro, for example, consisting of three Mahomedans and two Hindu boys, is assessed at 8 annas a day, one of his companions at 5 annas, one at 3, and the other two at 2 annas. The articles manufactured by the boys and girls of the five schools are readily bought up by the public, the pupils are learning to earn a living by the fruit of their own skill and industry, and the progress made by them in non-technical studies is singularly good. The industrial school for girls, Mr. Jacob tells us, is most popular, and suggests new possibilities in the extension of female education; for it is found that the opportunity of earning money keeps the girls at school up to a later age than it has hitherto been usual for them to stay. He informs us, also, that the schools, as is not unnatural, have created extraordinary interest among the industrial classes, both Mahomedan and Hindu; and the movement has been supported by the local Zamindars, who give a voluntary contribution towards the expenses of the schools of six pies on every rupee of revenue paid by them to the State; while several of them have given their services on the school committees. It is also interesting to learn that every officer in Sind, including the Commissioner and the Collector of the District, Colonel Trevor, who has visited the schools, or has inspected the manufactures turned out of the workshops, has expressed unqualified satisfaction at what he has seen. The experiment is well worth trying on a more extensive scale elsewhere. We commend it to the especial attention of the Department.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN'S MISSION.

(Pioneer.)

Sir Robert Sandeman's success in his negotiations with the tribes holding the eastern portion of the Gomal route is the more welcome, as there were not wanting prophets of ill-omen who foretold that failure must follow any peaceful overtures to the various clans. They argued that control over the Gomal Pass proper, that is, over some 30 miles of road across the frontier, could only be gained by force, and that a strong expedition would be needed to coerce the Shiranis, Mahsuds, and Zalli Khel Waziris, with whom we should have to deal. As we have seen, the Shiranis, who hold the country to the south of the Pass, sent in their jirga without any hesitation, thus simplifying the situation at the outset. The Mahsuds and Zalli Khel followed their example a few days later, and as a sign of good faith they surrendered a number of refugees and expressed a desire to serve the British Government. The Mahsud Waziris are one of the most powerful tribes along this part of the border, and have given much trouble in the past; while the Zalli Khel are a large section of the clan known as the Darwesh Khel, intimately associated with the Mahsuds in holding the northern border of the Gomal. Sir Robert Sandeman can thus enter the Pass by way of the Zhob River with full confidence that he will not be molested on his march, and our engineers can mark out the road in perfect safety. There is only one portion three or four miles in length, we believe, that is really difficult, and it is here generally that the Powindar caravans get blocked, and are attacked by the local tribes. A considerable amount of blasting may be required to make the road practicable on easy gradients; but after the experience gained in the Khyber and the Bolan the work should be expeditiously accomplished. There will then be another good military road through the Suleiman Range, and one which in case of war will be most valuable if Ghazni has to be made an objective point. Beyond the Zalli Khel country, further to the north-west, it is said that only low rolling hills have to be crossed until the Kohnak Range is reached, where the Sarwandi Kotal, 7,500 feet above sea-level, has to be surmounted. There are no obstacles, however, which would seriously impede the march of an army in this direction, the real difficulties being in that section of the Pass which lies just beyond our frontier. The political effects of the present Mission are likely to make themselves felt to the westward among the independent and warlike Suleiman Khel, and it is very reasonable to suppose that this clan will be won over in the course of time. The opening out by military roads of the little known country to the north of the Hurnai route will contribute materially to the strength of the Quetta-Peshin position, while at the same time facilitating a direct advance when necessary upon Ghazni, the strategical value of which place in the front line of defence stretching from Kabul to Kandahar is fully admitted.

AGITATION IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

Every District Officer knows that the ryot understands nothing beyond the petty affairs of his own circle, and has no time, in the hard struggle for existence, to interest himself in what Congress-leaders pretentiously call "national politics." He is content if his harvest is good, and his concern with matters outside his village is of the smallest. The due observance of his religious rites, the maintenance of his caste rules, the enjoyment of primitive festivities, a pilgrimage to this or that shrine, alone affect the monotony of his daily life. He has thus no range of ideas, and if he were called upon to take part in any movement, other, perhaps, than that which touches his religion, he would make no response. But above him stand the orthodox educated class, deeply interested in maintaining Hindu traditions and keeping alive the spirit of their religion. How, it may be asked, do these look upon the agitation which seeks to create democratic institutions in a country where the conservatism of caste still flourishes in full and vigorous life? We have more than once pointed out that orthodox Hinduism views with alarm the progress made by the party of agitation who have in the last ten years come to the front. And the reason is not far to seek. The Brahmin who, by virtue of his birth, apart from his social position, commands the respect and even veneration of the subordinate castes, recognises that a process of levelling down must inevitably follow if the demands of the Congress are conceded, and that his old influence over the people will be rapidly undermined and eventually destroyed. Representative institutions convey to him the unpleasant picture of his possible subordination to men with whom he cannot even associate in ordinary life, and he is not therefore likely to welcome changes which involve results of this kind. The democratic principle is absolutely antagonistic to Hinduism, for it reduces to a dead level the Brahmin and the pariah; the vote of one would be of equal weight with the vote of another once the mass of the people understood the nature of the responsibility thrown upon them. In the distant future, when the illiterate millions have become enlightened, the dominant classes among the Hindus will have to accept the new position, but at present their power is unshaken, and they are bestirring themselves to prevent what in their eyes would be little short of a calamity. The struggle between the exponents of democracy and the orthodox party is certain to be a bitter one, and already there are indications that it is commencing in earnest.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 29.)

MESSRS. METCALFE AND GARDINER have been permitted to resign the Bengal Civil Service.

It was whispered at a late stage of the recent banquet to Mr. H. S. King, Calcutta, that the Viceroy had promised to recommend the rate of 1s. 6d. per rupee as the minimum at which the Uncovenanted Service pensions should be remitted home hereafter.

It is understood that the Government of Bengal has indented for two professors of English literature from England for employment in Bengal, and that the Secretary of State for India has engaged for five years two men on a salary of Rs. 800 each a month, who are expected to arrive in this country by the end of the current month.

AN additional seventy-two miles of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway was opened for goods traffic last week between Purulia and Chakradharpur, making in all 120 miles opened since Dec. 15th. There now remains only 140 miles to be laid to complete the main line from Nagpore to Assensole.

THE terms on which Sir Theodore Hope's Syndicate have obtained the concession to construct the Chittagong-Assam Railway are the grant of five square miles of waste land for every mile of rails laid between certain points, giving a total area of 3,000 square miles and the exclusive right to work coal and the petroleum in selected areas, 30 square miles in all, in the country passed through. The capital required for the company, which is still to be formed, is six crores of rupees, but the whole of this would not of necessity have to be raised at once if the agreement with the Secretary of State, is signed within the next two months. It is hoped to float the company in the spring, and commence operations next cold weather.

A MEETING of the Armenian community of Calcutta was held on Jan. 27 at the local college, with Mr. Gasper in the chair. The following resolutions were passed:—

1.—That an association be established, to be called the Armenian Association of Calcutta, for the purpose of protecting the interests and advancing the welfare of the Armenians in India, Armenia, and elsewhere.

2.—That the Association affirm the desirability of an equal distribution of its moral and material support and aid between communities or associations of Armenians out of India, who may at any time be suffering most from oppression in the furtherance of the political, moral, and material welfare of Armenians in India.

3.—That this meeting resolves that the Association shall consist of Armenians, who will be invited to subscribe sums according to their means, such subscriptions not to be less than one rupee.

CALCUTTA seldom witnessed such an imposing spectacle as the funeral of Mr. R. Knight on Jan. 28. The house of the deceased was crowded by Europeans and Natives long before the funeral cortège left the premises. For a time traffic at the north end of Chowringhee-road was suspended, owing to the push of carriages. The coffin was made of plain teakwood, polished, but hidden in a mass of crosses, wreaths, and flowers sent by friends. The funeral cortège comprised two rows of carriages, and extended to nearly a quarter of a mile, besides those who followed on foot. The service was read in an impressive manner by the Rev. Mr. Hyde, of the Church of England. Among those who attended the funeral were members of the Bench and Bar, the Bengal Government, priests of several denominations, the Municipality, merchants, solicitors, pressmen, conspicuous among whom were Messrs. Hensman, Wilson, and Furrell; and the élite of Native society were also well represented.

THE Secretary of State has been pleased to sanction the retiring pension of £1,200 a year, payable according to the official rate of exchange, to Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, late Puisne Judge, High Court, Calcutta.

A COMMITTEE has been appointed in Calcutta to discuss certain disputed questions arising out of the working of the Merchandise Marks Act. It consists of Mr. Harvey James, Legislative Secretary; Mr. Scobell Armstrong, Collector of Customs; Mr. J. F. O'Connor, Assistant Financial Secretary; Mr. Ashworth, representing the Bengal Chamber of Commerce; and Mr. J. Irvine, on behalf of the Calcutta Trades' Association.

THERE is a deadly difference of opinion between the Bengal and Bombay Chambers of Commerce on the subject of Turkey red twill.

MADRAS.

(Jan. 29.)

THE new submarine cable from Madras to Penang will be laid in the course of the next two years. It will pass south of the Nicobars, thus avoiding the reefs which cut the present cable.

AN imposing demonstration took place on the 13th inst. at the railway station, Madras, in honour of the daughter of Mr. Subramaniam, editor of the local Hindu, who was recently remarried at Bombay under the auspices of the Hindoo Widow-remarriage Association, and arrived here accompanied by her husband and father. A large assembly of Natives collected to receive her, among whom was Dewan Bahadur Ragunath Rao, as also several Native members of the local bar. A Native band was in attendance. The couple were presented with fruits, flowers and a costly silver-lace bodice, and drove off amid acclamations and the strains of the band.

A MADRAS correspondent writing on the 24th says:—Another examination scandal came to light. The examination for Bachelor of Laws, which has been going on since Monday, was suspended this morning, when 129 candidates assembled in the Senate house for the paper on Jurisprudence. It appears that Mr. Wilson, Registrar, yesterday received an anonymous letter containing questions of Jurisprudence, which on comparison were found identical with the questions to be set to-day. The anonymous letter was handed to the police. All the candidates applied to the Syndicate to hold a fresh examination on all the subjects, as it is suspected that other subjects have obtained some publicity before the examination began.

MR. SULLEN, Presidency Postmaster, died from an attack of paralysis, on Jan. 25th. He had seen upwards of forty years' service in the Postal Department, and was highly esteemed by all classes. He did good work in the Field Post Office during the Mutiny and the Afghan War.

THE following is a translation of a special Gazette issued by the Nizam's Government, Hyderabad, January 26th, after the death of the Nawab Munir-ul-Mulk:—Order by his Excellency the Minister in the Political and Financial Department, dated the 4th Jamadi-us-Sain 1307 H.—His Excellency the Minister expresses his deep and sincere sorrow and regret at the death of Nawab Meer Saadut Ali Khan Ghuyur Jung Shujaa-ud-Dowla Munir-ul-Mulk, Bahadoor, which melancholy event took place at six o'clock this morning. Whether those claims be considered which the father of the deceased had upon this State, or the personal merits, refinement, qualifications, and services of the deceased himself be borne in mind, this occurrence is certainly a public calamity which has unfortunately fallen upon this State. As his Excellency Sir Asman Jah Bahadoor had a heartfelt attachment for the father of the deceased and a special friendship with the deceased himself, and as he has a sincere sympathy for the family to which the deceased belonged, and which has during a short period suffered so many repeated misfortunes, he is at a loss to find words to express the real pain and grief he feels at the present blow, which is the heaviest of all. This premature and heartrending death has truly deprived the Minister of his sincere friend, the State of an illustrious nobleman, and the Government of an able and an honourable officer. His Highness also is pleased to express his sincere sorrow at this sad event, and his princely sympathy with the family of the deceased. One day's leave is granted to-day in all Government offices at the headquarters in Hyderabad, and in the districts on the day when this order reaches there.

ON Saturday evening last, Prince Alfred of Connaught and Earl of Sussex, and the Princesses Margaret and Patricia of Connaught, the children of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, were entertained at the Central Gymnasium at Poona. Sergeant-Major Gorman, the Chief Instructor, assisted by his staff, gave a series of evolutions concluding with a mêlée, in which the Gymnasium staff joined.

THE following military order has been promulgated:—"The admission in the Poona Volunteer Rifle Corps of selected Parsees is sanctioned on the condition that they sufficiently understand the English language, adopt the uniform of the corps, and are willing and able to share in its duties. (Vide G. R. 4,321 of 20th October, 1888.)" The order was, we learn, communicated by the Adjutant of the Poona Corps to Mr. Dinshaw Hormusji Khambatta, who has diligently and unostentatiously worked for the enrolment of his co-religionists as volunteers.

THE services of Surgeon J. Crimmin, V.C., at present Port Sanitary Officer in Bombay, having been placed at the disposal of the Government of India for employment in the Civil Department, he has been appointed Civil Surgeon of Shikarpur; but, on being relieved by Surgeon F. WE (Civil and Military Gazette) had previously been informed that the Naib Sultan of Cabul had been placed under arrest in connection with his accounts; and information derived from Native sources in Cabul now states that misappropriation of public money to the extent of Rs. 300,000 has been discovered against the Naib Sultan. The embezzlement is said to have occurred in the construction of the Ameer's new palace and Masjid, which were both erected under his supervision some years ago. His other accounts relating to the Kotwali realisation of criminal fines and prisoners' accounts are also being examined and checked by a committee composed of Sirdar Abdulla Khan, Taimuri, Parwana Khan and Mirza Abdul Rahman.

WHEN Colonel Lindsay, R.E., goes home in the spring, Mr. J. Craik, traffic manager, will succeed him as agent of the Southern Mahratta Railway Company.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

UJAR GAM [THE DESERTED VILLAGE].*

A very successful translation of the "Deserted Village" into Hindi has just made its appearance in India, and it is pleasant to welcome a work of such rare excellence. Sri Dhara Pâthaka brought himself into notice a short time ago by a clever translation of "The Hermit;" but the work before us has reached even a higher standard of merit. It is remarkable for the faithfulness with which every idea in Goldsmith's verses is reproduced, and for the conciseness with which this is done. Notwithstanding the great differences between the two idioms, and the supplementary words and phrases always necessary in rendering foreign ideas intelligible, the translator exceeds by very few lines the length of the original, and throughout the greater part of his poem succeeds in effecting a line for line translation. In doing this not only is every idea reproduced, but exactly and accurately rendered, even down to verbal emphasis. So far for the work as a translation; but similar unstinted praise can be awarded to the book as a Hindi poem. It reads with perfect fluency and musical sonority in its Hindi dress; indeed, had an Indian compose an original poem on English village life he could not have put together a more finished production. It is much to be hoped that other Indians will take to heart the lesson silently read them by this masterly composition. It teaches them to abandon mere word-jingling and exaggeration, and to give their powers to the production of a literature which shall reflect the simple beauties of nature, which shall call forth pure and noble thoughts, which shall raise the mental, moral, and material condition of their country, and which shall endure as a memorial of patriotic labour. The Hindi language is a flexible and expressive form of speech, capable of the finest polish and the highest development. It has been unfairly depressed by official neglect; but its claims to recognition cannot long be ignored if its speakers persevere in raising it to eminence by the publication of such carefully executed works as that upon which we are commenting.

A new candidate for public favour comes forward this month in the shape of The Parents' Review (W. H. Allen and Co.), edited by Charlotte M. Mason. It is intended as a monthly magazine of Home training and Culture, and several well-known writers have come forward to assist the editor in carrying out the programme which she has in view. Mrs. Lancelot Lipscomb, F. H. Anson, F. Steintal and Anna Mary Harrison contribute varied and interesting papers to the first number. Dr. Taylor, editor of Science Gossip, lends his pen also, and the Rev. H. R. Haweis chats pleasantly about "Music and Children." The Parents' Review will supply an undoubted want, and should ensure a wide circulation if the editor can keep to the excellent idea which she explains in her preface as follows:—

"Those of us who have come face to face with the problem of education have had some such experience as this. The children are bright, loving, docile, as 'tis their nature to'; take kindly to their sums, their story-books, their play, their lessons, to whatever in the way of food or exercise is provided for their manifold nature. They get on, of course, surprisingly, if they be quick children of a good stock; and the educator cannot enough plume himself upon his easy success, until, one day, it dawns upon him that all this delightful progress is no more than natural growth; the child is growing, every part of him, and under favouring conditions, upon the food of various sorts that you provide him with, in the atmosphere that you surround him with. If no more is wanted of him than to grow, you may sit at your ease. But if you are not content that he should grow as he is, if you see that this must be strengthened and that reduced, it is a source of deep distress to parent or teacher to perceive that, in all that makes for character—the one sterling achievement of human life—the children are where they were; the bright, impulsive child is as hopelessly idle; the slow child is no quicker; the reticent child no franker; the sullen, no more amiable; the volatile, no steadier. Clearly, there is more to be done; but what more, and how much more—are questions, to answer which, by 'here a little, and there a little,' the Parents' Review stands committed."

The "Mining Manual," by Walter R. Skinner, which makes its third appearance, is a work of reference of the greatest utility to all interested in mining ventures, whether as investors or speculators. When it is reflected that in 1889 there were no less than 1,527 mining companies on the register in London, with a nominal capital of £157,626,385, some idea may be formed of the labour required to produce such a manual as this. But Mr. Skinner has done his work admirably, sparing no pains to give his readers the latest and most accurate information possible.

We have a number of books, pamphlets, &c. on our table which want of space prevents us from reviewing this week, but we shall give these full attention in a literary supplement next issue.

THE season reports for the Bombay Presidency for the past week are summarised in the Government Gazette in the following general remarks:—Rain needed in parts of Karachi and Hyderabad. Late crops in two talukas of Karachi, and three of Shikarpur, and mustard in one taluka of the Upper Sind Frontier damaged by locusts. Jowari in Ahmednagar and parts of Sholapur, and late crops generally in two talukas of Nasik and three of Poona, withering for want of rain. Jowari in one taluka of Ahmednagar damaged by foggy weather, and exotic cotton in five talukas of Dharwar blighted. Crops otherwise good, except early sown cotton in four talukas of Broach, and late crops generally in parts of Khandesh and Satara. Harvesting of early crops and sowing of late crops continue in a few districts. Probable output of opium in Baroda 12 annas. Fodder, scarce in one taluka of Khandesh, and two of Nasik and Dharwar. Agricultural stock generally good.

THE EURASIAN PROBLEM.

THE Eurasian difficulty has been a growing one in India, but the Supreme and Local Governments have allowed it to grow without attempting any solution of it. No

Englishman—official or non-official—who has lived for any time in India can shut his eyes to the fact that there is throughout the country, but chiefly in the cities, a large and increasing community claiming kindred with Englishmen, and professing the same religion, but the members of which community, men, women, and children, are steadily year by year sinking lower in the social scale. These unfortunate people have been living from hand to mouth—the men trusting chiefly to getting employment as clerks in Government or mercantile offices, and the women struggling as best they can against the pinching pressure of continual poverty. A pride which it is easy to characterise as foolish, but which comes from the strain of English blood in their veins, has kept the class as a whole from attempting any manual labour, and want of capital has prevented them from entering upon any trade on their own account. They have simply contented themselves with such wretched earnings as can be gained by clerkships. Poverty, however, has not checked their increase; they have continued to grow and multiply, and to spread poverty about them until their case has become not one of scandal only—that it has long been—but one of danger to a Christian English Government. Successive Viceroys and Legislative Councils have seen and watched the evil growing, and have done—nothing. That the problem of how to deal with this mixed race called Eurasian is a most difficult one may be readily admitted; but it must also be allowed that for Government to fold its hands and make no attempt to meet the difficulty is not a policy either wise or expedient. It may, of course, be argued that, according to the strict rules of the so-called science of political economy, Government has no right to interfere in the matter, and that, like other social problems which apparently cannot be solved, this one should be left alone. But the rules or theories of political economy are not always applicable to Indian problems. Had the question been fairly grappled with in the early years of our occupation of the country—something might have been done to render the lot of the present unfortunate class less gloomy and despairing than it is. We are writing, be it remembered, of the poorest and the most helpless of the Eurasians who dwell chiefly in the Presidency cities. The Pioneer to hand to-day touches upon this ever-recurring question, but in a manner more flippant than philosophical. It says that “in dealing with the difficult Eurasian problem in India there is always the danger of offending the susceptibilities of a numerous class whose position makes them peculiarly sensitive when advice is tendered or criticism indulged in by their avowed friends. In all questions which affect their social status, their capacity for work, their ‘right’ to enlist in the regular army, or to be provided with other means of livelihood by the Government, one must steer clear of any reference to their idiosyncrasies or the most well-intentioned suggestions will be angrily rejected. It is only men like the Rev. S. B. Taylor who really seem to be able to gain a patient hearing, and to excite some enthusiasm among a race whose prospects are admittedly uninspiring. He has at least prevented most of the existing Eurasian Associations in Upper India from throwing in their lot with the Congress, and agitating for reforms as impracticable as they are wild.” Well, this is something which should be put to the credit of a community which, notwithstanding the buffetings of evil fortune and official neglect, has ever been staunch and loyal to the British raj. It is to be hoped that some strong Englishman will yet be found in India who will help the Government how to deal with this Eurasian problem and show the Eurasians how they best can help themselves. In Madras a Reform League of Eurasians has been found, but according to the authority from which we have quoted, the leader of the movement is one calling himself "E. J. S. White Khan," who lays down the following rules as to what the Eurasian of the future is to be :—

"He will be named after his Indian as well as European progenitors; he will dress in clothes made in a semi-European fashion of light Indian materials; he will eat less flesh than the European does and less flour than the Indian. He will choose the cold water and clear head of the Indian rather than the brandy and high living of the European. He will eat rice and jauri, but he will not eat it with his fingers, sitting on the ground. He will live in a Native house, but he will retain the European's faith in whitewash and ventilators. He will seek to acquire the thrift and simple habits of the Indian bunniah, but he will seek, too, to acquire the energy and enterprise of Europeans."

It is all very well for our Allahabad contemporary, which is credited with being the semi-official organ of the Government of India, to laugh at this as a "fanfaronade of nonsense." It has its comical side, no doubt, to the thoughtless scribbler of "turn-overs" and ephemeral "pars"; but to the serious thinker on Indian subjects this Eurasian question is one of the gravest of the many complex ones which have arisen under British rule—and the longer that its solution is delayed the greater will be the scandal to that rule, and the deeper the degradation of a race which, with all their shortcomings, have sterling claims upon the justice as well as the sympathy of Englishmen.

THE WARINESS OF ELEPHANTS.

Mr. Sanderson, Superintendent of Kheddahs, on special duty in Mysore, writes to the Madras Mail:—"It may interest some of your readers who have heard that wild elephants will not cross bridges and similar structures—a common belief, of the contrary of which I have seen many instances—to hear of a recent case in point. Two small temporary bridges, one of 22, one of 17 feet, and both 9 feet wide, were constructed in November on a jungle road leading to the Kheddah in Mysore, for the occasion of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor's visit. They were made of young trees about eight inches in diameter, lashed with creepers, laid longitudinally with the road, with a layer of cross-pieces as thick as one's arm, and covered with grass and earth. A horse or small bullock cart was their intended working load, and even with these they bent visibly, as they had no central supports. They spanned a rushing, shallow stream, and were only three feet above its surface. On Christmas Day I had occasion to go to the Kheddah, then deserted and silent, and I found that an exceptionally large male elephant, which, by measurement of his fore foot print (the diameter multiplied by 6 2-7) must be 9' 3" or 4" high at shoulder, and which weighed probably 3½ tons, had traversed the road for three miles, and had crossed both the bridges without hesitation, though he might easily have used the sloped paths alongside, made specially for our tame elephants. Fears regarding such structures are generally more common among tame than among wild elephants, as the former may have been forced at times against their inclination into insecure structures or paths. Still, among a number of tame elephants there are generally one or two that will give a lead across almost any bad place when called on. In the present case, as there were only bamboo hand-rails to the bridges, the elephant could see the water near, and he felt, no doubt, that he could not be let down very far. I remember a case in which attempts had been made for an hour or two regularly every morning during several days to get an elephant into a railway truck, but without avail. I happened upon the scene, and guessed at once that the cause of the elephant's reluctance was the fact of the floor of the waggon being a few inches below the level of the platform, off which he was required to step. The animal doubtless argued that if he trusted himself to the shaking structure and it gave way he could not recover himself. I caused the waggon to be run out into the open yard, and had a few sleepers piled alongside it as a step. The elephant mounted this quaking heap, and climbed into the waggon without hesitation. He doubtless felt that if anything gave way he could only come down to this starting level. This occurrence need not be regarded by the believers in the delusion that the elephant is a very intelligent animal as an instance in point, for the animal only acted in accordance with the necessary instinct of a creature whose weight makes it incumbent on him to be heedful of his step."

THE SOCIAL CONFERENCE.

(Gujerati.)

The present constitution of the Social Conference is anomalous, and if its resolutions are to be taken as any genuine indications of the march of social opinion, it must be placed on a better footing. Let the leaders of advanced social thought, as well as the advocates of orthodoxy, have full opportunity of meeting each other, and expressing their views publicly. As things stand at present, the Conference may consist even of ignorant schoolboys, who may vote away any proposition in any way they like. The gathering that had assembled at the Social Conference, though memorable on account of the presence of ladies for the first time on such an occasion, was certainly inferior to that which took part in the deliberations of the National Congress. From the dubious manner in which the meeting expressed their acceptance of the propositions placed before them, it is difficult to form a correct estimate of the sentiment prevailing among those present regarding the matters taken up by the Conference, and we have no means to determine what decided opinion would have been delivered by the delegates if they had cared to attend its deliberations. The English papers have announced that the resolutions were carried unanimously, while many people entertain the belief, however wrongly, that the promoters of the Conference did not wish to ascertain the feeling of the community, but simply impose certain reforms upon the Hindoo public by the suppression of genuine expression of popular views and feelings, and thus producing an impression that the community was prepared to accept legislative interference. We are sorry such a view of the proceedings of the Conference should have got abroad, as it will ultimately hinder rather than forward social reform.

THE LATE SIR HENRY YULE, C.B.

A correspondent writes to the Athenæum:—

"In March last I received from Sir Henry Yule a copy of the following lines, addressed to him in 1884 by Mr. Colborne Baber, now our Consul at Chefoo, and I should like to make them more generally known to the readers of Sir Henry's noble edition of the 'Travels of Ser Marco Polo,' by their publication in the Athenæum:—

Until you raised dead Monarchs from the mould
And built again the domes of Xanadu,
I lay in evil ease, and never knew
The glamour of that ancient story told

By good Ser Marco in his prison-hold.
But now I sit upon a Throne, and view
The Orient at my feet, and take of you
And Marco tribute from the realms of old.

If I am joyous, deem me not o'erbold;
If I am grateful, deem me not untrue;
For you have given me beauties to behold,
Delight to win, and fancies to pursue,
Fairer than all the jewelry and gold
Of Kublai on his Throne in Cambalu.

20 July, 1884.

E. C. B.

A GENTLEMAN residing in Poona has recently, says a writer in a contemporary, received a letter which was posted at a station some twenty miles away exactly two years and four months ago. The only explanation vouchsafed by the postal authorities was that written across the face of the envelope—"Posted by the wrong train."

THERE has been a serious gun accident at Delhi. Lieut. Dennys, Assistant Superintendent of Police, was out shooting near Sunipat in company with his wife, and in changing his gun from one shoulder to the other it was accidentally discharged in some unaccountable manner, the charge entering Mrs. Dennys' shoulder near the neck. Mr. Wallace, District Engineer, Delhi-Kalka Railway, on being telegraphed to, at once sent out a special train—the first passenger train which has been run on the new line—and Mrs. Dennys was brought in in an exhausted state. The wound is said to be a serious one, though every hope is entertained of the lady's recovery.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

MUCH difficulty and inconvenience having been caused by the promotion of the Superintending Engineers in the Military Works Department being regulated by the Public Works Department promotion, it has been resolved to have separate lists for each Department. There are at present one Chief Engineer and six Superintending Engineers for military works.

A QUESTION has been raised as to whether commissioned officers, who are required to wear swords as part of their uniform on all official occasions, must appear in a court of justice without their swords. The question culminated locally, in the Amritsar District, in an assault upon a naib-tahsildar by a Native officer and some sowars, and has been sent up to the Judges of the Chief Court, Punjab, for opinion.

THE Bombay Government's decision admitting Parsees into Volunteer corps is based on a decision of 1886, and does not appear to allow of the formation of Parsee companies under Parsee or English officers, but only their admission into existing companies if the members of them are willing to have them. The order says the admission into the Poona Volunteer Rifle Corps of selected Parsees is sanctioned on the condition that they sufficiently understand the English language, adopt the uniform of the corps, and are willing and able to share in its duties.

THERE is a rumour current that the offices of the Examiners of Medical Accounts, Bengal, Madras and Bombay, will, with effect from April 1st next, be amalgamated and placed under one Examiner. The office, it is expected, will be located at Calcutta, and be controlled by the Controller, Eastern Circle, Bengal. This is a step leading to economy which might well be followed in making one Ordnance Office and one Clothing Office for all India instead of three as now. One officer and one superintendent would suffice for the amalgamated office instead of three of each, and it might be located at Calcutta, where there will be plenty of accommodation available soon.

As a further step towards the comfort of the British soldier in India, the Government of India have been good enough to authorise the grant of advances to corps on first arrival in India for the establishment of regimental institutes, such advances, to the extent of Rs. 16,000 annually, being made under the orders and arrangements of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, but no single battery to receive more than the following sums:—

	Rs.	Repayable quarterly.
Regiment of cavalry or battalion of infantry ... ..	3,000	400
Battery of mountain or garrison artillery ... ..	500	75
Battery of horse or field artillery	800	100

THE Lieutenant-Governor inspected the Punjab States Cavalry on Ichra maidan, Lahore, on Jan. 22nd. After having been received with a general salute His Honour and Sir Hugh Gough rode down the line and closely inspected the men, horses and equipment of the various squadrons. The troops then marched past at a walk and trot, finally advancing in line and halting before the reviewing officers. At the conclusion of the parade the Lieutenant-Governor addressed a few kindly words to the commanding officers, and expressed his pleasure at what he had seen. Sir Hugh Gough also addressed the officers, and remarked that he was astonished at the steady drill and smart appearance of the troops after so short a period of preparation.

ON Saturday the troops in garrison at Allahabad and the Volunteers had a field-day on a rather extensive scale in the vicinity of Begam Serai. A strong body of troops, including a portion of the artillery, the detachment of the Lincolnshire Regiment, the 13th B.I., with some men of the 2nd Bengal Cavalry as scouts, formed the attacking party, whilst the defenders included the Allahabad Light Horse and Rifle Volunteers, a party of artillery with two guns and some 2nd Bengal Cavalry men. The whole of the proceedings were under the immediate eye of General Sir John Hudson, who at the close of the mimic battle expressed his great satisfaction with the manner in which the Volunteers had performed the duties entrusted to them. Breakfast was provided for the regular troops on the ground, the Rifles were entertained by their officers, and Captain Deans and the officers of the Light Horse made very sumptuous provision for their troopers.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us a characteristic anecdote of the late Lord Napier of Magdala. It was towards the end of 1881 when "peace with dishonour" had been made with the Boers, and the suddenly-awakened conscience of Mr. Gladstone had consented to a treaty dictated by the rebel leaders within the boundary of Natal. Lord Napier in the course of conversation on the P. and O. steamer Australia, on which he was making his way to Gibraltar, expressed his indignation at the turn events had taken in South Africa, and then suddenly said in most measured and impressive tones:—"I would rather be poor Colley, dead, with three defeats over my head, than the man who signed that disgraceful treaty." His opinion, we imagine, faithfully represented the feeling of the British Army at the time, and of a large part of the British nation.

ARRIVAL OF H.M. TROOPSHIP EUPHRATES.

Her Majesty's troopship Euphrates, Commander J. R. E. Pattison, arrived in Bombay harbour on January 30th, from Portsmouth, which port she left on January 1st, calling at Malta on the 10th inst., Port Said on the 14th, and Suez on January 16th. She brought the 2nd Battalion Yorkshire Regiment and details, consisting of 66 officers, 18 ladies, 14 officers' children, 1,123 European rank and file, with 60 women and 56 children. On January 8th one of the sailors fell overboard and was drowned while he was cleaning the ship's side. During the voyage two soldiers died natural deaths. There was one birth on board, but the child died. The Euphrates passed the troopships Crocodile on the 19th and Malabar on January 12th respectively. PLANS for the extension of the Simla water supply are under consideration. It is estimated that for an expenditure of five lakhs a supply of six gallons daily per head for a population of 30,000 might be secured. Another five lakhs would secure eight gallons per head.

THE Lahore paper writes:—"We understand that all the steamship companies in London have refused to grant any reduction to the East India Passage Association. The executive of the latter are, we believe, now devoting all their energies to start running on their own account, the first steamer starting, it is hoped, on the 17th April."

COLONEL FRANCIS JOHN WISE, Inspector-General of Police, Bombay, and of The Grange, Cublington, Leamington, who died on the 7th inst. at the Hospital, Port Said, was born in July, 1838. He entered the Service in June, 1857, became lieutenant in May, 1860, captain in June, 1869, major in June, 1877, lieutenant-colonel in June, 1883, and colonel in June, 1887. Colonel Wise served in the Deccan against the rebel Bheels in 1857, and was present at the engagement of Mahadeoghur. He served in the Khandeish and Nimar against the attempted invasion of the Deccan by the rebel army under Tantia Topes in 1858-59, receiving the medal awarded.

Miscellaneous.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has accorded to Mrs. Crawford and her daughter a subsistence allowance, or pension, amounting for the former to £300 a-year, and for the latter £70. Public opinion, however divided in regard to the merits of Mr. Arthur Crawford, will approve of the consideration shown for the ladies of the family.

It has been decided that Lady Harris and her infant son will, upon their arrival in Bombay, proceed immediately to Mahabeshwur, so as to avoid any risk to health from remaining in Bombay in March, which is often so trying. This course has been imposed by medical advice, and will be a disappointment to Lord and Lady Reay, who had invited Lady Harris to stay at Malabar Point.

It is now more than a year since Lord Dufferin quitted these shores, observes Indian Engineering, and nearly a year since he was approached on the subject of a memorial statue to be erected in Calcutta. A site was also selected at the south end of the Red Road. But it is certainly disappointing to Lord Dufferin's many admirers to find nothing yet undertaken with a view to carrying out this object. We should prefer to see a double statue of Lord and Lady Dufferin given special prominence to by placing them under a canopy.

THE Bombay Government has ruled that henceforth every officer appointed to be a Commissioner or Secretary to Government shall hold the appointment for five years only, and that an Under-Secretary to Government shall hold his appointment for three years only.

THE Simla allowances are still under consideration, and though no definite decision has been arrived at, a reduction ranging from twelve to sixteen thousand rupees has been made in each department in the Budget allotment for the ensuing year.

THE Amir is still as sphinx-like as ever in regard to his future movements, but the old rumour that he will return to Kabul in the spring by way of Herat and Kandahar has been revived. This may be only the gossip of the camp at Mazar-i-Sharif; but some plausibility is given to it by the fact that Abdur Rahman has lately given more administrative power to his son Habibulla, who is ruling the capital in his absence, and acquitting himself well in his work. This seems to point to further absence on the part of his Highness from the headquarters of his kingdom.

THE REV. EDWARD LAWSON BOWMAN, B.A., R.N.—The death is announced of the Rev. E. L. Bowman, B.A., vicar of Alston-with-Garrighill, Cumberland, and late Chaplain, R.N. Mr. Bowman entered the service in 1854, and served in the Black Sea, and with the Naval Brigade at Lucknow and elsewhere during the Indian mutiny. He retired in 1875, and died on the 24th ult., at the age of sixty-five.

THE Pioneer says:—The sudden rise in exchange during the last few weeks is, of course, producing its usual effect in disorganising trade, but in an opposite direction to that in which the successive stages of its all but continuous fall were felt. This time it is the Indian exporter who is hit. Take the case of a merchant who contracts to buy Rs. 14,000 worth of country produce and to deliver it in England to the manufacturer for £1,000 when the sovereign is worth, let us say, Rs. 15. With a stable exchange he will be able to pay the producer and make a thousand rupees on the transaction. But if by the time his money comes to be remitted back again silver has risen, so that Rs. 14 are given for a sovereign, it is obvious that his profit is obliterated, or if the rise is more than this that it becomes a loss. Hitherto the important fluctuations of exchange have all been in a downward direction; and it is from Manchester therefore that the complaints have come. The present rise will probably teach our own exporters that there is another side to the question, and that those who have been crying out against the monstrosity of having two antagonistic currency systems in different parts of the Empire have reason on their side. In the long run it is certain that no solid good can come to either side by making the course of trade between the two countries a speculation, and allowing money to govern production, instead of following in its train.

INDIAN COTTON STATISTICS.—Mr. Beaufort, the new chairman of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, has just published a work of considerable interest, on which he has been engaged for several years past, on the statistics of the cotton trade, mills, and manufactures of India. The official cotton map of India is also reproduced on a small scale. The volume opens with tables showing the areas and populations of the various political and administrative divisions of India, and the area under cotton cultivation in each. Then follow tables showing the progress of this staple since 1874, the production of the manufactured article, the exports, the consumption in mills, the quotations, freights, movements by railway, list of mills, cotton presses—in all, 107 different statistical tables. The first mill company was formed in India in 1851, but did not begin work till 1854; in 1889 there were in that country 124 mills, with 2,763,000 spindles, 21,600 looms, 91,600 hands, and consuming 888,700 bales of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  cwt. each. The total paid-up capital amounted to more than eight crores of rupees in June, 1888. This extraordinary activity has naturally led to a corresponding increase in the quantity of raw material produced and the area under cultivation. Mr. Beaufort's work is compiled from the point of view of the practical manufacturer and exporter, and should prove of great interest to practical men in this country. It helps to a comprehension of the special advantages and drawbacks of the Indian manufacturer vis à vis his European rivals, especially in such matters as labour, freights, exchange, and markets.

THE Civil and Military Gazette learns that the sowar, who was bitten at the same time as Lieutenant Stewart the other day, has been sent to Paris to undergo the Pasteur treatment for rabies.

A SUGGESTION.—A Native writes to the Madras Hindu:—"Men are aware of the truth of the saying, 'Unity is strength.' Instead of always discussing political questions they had better sow the seed for the steady and sure growth of unity. But what is the seed? and where to sow it? Fellow-feeling is the seed, and each man's own family circle is the soil. If here the seed sprouts up fresh and lively, if squabbles and party-feelings and other deadly locusts do not molest the growth of the plant, then, first, each man's home gains in strength—has enough food to live on. And society is but a congeries of these homes, so that it gains in strength too. After your whole social condition has got strong and secure, and social unity has taken firm root, you must watch what the State does for you, how it deals with you, what rights you are allowed, what privileges you enjoy—in short, then take to politics: that is just the time."

THE house known as "Constantia" at Simla, has been leased by Government for the office of the Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT PETROLEUM.—Some interesting figures have been published regarding the petroleum industry. The present annual production is about 2,000,000,000 gallons, of which about one half is produced in the United States. The Caspian region of Baku produces about 420,000,000 gallons, and many of the wells have had to be closed because the oil could not be taken away. Galicia produces about 36,000,000, Burma about 7,000,000, and Canada about 25,000,000 gallons. The resources of Burma and Canada are only just beginning to be developed, and it is impossible to tell what magnitude the trade will amount to when improved means of transport have been provided. The basin of the Mackenzie River is believed to be the most extensive oil region in the world, but it is about 400 miles north of the Canadian Pacific Railway. There is no doubt that when the difficulties of transport have been surmounted, and cheaper oil is available, it is destined to be a formidable rival of coal for many purposes, especially the firing of boilers, and for various metallurgical processes, for which its freedom from sulphur, &c., renders it particularly suitable.—Iron.

SIR BENJAMIN SIMPSON has returned from his tour in Burma.

DR. NOETLING, of the Geological Survey, has gone again to Burma on special duty.

GRANTS OF LAND IN UPPER BURMA.—The conditions under which grants of land in Upper Burma may be made to time-expired officers and men of the military police have been published. The area to be granted shall not ordinarily exceed 200 acres for a commissioned and 100 for a non-commissioned officer, and 50 for a private. But if an applicant can show that he has the means of cultivating an area in excess of the limit, and that he can provide cultivators from India in sufficient numbers, a larger area may be granted with the consent of the Chief Commissioner. Four annas per acre must be deposited to cover expenses of demarcation and survey, and if the cost be less the balance will be returned to the applicant. The land will be from from taxation for periods varying between five and ten years, according to its present condition. After thirty years two-thirds of the rates ordinarily assessed on lands of similar quality in the neighbourhood will be charged for sixty years, after which it will come under the ordinary assessment. Ten per cent. of the area must be brought under cultivation during the first five years, and 5 per cent. during each succeeding period of five years up to thirty years, when the grant shall become absolute. The Government reserves the rights to all minerals and mines; teak trees are not to be cut or injured without special licence; but all other timber is granted with the land. Certain advances may be made on loan by the local authorities for the purpose of improving the land.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man; show him! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or pruridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 7th Feb; from Allahabad and Madras to the 5th Feb.; and from Calcutta to the 5th Feb.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council, on Jan. 31st, Mr. Scoble introduced the Bill to amend the Factory Acts. The chief alterations it proposes in the existing law are the raising of the minimum age at which children may be employed from seven to nine, and the limitation of the hours of employment of women to eleven a day. The provision that women as well as children shall have proper intervals of rest during each day and not less than four holidays a month is no innovation, as nearly all women and children have more than this already. The compulsory observance of Sunday as a holiday has not been adopted. The Bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals was referred to a Select Committee with orders to report in six weeks.

THE Select Committee on the Indian Railway Bill is now holding three meetings weekly with intent to produce its report before Council at as early a date as possible.

THE reports of the Select Committees on the Railways and Forests Bills were to be presented at the meeting of Council on Feb. 14th.

THE leprosy question is beginning to be vigorously taken up by private liberality in Bombay. Sir Dinshaw Petit, with his untiring generosity, has come forward with an offer to place a lakh of rupees in the hands of Government for the foundation of a leper home in Bombay; while the Nawab of Junagadh has decided to commemorate the approaching visit of Prince Albert Victor by the establishment of a leper asylum for the whole Province of Kathiawar.

IN the course of the past week Prince Albert Victor has visited Rawalpindi, Muridki, Peshawar, and the Khyber Pass. At the first two places his Royal Highness witnessed the marches past of the troops collected at the respective Camps of Exercise, and en route to the Khyber he distributed the Order of Merit to the members of the Khyber Rifles who had distinguished themselves in the Black Mountain Expedition.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN has completed his work in the Gomal Pass, and has returned direct to Quetta.

IN case no prospect appears of a permanent good understanding being arrived at between the Kols and their zemindars, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal will visit Ranchi towards the close of the present month, and make a tour throughout Chota Nagpur.

CAPTAIN HEXT, Director of the Indian Marine, has returned from Burma, having completed his tour on the Irrawaddy and Chindwin with Colonel Sanford.

COLONEL T. A. COOKE, District Staff Officer, Umballa, has been gazetted Assistant Adjutant General, Army Headquarters, vice Colonel Bushman.

COLONEL T. DEANE has been confirmed as Director of the Army Remount Department from November 28th. Colonel Toker and Majors Broadbent and Grant are consequently confirmed in the officiating appointments in the Military Department.

MESSRS. STODDEN AND BEACHCROFT will act for Messrs. Roe and Frizelle on the Punjab Chief Court Bench when the latter take leave.

APPOZAI, the new headquarters of the Zhob Agency, will be linked by telegraph with the Quetta district.

THE rails are expected to reach New Chaman, on the further side of the Khwaja Amran range, on March 10th, a temporary line being laid through the Khojak tunnel.

A PARTY of Marris are reported to have raided in the neighbourhood of the Gambaz post, north of the Harnai route, but did no serious damage.

THE final ratification of the treaty regarding the Sikkim-Tibet dispute will be directly between the British and Chinese Governments, though the terms will be settled in India with the Amban as representing the Peking authorities.

THE Anglo-Siamese Mission arrived at the Salween on the 2nd ult. and found a number of garrisoned Siamese posts established. A protest was offered to our Commission crossing the river; but it was disregarded, and the crossing effected without any collision.

THE civil authorities in Burma will probably be asked to undertake the forwarding of supplies to the Chin Field Force, as the Military Transport has proved unequal to the task.

LIENPUNGA, the Lushai Chief who raided the Chengri Valley last year, has given up all the surviving captives who fell into his hands—some fifty-eight in number. He himself has not yet surrendered, and our troops were to have advanced on his village last Saturday.

THE Mohant of Tripati, in Madras, a high Hindu ecclesiastic, has been found guilty of fraud in connection with the funds of the temple of which he was the trustee, and has been sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment. The Native assessors found the Mohant not guilty, but the Judge disagreed with them.

THE public offices will probably close at Calcutta on March 29th.

THE Civil Service Cup this year will only have five starters, the poorest field by far that has contested the race since its institution. Blitz and Marquise head the betting at 2 to 1 each, with Magistrate next and Jessie Frost and Bustle behind.

MR. VERNON's team of cricketers played the Bombay Gymkhana and the Parsees last week. The visitors beat the former by an innings and seventy-four runs, but were beaten by the Parsees by four wickets. This is the first defeat Mr. Vernon's team has suffered during their tour in India.

A LECTURESHIP in physiology, pathology, and therapeutics has been established at the Grant Medical College to commemorate Lord Reay's connection with Bombay.

THE financial statement of the Madras Government exhibits a deficit of eleven and a-half lakhs.

THE Government of India has addressed the local Governments with a view of recovering a uniform system of weights and measures in India.

THE inspecting officer of the Mysore war service troops will be chosen from the Madras Staff Corps.

THE relief of the Sikkim Field Force will not be carried out till the end of March.

THE Pearl Fisheries at Tuticorin are resulting in large takes of pearls.

THE 3rd Squadron 3rd Madras Cavalry have been prohibited from wearing swords at field manoeuvres until further orders, owing to their entering during a sham fight the village at Hosur, and attacking with drawn swords, a party of unmounted Hussars already in possession.

DURING the next financial year the rearmament of the Field Artillery in India with the new breech-loading gun will be completed.

THE number of the Madras Regiments which are to be localised in Burma will be ten. They will be solely officered from the Madras Staff Corps, but recruited from Upper India.

SIR JOHN EDGAR, Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, has taken six months' leave from May 1st. Mr. Macaulay, on return from furlough, will probably act for him.

No date has been fixed for the termination of the boundary work on which Mr. Noy Elias is engaged, but the party will probably return to Fort Stedman on April 1st.

NOTES.

THE Sunday telegrams from the correspondents of the Times at Calcutta and Rangoon are not very lively reading, and the news brought by the Overland Mail partakes much of the same dull character. The correspondent of the Daily News, wiring also last night from Calcutta, gives the gratifying intelligence that the manœuvres near Calcutta, with the object of testing the defence arrangements, have been concluded, and that they have been held to prove that "the city is safe against attack from the sea." Old Anglo-Indians will be perhaps surprised that there should have been any necessity for these experiments so long as the James and Mary sand bank remained in the Hooghly. In case of an enemy's vessel attempting that river, a slight misplacement of the buoys would, it was thought, amply suffice to bring the foe to grief. But it may be that, like Time and Anglo-Indians themselves, James and Mary may have changed, and for the worse, too, so far as safeguarding the City of Palaces.

THE same correspondent sends also the following information:—"Sir Madhav Rao writes to the Madras Mail approving Lord Cross's Councils Bill. He says that the concessions it embodies are large and important, and hopes that Congress will welcome them with due and becoming gratitude. He does not attach much weight to the withholding of popular election, because careful observation and experience have convinced him that popular election at present would ensure the failure of the extended councils, whereas a system of nomination will probably secure their success." Gratitude from the Congress will be a real Indian "surprise."

How well the elective system has worked in India in connection with Municipal institutions, the present mail brings news of another Municipal failure, according to the following notification from the Bombay Government Gazette:—"His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, taking into consideration the lack of interest displayed by the inhabitants of the town of Kasandra, in the Sanand Taluka, of the Ahmedabad District, in Municipal administration, is pleased to declare, in exercise of the power conferred upon him by Section 13 of the Bombay District Municipal Act Amendment Act, 1884, that the provisions of Sections 11 and 12 of the said Act are unsuitable to the said Municipal district of Kasandra. And in further exercise of the said power the Governor-in-Council is pleased to direct that the said Municipality of Kasandra shall consist of seven Commissioners, to be appointed by the Commissioner of the Northern Division, four of whom shall be officials, and three non-officials."

THE case against the Mohunt of Tirupati, one of the highest ecclesiastical personages in India, and who was charged with criminal breach of trust, concluded on Jan 31 at Chittoor. The Sessions Judge having briefly summed up the assessors gave their opinion that the charge was not proved. The judge totally disagreed, characterising the assessors' verdict as a perverse one. He said it was of such a nature that even if it was given by a jury the judge would have no hesitation in exercising his legal powers of referring the case to a High Court. No reasonable man, who had sat in the Court through this protracted trial, could have the slightest doubt of the prisoner's guilt. The judge entirely disbelieved the story told for the defence, and convicted the prisoner of the offences charged, and sentenced him to three years' rigorous imprisonment. An Indian contemporary, commenting on this, remarks:—"If the evidence was as clear and decisive as the judge seems to have thought the fact that the two assessors found the charge not proven is a striking indication of the feeling the case has excited amongst the Hindus of Southern India."

A CORRESPONDENT with the Lushai Field Force writes:—"Experience has shown that the only way to effectively influence these tribes is to go on slowly, making our footing perfectly secure each year by building a new fort, and connecting it by a road which can be kept up all the year round. Small columns dashing about the country burning villages give a great air of activity, and may impress the uninitiated, but they do very little harm to the people against whom they go, and, unless some communication can be opened with the tribes, such expeditions have invariably to be repeated again the following year."

SIR CHARLES DILKE's views on India, the Lahore paper observes, may be divided by a sharp and natural line—into (1) those which are the result of observations of actual facts and which have no connection with political bias of any kind, and are therefore reliable and instructive as far as they go; and (2) those which are the result of listening to expressions of opinion and are guided by the political bias of a life-time, and are therefore untrustworthy and misleading. In the first category fall his remarks upon our frontier position, which justify the dedication of the work to Sir F. Roberts. In the second falls his opinion on the Congress and local government which should have been dedicated to the Liberal Working-men's Club, Chelsea.

JUDGING from a memorial recently addressed by the Collector of Malabar to the Madras Government, sanitary science cannot be flourishing in his collectorate. Mr. Winterbotham writes that the Mappillas habitually draw their drinking water from the sacred wells in their graveyards, and he states that at Angadipuram he lately saw a grave in which the feet of the corpse, newly buried, actually rested upon the wall of the well from which all the neighbouring houses draw their drinking-water. But, he adds, "it will require special legislation to stop this horrible practice." One would think that the sooner such legislation is undertaken the better; but "Native rights" must be "respected." Mr. Bradlaugh and friends who are so bent on Indian reforms should read, mark, and learn some of these little incidents of Indian ways.

THE Madras Army, says an Indian correspondent, offers the most conspicuous example of what the Staff Corps system brings an army to, and I mention Madras simply because the figures are most striking. Let us put them down once more—133 Lieutenant-Colonels, 27 Majors, 88 Captains, and 169 Subalterns. Can anything be more curious than these figures? Colonels have multiplied out of all proportion to the other ranks, and as something has to be found for them to do, they are employed as Wing Commanders among other things, and it is not a rare thing in Madras to find an officer of over thirty years' service only second-in-command of his regiment. The fault is not of course with the officers, but with the Staff Corps system, if that can be dignified with the name of system which plays fast-and-loose with the best interests of the army, which is enormously costly and wasteful, and which burdens the army with men for whom there is no suitable employment in proportion to the rank they hold and the pay they draw. The great Simla Army Commission advocated the abolition of the Staff Corps; but what is to take its place?

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 23.

Rajpootana has been the scene of Prince Albert Victor's travels during the last few days. The greater portion of his stay at Jeypore was devoted to sport, but without any great success, only one tiger being bagged. One afternoon was spent in hawking with the Maharajah's falcons. There were, of course, the usual balls and illuminations, and on the whole the Prince seems to have been greatly pleased with his visit to what is, perhaps, the most advanced and progressive Native State in India. Ajmere was the next stage; there the principal function, in addition to banquets and fireworks, was an inspection of the college for the education of young Rajpoot chiefs. From Ajmere his Royal Highness went on to the picturesque old city of Oodeypore, the seat of a dynasty which boasts itself the most ancient in India. Particulars of the reception there have not yet been received, but there can be no doubt that Oodeypore did not fall behind her sister States in testifying her loyalty. Preparations are now in active progress for a shooting trip in the Nepaul Terai, which promises to afford a welcome rest after the incessant round of ceremonies of the last three months.

At the last meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council a long debate was held on the subject of the Calcutta Port Bill. An amendment which the Hon. Mr. Moore, representing the Chamber of Commerce, brought forward for the purpose of safeguarding the rights of riparian proprietors was rejected in favour of a counter-amendment moved by Sir Henry Harrison. It remains to be seen whether the commercial community will be satisfied with the measure in the form it has now taken. As yet there has been no public utterance on the subject by them or their organs, but there is some reason to believe that such will not long be wanting, and that the millowners and other persons whose property may be affected by future extensions of the limits of the port are not wholly pleased with the action of the Government.

The Lieutenant-Governor has appointed a committee to consider the various questions which will arise in connection with the working of the traffic into and out of Calcutta after the completion of the new Kidderpore Docks. The committee consists of representatives of the Supreme and Provincial Governments, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the Calcutta Port Trust, and the East Indian and Eastern Bengal Railway, so most of the interests affected will be adequately represented. The matters to be discussed are more far-reaching and important than would appear from the mere terms of the official notification, and the labours of the committee may possibly have the effect of re-opening the whole question of the utility of the docks, and whether they will not impose upon the trade of Calcutta a burden too heavy to bear. They are a long way from the present railway termini, so the transport of goods thither and their storage till shipped will be costly. Then there is a doubt whether the dock walls, built in waterlogged soil, will stand the test of time. Finally, their possible effect upon the health of the town is yet far from settled. The subject is fraught with difficulties on every side, and it is well that it should be thoroughly sifted before any further expenditure is incurred.

The dispute between Lord Reay and the Bombay University is exciting much interest in the Western Presidency. It appears that a requisition calling a meeting of the Senate has been signed by three High Court Judges and several leading members of the University. The meeting will be held on Friday. The Hon. Mr. Latham, Dean of Faculty of Law, has given notice of his intention to move that the Governor in Council be requested to forward to the Supreme Government, for favourable consideration, the project of an Act to consolidate and amend the Acts relating to the University, which was sent to his Excellency on October 16, 1888. Mr. Justice Birdwood will second the motion. There is much speculation as to the probable reply, but it seems to be generally thought that it will not be conciliatory.

A movement to establish societies for the purpose of diffusing cheap and useful literature throughout India, which was started in Calcutta about a month ago, has spread to Madras. A large and influential meeting was held there on Wednesday, and was addressed at some length by the Rev. Mr. Johnson, an English clergyman who has come out to India to set the scheme on foot. He dwelt on the great advantages to be expected from the diffusion of useful knowledge in English and vernacular works, and urged the Government to give a grant in aid. It was resolved to found a society to carry out his plans, and a strong committee, including several leading citizens, was appointed.

The official report of the books published in Bengal during 1888 gives some curious figures. The total number was 2,693, being an increase of 438 on the previous year. Of these 1,190 were in Bengali, 311 in English, 182 in Sanscrit, 125 in Hindi, 90 in Uriya, and only 31 in Urdu; Tibetan and several aboriginal dialects contributed each a single religious publication, the work of missionaries. As regards the subjects, there were 26 works of poetry in English and 192 in vernacular; dramas, six in English and 97 in vernacular; works of fiction, five in English and 120 in vernacular; history and geography, 31 in English and 70 in vernacular; travel, seven in English and three in vernacular. Politics are credited with only one work. The official reporter says that most of the Bengali dramas are worthless, and some of them are immoral; the works of fiction are both numerous and interesting. Among the books specially mentioned are Bengali biographies of Luther and President Garfield, and a translation of Sir D. Mackenzie Wallace's "Russia."

The Director of Public Instruction appends a note to the report, in which he expresses the opinion that English education has little influenced the Bengali mind, and has chiefly stimulated the production of keys and other helps to students; philosophy, he adds, keeps in the old groove, and medicine seems trying to return to it. One looks in vain for a Bengali Newton or a Bengali Faraday.

The report of the Public Service Commission, which finished its sittings about two years ago, has been under the consideration of the Supreme Government for some time past. Orders have now been passed upon it, and it has been communicated to the provincial administrations for an expression of their opinions. The nature of the orders has not transpired, and will probably be kept secret pending the receipt of the remarks of the local authorities.

The manoeuvres for the defence of Calcutta against maritime attack are now finished, and the troops which took part in them have returned to their quarters. The manoeuvres are said to have fully borne out the old belief in the complete safety of the city against surprise, and to have demonstrated the impossibility of any hostile fleet running the gauntlet of the new forts on the Hooghly.

Two privates of the Leinster Regiment, named O'Hara and Bellew, were put on their trial last week before the Calcutta High Court charged, the former with committing, and the latter with abetting, the murder of a Native at Dumdum. After three days' hearing Bellew was acquitted; O'Hara was convicted and sentenced to death. The evidence tended to show that the murder was a particularly brutal one, the prisoner having thrust the deceased into a tank and then deliberately shot him.

Mr. Norton, a member of the Madras Bar, and one of the few Englishmen who took part in the recent Native congresses, speaking at Madras the other day, said that, of the sum of 6,400 rupees promised for Madras at the Bombay Congress, only 150 rupees had been paid. This affords an instructive comment on the enthusiastic language in which the Congress organs announced that the large subscription list was a positive proof of the success of the movement.

Much excitement and alarm have been aroused in the French settlement of Chandernagore by the receipt of an order from Paris directing the enforcement of conscription in French India and the drafting of conscripts to Saigon for training. The Bengali residents have forwarded a petition to the President praying that they may be exempted on the ground of their unwarlike character. Not long ago some gentlemen memorialised the Governor to form them into a volunteer corps.

The Maharajah of Travancore is expected to arrive in Calcutta to-morrow on a visit to the Viceroy.

The Sikkim field force is to be further reduced next month. One company of the Buffs will be kept at Gnatong and two companies of Bengal infantry at Pedong in support. It is believed this small force can easily hold Gnatong till reinforcements arrive, in the highly improbable event of the Tibetans making a hostile demonstration.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

RANGOON, FEB. 22.

Brigadier-General Symons's force on entering Haka consisted of 100 of the King's Own Scottish Borderers and 128 Goorkhas. The village of Haka contains about 250 houses. On the 17th inst., Brigadier-General Symons started with fifty Borderers and fifty Goorkhas to reconnoitre northward from Haka towards the Tashon Ywama. On the 18th he reached the village of Kyawlon, twenty-one miles west-north-west of Haka. The road was found fairly easy, and the country much less difficult than that previously traversed. Brigadier-General Symons was obliged to halt at Kyawlon owing to the illness of the political officer with him, and the scarcity of water. On the 19th Brigadier-General Symons was to attempt a reconnaissance westward. So far there has been no opposition from the Chins. Brigadier-General Symons has sent letters by a Chin messenger to Colonel Tregear. The health of the troops at Haka is stated to be improving since their arrival there.

The Tonhon column continues to be harassed by the Kachynes, who have fought with far more determination than the Chins. The camp at Lwesani was attacked on the 12th inst., and one Sepoy was severely wounded.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 23.

The last news of the Lushai force is that the frontier police under Mr. Daly occupied Lienpunga's village on the 9th. Liengaga, who surrendered some time ago, escaped shortly afterwards, and has not yet been captured. The chiefs Vantura and Dohola have been fined, and ordered to send 100 men to clear the jungle for a road.

The health of the troops of the northern column continues good.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 22.

Sir C. Arbuthnot returns to Rangoon on March 5, and sails for Madras on the 12th. General Gordon continues his tour of inspection in Upper Burma.

Sir Lepel Griffin, Lady Griffin, and party left for the ruby mines on the 18th inst.

A band of dacoits, reported to be 60 strong, led by three Phoongyees, has attacked and burned the greater part of the small town of Sandoway, on the Arracan coast. Sandoway is the headquarters of the district. The residence of the Deputy-Commissioner and a municipality court-house were burned, but the treasury was saved. The dacoits were sharply handled by the police, who had received notice of the attack. Ten dacoits were either killed or wounded, and three were taken prisoners.

Smallpox continues virulent in Rangoon.

THE U. C. S. DINNER.

(Englishman.)

It is no exaggeration to say that the Uncovenanted Service dinner recently given to Mr. H. S. King, M.P., was the most successful public demonstration of the kind that has ever been witnessed within the walls of the Calcutta Town Hall. The gathering was unique alike in object and character. We are familiar enough with valedictory dinners to retiring Anglo-Indians, official and non-official, but this is the first time in the history of India that prandial honours have been vouchsafed on a public sale to an English politician who is a personal stranger to India, as a mark of esteem and gratitude. Nor is it possible to doubt that the members of the Uncovenanted Service who came forward in such numbers to do honour to Mr. King were moved by a powerful sense of the righteousness of that cause which has united a wide variety of classes, and grades, and Services all over India in one solid body of constitutional protestants. Whatever may be thought of the merits of the claims advanced by the Uncovenanted Service, and, as we have frequently said, the question does not admit of two opinions, the Town Hall banquet will serve a good purpose if it brings in a striking manner before the public and the Government the fact, of which many may have been already aware, that the sense of grievance by which the Uncovenanted Service is animated is no transient feeling, but a deep-rooted conviction that it is being unfairly dealt with, and that the Home authorities are adding to the injustice of the position by persistently attempting to shirk an inquiry. If the demonstration does nothing else, it will prove that the Uncovenanted Service is thoroughly in earnest; but it will also show that the agitation is being kept rigorously within the legitimate bounds of appeal, and is being conducted with the most scrupulous deference for constituted authority. The tone of the speeches, and the admirable conduct of the entire demonstration, cannot fail to raise the Uncovenanted Service in public estimation.

THE HOME CHARGES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Adverting to Mr. Bradlaugh's recent remarks at Bombay, in which he states that he thinks the Home charges are far too high, it appears evident that he has not yet perused the proceedings of the Committee appointed last year to examine these charges. Of course, it is easy to say that the charges are high, and no one is likely to dispute the point; but it is not so easy to see how they can be appreciably reduced within the remaining years of the present century, or even in the first decade in the next, unless it becomes possible to introduce and extend to the utmost limit the use for Government purposes of stores manufactured in India in preference to imported stores. The examination of the Home charges by the Committee brought prominently to notice that a very large proportion of them, nearly 80 per cent., consists of fixed payments for interest and superannuation, in which no reduction can reasonably be anticipated for many years. Equally necessary, also, if we are to maintain the Empire, are the payments for recruiting and depôt charges, and transport of troops, &c. It is understood, too, that no diminution of the payment to officers on furlough can be effected at present without injustice being done. With regard to the cost of the India Office establishment itself, it does not seem possible to make any reduction so long as India is governed by a Secretary of State and Council—except, of course, to reduce the Council, which Lord Cross has already done by two members. From Sir Henry Cunningham's recent speech at Worcester on the health of the British army in India, it is apparent that numbers do not mean strength in the India Council. The repeal of the C. D. Act in India was opposed by an overwhelming majority of the Council; but the Secretary of State, nevertheless, actuated by the decision of the Cabinet, who were guided by the popular feeling in the House of Commons, ignored the opinion of his advisers at the India Office, and sent out the despatch which had probably been prepared before the Council even met. Since then the Council has been reduced by two members, which we hope is a distinct saving. Lord Cross himself says that no material reduction of the Home charges can result from the direct action of the Secretary of State, and that it is only by the careful watching of the probable consequences of measures adopted by the Government of India that any real check can be placed upon them. His lordship is also of opinion, that if the departments in India can be accustomed to use articles made in this country when of an ordinary character, and not needing special inspection during manufacture, they might be procured, even though somewhat inferior to those which would be obtained by paying a higher price in England. Thus a perceptible diminution might be made in the payments under this head at home. For instance, take an inkpot; it matters little for office use whether the pot is of superior or inferior finish so long as it holds the fluid; and the same illustration applies to numberless articles of an ordinary character used by the departments in India. In short, the resources of this country must gradually be utilised to a much greater extent than they are now, if the Home charges under the head of stores are to be sensibly reduced.

MILITARY INFORMATION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

One of the Home papers states that the Russians are well acquainted with the military affairs and establishments in this country. We do not think, however, that they know much of importance, nor more than most civilised nations know of each other's doings. It is said, for instance, that the Russians have complete knowledge of our measures for mobilisation, but we may at once set this down as an exaggerated statement. Even matters of minor detail have not yet found their way into the columns of our own newspapers—which is somewhat creditable for India. At any rate, it is evident that, if the Russians do know something useful about the Indian mobilisation scheme, they must have obtained the information through traitors in our camp; for, as far as we can ascertain, in no other way is it possible for a foreign nation to become acquainted with such matters. Of course, it would be difficult to find out how much the Russians really do know of our Indian military affairs; but, should it become patent that they do know more than other nations, it would be high time for the military authorities in India to adopt more cautious rules for the necessary promulgation of important military information to those concerned, and to take steps to ensure, as far as possible, that it goes no farther. With regard to our fortifications, especially coast and frontier defences, the Russians or any other nation may hitherto have been able to obtain fairly accurate information, but we do not think that this will be possible any longer, since the recent issue of very stringent rules by the Government of India to regulate the admission of persons to forts, defences, arsenals, etc. We some time ago called attention to the necessity for such rules on the occasion of a visit from some Chinese officers, as it was impossible otherwise to keep the growing importance of the nature and position of our defences to ourselves. However, no one, except on duty and with a pass is now admitted to these important places, and foreigners and all persons not on duty are to be referred to army head-quarters if they seek admission. The information which the Russians are now in possession of will very soon become obsolete, for these positions may still be said to be in their experimental stage, and subject to alteration after the attack and defence rehearsals which are to take place in the early part of this year. If the Russians may have very important information regarding our military affairs in India, the best thing is to take good care that they are not given the chance to add more to their store of knowledge.

THE OPIUM DEPARTMENT.

(Times of India.)

Mr. T. D. Mackenzie's report for 1889 on the Administration of the Opium Department contains some interesting particulars of the new system in operation in the Presidency with a view to checking what at one time was a very considerable contraband trade. The bulk of the opium imported into Bombay is grown and manufactured in Native States in Malwa and Rajpootana. As it passes the Government scales, it is packed in chests, each weighing 140½ lbs., or in half-chests, weighing 70½ lbs. avoirdupois. The manufacture of opium throughout the Presidency has been prohibited, and its importation restricted, to certain specified routes, and then only under official passes, which are subjected to the closest scrutiny in order to prevent fraud or misrepresentation. With all the Native Chiefs in the Presidency arrangements have been made with a view to effectually stopping the contraband traffic in this drug, and in all the Native States, except Baroda, the cultivation of the poppy has been entirely prohibited. In Baroda the manufacture of opium is a State monopoly, and all the other States have to supply their requirements through a British depôt or, under official passes, from Malwa. Concessions and remissions of various kinds are made to these States in return for the faithful carrying out of these undertakings, and it would seem that the Native Chiefs are doing their best to second the efforts of the Government. From the statistical section of Mr. Mackenzie's report we learn that the number of chests of opium weighed and passed at the scales for export to different parts of India during the revenue year 1889 was 32,935½, on which the duty levied amounted to Rs. 2,13,62,125. These figures show a considerable falling-off since the previous year, when the totals were 33,462½ and Rs. 2,49,80,300 respectively. The imports into Bombay, including the chests passed free of duty, show a decrease of 7,127½ chests, and the revenue a decrease of Rs. 45,55,652. The causes which have led to this decline have already been fully described—the increased production of opium in China itself, and the cheapness of the indigenous drug as compared with Indian opium, owing to "inequality in the incidence of taxation." During the year only some 1,246 lbs. of opium were seized as contraband—a noteworthy decrease over previous years.

THE SUBORDINATE PERSONNEL IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

It is one of those truisms that can hardly be too often repeated that the stability of our administration of India depends largely on the quality of the subordinate personnel. There is, and must always remain, a wide gulf between the head of a district and the millions whom he is supposed to govern. Race, language, caste, religion, colour and rank conspire to render the chasm impassable. It is by the underlings, the ministerial establishments, that our administration is judged. As a native proverb has it: "Salaam to the Judge, but send a dhali to the Munsiff." Authority, Macaulay tells us, is as respectable in a constable as in a monarch; but in India the humblest clerk often possesses a power for good or evil to which his chief cannot aspire. It is notorious, however, that with few exceptions, the amla, as ministerial officers are termed, are far from exhibiting that unswerving honesty which should be the mainspring of British rule. They form a class by themselves, with an hereditary knowledge of devices of all kinds of turning a dishonest penny. Their sense of duty is rudimentary; and without the constant stimulus of the master's eye they are utterly incapable of steady work. To maintain a mechanism such as theirs in working order the head of an office must be vested with ample powers of swift and irrevocable reward and punishment. The Government holds him responsible for the punctual discharge of a bewildering variety of functions; and pillories him to the scorn of his brother officers should his procedure fail in maintaining the requisite smoothness and precision. But so far is he from being vested with this necessary and wholesome authority that it may be asserted without fear of contradiction that there is not an office of any importance in this country which does not contain subordinates notoriously incompetent or dishonest, but permitted to rob the public and obstruct business solely because it is practically impossible to get rid of them. They hold their appointments in fee-simple, and behave in full consciousness of the fact. If an office chief, goaded to desperation by intolerable misconduct, should suspend or dismiss the offender, he has to run the gauntlet of a series of appeals to the Commissioner, Board, Lieutenant-Governor and Viceroy, happy if he escapes the notice of the India Office and the still more invidious attentions of the self-styled friends of India in the House of Commons. He will encounter every obstacle which unscrupulousness and chicanery can throw in the path of justice. There is an entire solidarity between the amla of the different offices through which the appeal proceedings must filter. Important papers are "lost," and dust is thrown in the eyes of appellate authority. The culprit insists on being represented by pleaders and counsel whose fees are paid from a fund to which nearly every subordinate contributes; while the respondent is left to make good his case as best he can. Then appeals are often heard ex-parte, and in most cases the decision of the inferior authority is reversed on very insufficient grounds. The consequences in such cases to the officer who has endeavoured in vain to vindicate the authority and good name of Government are disastrous. The appellant returns in triumph to plunder, muddle and procrastinate, while his superior's prestige suffers a fatal shock. And, let it be borne in mind, the same officer who cannot dismiss a chuprassi for the most flagrant misconduct without encountering a gamut of appeals to half-a-dozen superior authorities in succession, can in his judicial capacity award final sentences of imprisonment and fine.

Instances might easily be multiplied of sinister results flowing from this strange anomaly; now it is a head clerk in a position of enormous responsibility dismissed by a Local Government for habitually selling appointments, reinstated by the supreme power, and transferred to another post. Anon, a peshkar charged with the duty of putting up vernacular papers before his master is discharged by the latter for proved fraud and reinstated by the Commissioner. Again, a gate-keeper on the railway, dismissed for carelessness which might have wrecked a mail-train, appeals to the Lieutenant-Governor, and causes infinite trouble before his sentence is confirmed. In one district, extensive frauds come to light in connection with the acquisition of land for public purposes; in another, malversations equally serious in cess-collection; in a third, embezzlements of public money supposed to be expended on roads exceed a lakh of rupees; in a fourth, great sums are levied from the public by means of unauthorised orders to pay fees, which are divided rateably among the gang of clerks who put this mechanism in motion. Everywhere the quality of administration is deteriorating, and Government is being brought into contempt. But the hypertrophied Secretariat system, which is preying upon the vitality and energies of the whole of the administration, favours the abuse, and we suppose it must be left until it becomes tolerable enough to work its own cure.

BENGAL.

(Feb. 5.)

At the annual meeting of the Lady Dufferin Fund on the 7th inst., Mr. Hutchins will present the report and the resolution to adopt the same. It will be seconded by Mr. Justice Amir Ali. Doctor Rash Behary Ghose, the Hon. K. Nulkar, and Mr. A. Bose will address the meeting.

MR. SPENCER made a most successful ascent at Calcutta on Saturday. He went up about six thousand five hundred feet, and then dropped. The descent was completely successful. He landed within four hundred yards of where he went up. He afterwards addressed the people, and said that when he was five thousand feet high, Calcutta presented one of the prettiest panoramas he had ever seen.

CALCUTTA is promised a new sensation which will completely put Mr. Spencer in the shade. Babu P. C. Laha has purchased a balloon and will shortly make an ascent from the Zoological Gardens, taking with him a couple of Native girls, who will perform divers wonderful acrobatic feats during the journey. Mr. Spencer says that it will be impossible for the Babu to carry out his proposal; and Calcutta, which must have had quite enough of this sort of thing, will no doubt not be disappointed if it is not attempted.

MADRAS.

(Feb. 5.)

THE Madras Mail hears that Government has approved of the proposal of the Agent and Manager of the Madras Railway to undertake the survey of a line of railway on the broad gauge from Nellore to Guntur, and has placed the sum of Rs. 20,000 at his disposal for the purpose. This line will be an extension of the Renigunta-Nellore metre-gauge line of the Madras Railway, and will ultimately be extended on the broad-gauge to Bezwada.

THE Brigadier-General Commanding Bangalore has directed that the men of the Third Squadron 3rd Madras Cavalry shall not wear swords at field manoeuvres until further orders, because at a Cavalry Field day on January 17, they entered the village of Hosar, attacked a dismounted party of the 21st Hussars, one Madras Cavalry man drawing his sword. The Officer Commanding the Squadron is censured for not halting his men outside the village.

THE following changes in the Governor's Body Guard will have effect from the 1st April next:—The complement of Native officers will be reduced from six to four, the senior to have the rank of subedar-major. The office of Jemadar-Adjutant and the appointment of European Sergeant-Major are to be abolished; and the number of horses to be reduced from 128 to 100. The European Sergeant-Major will, on the operation of the order, report himself for duty to the Adjutant-General, and the Native officers' services will be placed at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief for employment, regimentally or otherwise.

BOMBAY.

(Feb. 7.)

GENERAL RICHARD STRACHEY, R.E., C.I.E., a director of the East Indian Railway, and Sir Alexander M' Rendell arrived in Bombay from Europe by the last mail steamer. They left at once for Calcutta in company of Mr. Campbell, Agent of the Railway, who came to Bombay to meet them.

THE health of the city during the last week was very favourable. The total mortality was equal to 22.53. The deaths for the week are 93 less than in the same period of the previous year, and 19 less than the average. The public health on the other side of India is not favourable for this season, the last week's Calcutta mortality being over 30.

THERE was a short, but animated discussion at a meeting of the Municipal Standing Committee on Wednesday with reference to the operations of the Committee appointed to make certain arrangements in connection with the forthcoming visit of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor. Major Selby, Dr. Thomas Blaney, Colonel Merewether, and other gentlemen spoke on the subject. The representatives of the Press were called upon not to give publicity to it.

A LARGELY-ATTENDED meeting of the Parsees was held at Poona on Sunday at Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit's bungalow to express their joy and gratification at the title of Shumsool-Oolmah having been conferred on Dastoor Hoshang Jamasp by the Government of India. Mr. Dhunjeeshaw Jamsetjee presided. He opened the proceedings by giving a history of the venerable Dastoor's deeds, and said that the Parsee community was honoured at the additional honour conferred on their high priest. It was resolved to present the Dastoor with a shawl, a casket, and an address, for which purpose a strong committee was appointed. A subscription list was opened, and about Rs. 600 subscribed on the spot.

DR. WEIR prosecuted on the 30th ult. before Mr. Ryan, at Girgaum, the Rev. G. F. DeSilva, Vicar of the Church of St. Michael, Upper Mahim, and Mr. M. F. DeMello, one of the wardens of the same Church, for opening a grave in the burial ground in front of the Church and exhuming the coffin of a relative of Mr. DeMello without having obtained sanction to do so. Mr. Rivett-Carnac, barrister-at-law, appeared for the defence, and admitted that an offence had been committed, but pleaded that the defendants had acted in ignorance of the law. Mr. Ryan, after considering the circumstances, and as the Municipality did not press for a heavy penalty, imposed a fine of Rs. 25 on Mr. DeMello.

ON Friday Sir Lepel Griffin and Lady Griffin left the Victoria Terminus for Gwalior via Itarsi by the Jubbulpore mail train. In the afternoon Sir Lepel and Lady Griffin took lunch at Government House, Malabar Point, where they had been, during their brief sojourn here, the guests of their Excellencies Lord and Lady Reay, and in the evening they dined at the Yacht Club. About 9.15 p.m. Sir Lepel and Lady Griffin came to the station, where they were met by a few of their friends, amongst those present being Captain Phayre, A.D.C. to H.E. Lord Reay, Messrs. Pryce-Wadon, J. Kirby, H. Gell, and Jamsetjee Cursetjee Cama, Solicitor. Sir Lepel and Lady Griffin will remain at Gwalior for a few days and afterwards continue their journey to Calcutta en route for Burma.

THE Jame Jamshed states that Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit has made an offer of a lakh of rupees to the Bombay Government for a Leper Home in the Bombay Presidency in commemoration of the visit of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor of Wales to Bombay. In offering this handsome sum Sir Dinshaw says that as a token of the keen interest which his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales takes in the cause of leprosy, and to commemorate the visit of his eldest son to this city, he is willing to place one lakh of rupees in the hands of Government to found a Leper Home in the Bombay Presidency. There is every probability, the Jame says, of the offer being accepted by the Bombay Government, and the expenses for its maintenance will be defrayed by the Government as well as the Municipality.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain needed in Kurrachee. Early sown late crops in three talukas of Shikarpur damaged by locusts. Late crops generally in one taluka of Kurrachee, jowari in one taluka of Poona and exotic cotton in four talukas of Dharwar blighted. Crops generally in two talukas of Nasik and one of Poona and jowari in parts of Ahmednagar and Sholapur withering for want of moisture. Wheat and cotton in one taluka of Ahmedabad and crops generally in two talukas of Shikarpur and Ahmednagar and one of Poona damaged by cloudy weather or excessive cold. Standing crops otherwise generally good or middling. Harvesting of late crops commenced in a few districts. Fodder scarce in four talukas of Khandesh and two of Nasik. Water scarce in three talukas of Khandesh. Agricultural stock good except in one taluka of Kurrachee.

REVOLT OF CHRISTIANS IN CENTRAL INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—I beg to call your attention to page 126 of the Allahabad Pioneer Mail of the 22nd ultimo, regarding the Kols of Chota Nagpoor:—

"In course of time the news of a serious outrage was reported from Kurdega, in a most distant part of the district near the confines of the Tributary States of Jushpore and Gangpore. The report was to the effect that an armed body of some 2,500 Roman Catholic Christians had assembled and rescued four accused persons from the custody of the police, and that some 500 out of this number had appeared at the outpost of Kurdega and demanded the release of the same persons from their handcuffs; and on their request not being complied with, had taken the matter into their own hands and caused the handcuffs to be unfastened and removed. Later reports stated that the Christians had assembled in large numbers armed with lathies, bows and arrows, battle-axes, slings and stones, and were guarding the roads at every point."

To put down incipient rebellion in India it is necessary that a first-rate officer, with full powers, be appointed to decide complaints on the spot—PROMPTLY.

Prolonged delays have already been permitted, and the seeds of disaffection have germinated. The rights in land ought to have been decided and recorded eight years ago, in 1882, when the papers were laid before Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

Procrastination will probably be the cause of our loss of India, just as it cost us three millions sterling in re Alabama in 1872. I have no doubt that Her Majesty's Secretary of State will hereafter be able clearly to prove that he has lost India in a most legal manner, after having been in consultation with the Attorney-General.

The rebels are, I believe, within a few miles of the new railroad direct from Bombay through Nagpoor to Calcutta. The railway causes the value of adjacent land to rise enormously; and it will probably be found that the question of dividing the profits of the rise is causing the present row. If Kordega be the same place as Gardega, in lies in latitude 22° 4' and longitude 84° 28'.

I hope that if the wicked are to be shot, mercy may be extended to the erring and misguided, who have to encounter our rifles with bows and arrows. Let us remember Dugald Dalgetty, when he was fainting from his wound,—

"But I forget; ye have no matchlocks nor habergeons, only bows and arrows—bows and arrows! Ha! ha! ha!"
—Your obedient servant,
T.

February 13th.

THE contract between the Secretary of State and Sir Theodore Hope's Syndicate for the Assam Railway will be signed within the next few weeks, the final terms having now been settled.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FEB. 21.

THE INDIA COUNCIL.

Lord HERSCHELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether he proposed to lay on the table any communication with the present or late Viceroy of India as to altering the constitution of the Council in India.

Lord CROSS said he did not know that he had any communication to make to the House, but he hoped the Bill he proposed to introduce would be read on Monday. The communications referred to were of a confidential nature.

INDIA COUNCILS BILL.

Viscount CROSS rose to call attention to the provisions of the Act regulating the numbers and functions of the several councils in India, and to present a Bill. He said:—It is not my intention to detain your lordships with any lengthened statement with regard to this Bill, but I thought it was only due to your lordships' House to explain very shortly the objects of and reasons for the measure to which I shall ask your lordships to give the first reading to-night. Your lordships are aware that under the provisions of the Indian Council Act of 1861, when the Council of the Governor-General meets for the purpose of making laws and regulations, in addition to the ordinary members of Council, other members nominated by the Governor-General form part of the Council for that purpose, but no business is to be transacted at any such meeting other than the consideration and enactment of measures introduced into the Council for the purposes of enactment. It follows from this (1) that although, when the Budget of the year requires legislation, the members so assembled are at liberty to discuss the financial proposals of the Government, yet when no such legislation is required no opportunity is legally offered for any such discussion; and (2) that no member of Council is able to ask the Government to give any explanation of any of its proceedings, and that no right of interpellation exists touching any matters which may have arisen in any Department. I had several conversations with the present Viceroy before he left England, and in consequence, in a speech to the Executive Council on March 29th, 1889, his Excellency made the following observations:—

"It has, I believe, usually been held that the terms of the Act by which our proceedings are governed preclude such examination of the Budget except when the financial arrangements for the year involve legislation in Council. The result has been that the Legislative Council has or has not been able to discuss the Budget, according as it was or was not connected with some change in the laws of the country, and it has thus come to pass that during the last twenty-five years the Budget has been discussed in Council upon twelve occasions, while in the remaining years no such discussion has been allowed to take place. This seems to me, I must say, an altogether incongruous and inconvenient arrangement, and I am glad to express publicly my opinion that the opportunities accorded to the Legislative Council for passing under review the financial situation of the country should occur with regularity, and should not depend, as they depend at present, upon what is, after all, a mere accident—I mean the necessity of financial legislation in any particular year. I may perhaps take this opportunity of mentioning that this subject appears to be closely connected with another—I mean the propriety of giving to the members of the Legislative Council of the Government of India, under proper safeguards, the right of addressing questions to Government upon matters of public interest. I make this announcement, however, subject to two important qualifications. It will, in the first place, be necessary to ascertain clearly whether the law as it now stands permits the course which we should like to adopt, and if it does not, how it should be amended. In the next place it will be necessary effectually to limit the right of interpellation in such a manner as to preclude absolutely all questions which could not be put without injury to the public interest. This is a point of the utmost importance, and will require the most careful examination."

In all these observations I entirely agree. I had first to inquire carefully whether the law as it now stands would permit such a course, and I satisfied myself after careful investigation that legislation was required. A Bill was accordingly at once prepared for carrying out these objects during the last session of Parliament, and it was only owing to the extreme pressure of business in the House of Commons that it was not brought forward. As the functions of the Legislative Council are thus to be enlarged, it has also been thought necessary to give power to the Governor-General to add to the number of additional members which he is by the existing law allowed to nominate, so as to enable him to make a wider selection of persons to assist him and his Council in their deliberations. I have hitherto only alluded to the Legislative Council of the Governor-General for the sake of simplicity, but the same arguments apply to the provincial councils, and the like provisions as to the increase of numbers and as to the functions of the provincial councils were both included in the Bill prepared last year. I need not trouble your lordships with explaining other sections of the Bill, which have simply been introduced for the purpose of removing doubts as to the interpretation of certain sections in the original Act. I move that the Bill be now read a first time.

The Marquis of RIPON said that the measure which the noble viscount proposed to introduce was of very considerable importance. Any measure which touched the constitutional functions of the Council of the Governor-General and the other councils of India must be of importance, especially at a time when public attention, both in India and in this country, was so strongly directed to the subject, and he thought the noble viscount would find before the measure was passed that it was calculated to raise other questions. He expressed his entire concurrence in the desirability of something being done to promote the annual discussion of the Budget, whether legislation was required or not. With regard to the right of interpellation, it was a very important question. A great deal would depend upon the mode in which it was restricted, and it would require serious consideration on the part of Parliament. On the subject of the increase of nominated members he entertained very considerable doubts. But on a very important matter, where changes of this kind were about to be made in the constitution of the Indian councils, Parliament ought to have the advantage of knowing the views of the Government of India. The noble viscount had given extracts from a speech of the Governor-General, but he hoped he would lay the whole of the speech on the table. If there had been any official communications between the Government of India and the Government at home with regard to the constitution of the Indian councils Parliament ought to have the advantage of being put in possession of those communications.

The Earl of NORTHBROOK desired to express his entire concurrence in what had fallen from his noble friend who had just sat down, both in his view of the question which the noble viscount had brought forward, and also in the desirability that their lordships should be placed in full possession of the views, both of his noble friend who now occupied the office of Viceroy of India and of Lord Dufferin. In 1861, when a measure dealing with the Legislative Council of India was introduced, there were very complete communications between the Secretary of State and the Governor-General in Council. The papers containing the opinions of Lord Canning were laid before Parliament before the measure was passed, and it was passed mainly in consequence of Lord Canning's opinions. He was not assuming that the noble viscount was not carrying out the views of Lord Lansdowne, but he thought it better, if there had been full official communication, that Parliament should be placed in possession of it. He quite agreed with what had fallen from his noble friend with regard to the alteration of the law as to discussions on the Budget, which he believed, consistent with the Act of 1861, were impossible. But that was a mere accident. He believed that the intention of the Legislature was not that the Legislative Council should be in the nature of an assembly which could discuss any question which might be brought up by any member of the Assembly; it was not to exercise the same sort of functions as the House of Commons or their lordships' House, but should be confined to considering the legislative measures brought before it. That was the policy which commended itself to Parliament in consequence of a distinct evil which had been introduced during the time of the mutiny. Under the law then existing it had taken up the function of discussing matters apart from legislation. That was a distinct evil, and it was remedied by the Act of 1861. In his opinion that Act had been very successful. He believed that the legislation of our great dependency would bear favourable comparison with the legislation of any European country, both as regarded the nature of the enactments, the care with which the measures were considered before they were introduced, and the care with which the information was obtained upon which the enactments were based. He did not say, however, that after the lapse of so many years it might not be necessary to make some alterations in the Act. The measure to be introduced by his noble friend would receive from him the most favourable consideration.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 17.

INDIAN GRIEVANCES.

Mr. BRADLAUGH asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether his attention had been drawn to a petition signed by Sir W. Wedderburn, as president of the Indian National Congress, recently held in Bombay, asking for the restoration of the right of raising matter of grievance, with Mr. Speaker in the chair, prior to the annual Budget statement; and whether the Government would consent to a resolution in the terms of that petition or in those of the motion of the hon. member for North Kensington.

Mr. W. H. SMITH: My attention has been drawn to the petition from the Indian National Congress and also to the resolution founded on it standing in the name of my hon. friend the member for North Kensington; but the Government are not prepared to make the alteration in the rules of the House as suggested, as they are of opinion that it is of greater advantage to the interests of India that the time at which the Indian Budget should be considered should be fixed than that motions should be raised on the motion for going into Committee. A Bill will be introduced in the course of the present Session which will give hon. members an opportunity for the discussion of Indian grievances.

In reply to a further question from Mr. BRADLAUGH,

Mr. W. H. SMITH said: I hope it will be in our power to introduce the Bill at an early period in the Session.

LORD HARRIS.

On Saturday evening a reception was held at 3, Cornwall Mansions, South Kensington, by Mr. J. Cowasjee Jehanghier (son of the late Sir Cowasjee Readymoney, of Bombay) and Mrs. Jehanghier, at which an address was presented by Native inhabitants of Bombay now in London to Lord Harris, the newly-appointed Governor of that Presidency. Many of the Indian gentlemen who attended the reception wore their national costumes, as did a number of Parsee ladies, who were present. The company included the Earl of Northbrook, Lord and Lady Hobhouse, Lord Stanley of Alderley, Lady Westbury, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, Lieut.-Colonel and the Hon. Mrs. Haig, Mr. Charles Hoare, Mr. J. J. Guzdar, the Attorney-General and Miss Webster, Sir James Fergusson, M.P., Sir L. Pelly, M.P., and Lady Pelly, Sir James Linton, Sir R. Temple, M.P., Mr. D. P. Cama, Prince Malcom Khan, Surgeon-Major D. N. Parakh, Sir Philip and Lady Cunliffe Owen, Sir Richard and Lady Mead, Sir Lionel and Lady Darrel, Sir William Hunter, M.P., and Lady Hunter, Sir Roper Lethbridge, M.P., and Lady Lethbridge, Sir W. Wedderburn, Sir Alfred and Lady Lyall, Sir James and Lady Poile, Mr. Caine, M.P., Mrs. and Misses Caine, General and Mrs. Keatinge, General and Mrs. Playfair, Mr. J. N. Banerjee, Sir Richard and Lady Bernard, and Bai Rukhmabai.

Mr. J. COWASJEE JEHANGHIER read and presented to Lord Harris an address bearing the signatures of about fifty of the leading native inhabitants of Bombay now in London. It was their earnest hope, they said, that it might be his lordship's proud and happy privilege to lead their countrymen in the path of progress open to them, and to be the means of rendering them still more loyal and attached, and of teaching them to be proud of being citizens of the great and enlightened British Empire.

Lord HARRIS, in the course of his reply, said:—I find great difficulty in expressing to you in adequate terms my gratitude for the appreciation of the friendly welcome which your address indicates. If it had been necessary to arouse in me a feeling of friendship for the races amongst whom my five years, if I live, are to be spent, your most kindly welcome would have supplied that incentive. But I venture to think none is necessary in my case. I have been accustomed in childhood to the society of natives of India, and have been in the way of hearing India talked of all my life. I have always looked to it as the source whence flowed the advantages which my forefathers have enjoyed, and I have never forgotten that I therefore owe it a debt of gratitude. I do not mention these facts as likely to constitute by themselves auxiliaries to a successful career there. But you have paid my family the compliment of referring to the services in India of some of its members, and I respond by assuring you that I go to India with no feeling of going to a strange country, but rather with a very strong feeling that I am returning to a place that in some past time I looked upon as a home, and to which my memory has constantly turned with feelings of pleasure. So far, gentlemen, I can speak with little hesitation, but when you are so confident in your prediction, as to anticipate during my administration and in consequence of it the enhancement of the welfare and happiness of the people of Western India, I must ask you to allow me to express my preference for deeds to words. I cannot stake my all on your kindly forecast; I prefer that I should be judged by what I do to flattering estimates being formed of what may be expected of me, estimates that may prove quite fallacious. I can make no promises, gentlemen, beyond this—that I will try to do my best in the position our beloved Sovereign has been graciously pleased to place me in—(cheers).

A congratulatory dinner was given to Lord Harris (Governor-elect of Bombay), on Friday evening, at the Criterion Restaurant, by the Northbrook Indian Club. The chair was taken by the Earl of Northbrook, G.C.S.I., and among those present were Viscount Cross, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., Lord Randolph Churchill, General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B., Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, Mr. Sassoon, Sir Peter Lumsden, G.C.B., Sir J. Strachey, G.C.S.I., Sir George Campbell, K.C.S.I., M.P., Mr. T. H. Thornton, C.S.I., Mr. C. W. Arathoon, Mr. Arthur Brandreth, Dr. S. A. Kapadia (hon. secretary), and many well-known and representative Indian gentlemen. The Chairman having given the toast of "The Queen and Empress of India," which was loyally received, called upon Lord Randolph Churchill to propose the health of Lord Harris. Lord RANDOLPH CHURCHILL said that his friendship with Lord Harris dated back almost exactly a quarter of a century. They were at Eton together, they were at Oxford together, they worked together most closely and most intimately for many years in the service of the political party to which they both belonged, and on the same day they took office together and entered the same department. They would, therefore, understand that personal experience promoted him to the expression of his conviction that in advising the Sovereign to appoint Lord Harris as Governor of Bombay Her Majesty's Ministers had been wisely and happily guided. The family from which their noble guest sprang afforded an exceptional and probably unprecedented instance of a family which, since the beginning of the century, had given no fewer than three Governors to India. Those present that evening could not blind themselves to the consideration that fifty years of almost unbroken peace and of almost continuously sustained prosperity, and 25 years of liberal and unremitting effort on the part of the State in devising education of every kind for the Indian people, had produced and were producing great numbers of native gentlemen who were possessed of an honourable ambition to take a large and growing part in the public life of their land. How to satisfy that honourable ambition wisely, safely, and adequately was the modern problem of Indian government. To that and other problems Lord Harris brought the results of a liberal education acting on a truly liberal mind. He would be accompanied by their warmest wishes and highest hopes; and in the responsible position he was about to occupy he would serve the Empress of India with all that credit, honour, and success to which his name entitled him, to which his talents called him, and which England and India confidently expected of him. Mr. D. Naoroji supported the toast. Lord Harris, in responding, said that the people of India ought to be, and they were, loyal to the British Government. That was the opinion with which he went to India; it depended upon those amongst whom he went with what opinions he came away. He asked them to believe that he went to what he believed to be a serious and an arduous task, with all the determination of which he was capable, to endeavour to do his duty to those over whom he had been placed, and with the most earnest anxiety that he might be guided to further the prosperity of the peoples of Bombay and to maintain the credit and the dignity of that great province.

THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION AND LORD HARRIS.

The following memorial has been presented to the Right Hon. Lord Harris, Governor designate of Bombay, from the Council of the East India Association:—"My lord,—It is gratifying to the Council of this Association, of which your lordship is a vice-president, to express their sincere pleasure at your lordship's appointment to the high office of Governor of Bombay. They are aware of the very great interest—a great hereditary interest it may be said—which your lordship takes in that vast empire of the realm in which you are about to hold so important a post, and they wish you God-speed in your new career, assuring your lordship of their sympathy in the arduous duties which you will be called upon to discharge, and begging you to accept their most cordial congratulations. As your lordship is aware, this Association was established solely for the furtherance of the interests of India and for the advancement of the welfare of her people. Your memorialists are unwilling to encroach on your valuable time by entering into any detailed observations or urging their own views with respect to any of the varied and important subjects connected with the Presidency of Bombay, such as the judicious encouragement of means by which the available water supply of Western India will be turned to the utmost account for irrigating the arid districts of the Deccan, Kattiwar, Cutch, and Scinde. The improvement of the economic condition of the peasantry of Western India. The introduction or revival of suitable mechanical arts so that the masses of the people may be less dependent on agriculture, and the continuation of the efforts already made on behalf of primary and secondary education and industrial training.

The cautious development of railways and canals. The development of the principle of decentralisation of provincial finance. The participation of the people in the administration and management of their own local affairs, and the further extension of the principles of municipal government. The removal of race antagonism by the promotion of friendly social intercourse between Europeans and Natives of India. The organisation of the Native Army so as to offer suitable openings for advancement to Native officers. The improvement of the numerous Native States in Western India. The amelioration of the condition of the poorer members of the European and Eurasian communities, and the removal of the disadvantages under which they labour in procuring employment. All of which the Council feel assured will receive your lordship's earnest consideration. The Council hope that the people of Bombay, under the guidance of your wisdom and judgment, recognising the beneficial effects of salutary influence judiciously exercised, may be strengthened and confirmed in their attachment to the paramount Power; whilst enlightened men of rank and position may be encouraged to take a legitimate interest in the transaction of public affairs. In conclusion, the Association venture to express an earnest wish that in the execution of the weighty task you have now undertaken, your labours may be crowned with complete success.—I have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's most obedient servant, ORFEUR CAVENAGH, Chairman on behalf of the Council of the East India Association."

In his reply to the Council of the East India Association Lord Harris assures them that he appreciates at the highest the interest in himself they are good enough to indicate. "The sympathy which you express on the arduous duties I shall be called upon to discharge in the office to which Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to appoint me, is a great encouragement. In the absence of a practical experience with these duties it would be presumption on my part to deviate from the judicious example set me in your address, by entering into any detailed observations with respect to any of the varied and important subjects connected with the Presidency of Bombay. I pray that by God's help your earnest wish that in the execution of the weighty task I have undertaken my labours may be crowned with complete success may see fulfilment."

It was announced in Friday week's Gazette that Lieutenant-General Sir George Chesney's appointment as Colonel-Commandant of the Royal (late Bengal) Engineers had been cancelled, and that Major-General E. C. S. Williams, C.I.E., was made Colonel-Commandant in his stead, vice the late Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala. The explanation is this:—Although junior in the army to Sir George Chesney, General Williams is senior in service. He joined the army June 9th, 1848. Sir George Chesney did not receive his commission until December 8th, 1848. General Williams served as Adjutant of Engineers with the Expedition to Pegu in 1852, and was present at the bombardment and capture of Martaban and Rangoon (slightly wounded), capture of Prome and occupation of Meaday (mentioned in despatches for "gallant conduct," medal with clasp).

THE UNIVERSITY CONVOCATION.

The Rast Goftar says:—The address of the Vice-Chancellor rose above the level of the trite and the commonplace, and at the same time it did not soar into the realms of the unattainable. The ideal of a University which he placed before his audience had not simply the merit of being fascinating, but it had the far higher merit of being practicable and attainable. Similarly, his observations on the duties and responsibilities of "the heralds of a new illumination," as he felicitously styled the University graduates, showed his correct grasp of the conditions of life by which they are surrounded and of the noble struggle which is demanded of them as one of the highest missions of their lives in consequence of the antagonism of life and thought which they meet with, not only in their own country and their own town, but in their very homes. The educated classes have not yet awakened to an adequate sense of their responsibilities. They have hitherto looked upon education simply and solely as a means of self-advancement. Their conscience has not awakened to the trials, and struggles, and sacrifices which they should be moved to make in an earnest endeavour to battle with the Power of Darkness by which they are surrounded on all sides. Indeed, the alumni of our Universities have a far higher and nobler mission to fulfil than the educated men of any other country.

THE LATE MR. KNIGHT.

The Kaiser-i-Hind, referring to the death of Mr. Knight, says:—His heart bled to find that in the governance of this great country, with its teeming population, steeped in misery, divided by internecine social quarrels, voiceless in the Council Chambers, persistently maligned and as persistently misrepresented, this should be the one great blot. Firmly imbued with the belief in the principle that righteousness exalteth a nation, he never set aside his pen in order to impress at every opportunity on the rulers of the country the absolute propriety of following out that principle in practice firmly and impartially. No journalist can approach him in the variety of Indian subjects over which he had such complete mastery; while his lucid and popular style of exposition of the most abstruse subjects may be said to be unrivalled. Among Indian journalists he stood supreme, a towering personality, all alone in his glory. Such a journalist is rarely to be found in India. He blooms like the peculiar aloe once in an age. India cannot but mourn the loss of such a man or fail to reverence his memory. Knight has been a household word in India, ay, in the length and breadth of the land, next to Munro and Elphinstone, Canning, and Ripon. Robert Knight has not only made his public life sublime; he has left footprints behind which, it is to be devoutly hoped, perhaps, another sailing on the main of Indian journalism, may follow and take to heart, profiting by his noble example and earning the blessings of a depressed and oppressed nationality.

SIR LEPEL AND LADY GRIFFIN AT THE ALEXANDRA GIRLS' SCHOOL.

Sir Lepel Griffin, Lady Griffin, Colonel E. T. Luck, Mrs. Luck, and Mr. Moncrieff, accompanied by Mr. Jamsetjee Nusserwanjee Tata, and a few Parsee ladies and gentlemen, paid a visit, which lasted over an hour, to the Alexandra School. Miss Serene Manockjee Cursetjee received the visitors and showed them over the school. The advanced pupils sang a few songs, after which some of the young girls recited a few pieces, suiting their action to the words according to Kindergarten system. The visitors having expressed a desire to see how the calisthenics class worked, the whole school, to the accompaniment of music, went through various exercises under the direction of the lady who teaches them calisthenics. The visitors were pleased to find on the playground a couple of swings put up for the girls, and were gratified to learn that the pupils at their own cost were getting prepared a portion of the playground for lawn-tennis. Lady Griffin was highly pleased with the singing and the Kindergarten song. Sir Lepel Griffin expressed himself delighted with the calisthenics, and was glad to find it made one of the fixed courses of study at the school. Lady Griffin was so pleased with all she had seen and heard, that she and Sir Lepel Griffin expressed personally their thanks to the lady superintendent for the good work that was being done at the school. The honorary secretary, Mr. Jamsetjee Cursetjee Cama, requested the visitors to put their names down in the visitors' book; but the visitors were pleased, in addition to their signatures, to record their opinions concerning the school in very flattering terms.—Bombay Gazette.

THE INDIAN COUNCILS AMENDMENT BILL.

A VERY curious Bill, indeed, is that which "been prepared and brought in by Mr. Bradlaugh, Mr. Justin McCarthy, Mr. Caine, Mr. McLaren, Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Picton, Dr. Hunter and Mr. McNeill"—names which represent strange knowledge and experience of India—"to make better provision for the constitution of the Governor-General of India, and for amending the Legislative Councils of the several Presidencies and Provinces of India by enlarging their number, constituting them on a partially elective basis, and increasing their powers.

The Executive Council of the Viceroy and Governor-General is first dealt with and the Bill enacts that:—

"There shall be five ordinary members of the said Executive Council of the Viceroy and Governor-General, three of whom shall from time to time be appointed by the Secretary of State for India in Council from among such persons as shall have been at the time of such appointment in the service in India of the Crown, or of the company and the Crown, for at least ten years; if the person so appointed shall be in the military service of the Crown he shall not, during his continuance in office as a member of Council, hold any military command, or be employed in actual military duties; the remaining two, one of whom shall be a barrister or a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland of not less than five years standing, shall be appointed from time by Her Majesty by warrant under Her Royal Sign Manual; and it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State in Council to appoint the Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in India to be an extraordinary member of the said Council, and such extraordinary member of Council shall have rank and precedence at the Council Board next after the Governor-General."

It will be seen from the above that no change in the number of members constituting the Council is intended—that number remaining five, as at present. Three must have been for at least ten years in the Indian Services, and of the remaining two one must be a barrister or a member of the Scottish Faculty of Advocates. But what of the one then remaining? What are to be the qualifications required of the fifth member? Is the silence on this point to be attributed, as a contemporary suggests, to the loose and involved phraseology, and extremely un-grammatical wording of the draft, or is it intended that the qualification of the fifth member has yet to be decided upon by Mr. Bradlaugh and his Congress friends? As the draft now stands no qualifications whatever are required from the mysterious fifth "party."

But, as there is evidently little intention of interfering with the Supreme Council, this omission need not be further commented upon. It is when Mr. Bradlaugh comes to deal with the Legislative Council that the true aim and scope of the Bill become apparent. It is proposed that that Council shall consist of not less than eighty members, one-fourth of whom shall be officials nominated by the Viceroy and Governor-General; one-fourth (including the Executive Council) to be officials or non-officials, also nominated by the Viceroy; and the remaining half to be elected by the electoral bodies of the various Presidencies, Provinces, and Chief Commissionerships in the following proportions:—

Bengal to elect for Lower Provinces and Assam, 14; for North-West Provinces and Oudh, 9; Madras, 6; Bombay, 4; Punjab, 4; Central Provinces, 2; and Burma, 1.

The persons so elected are to be non-official, that is, persons who at the date of such election shall not be in the civil or military service of the Crown in India. The seat in Council of any non-official member accepting office under the Crown is to be declared vacated. The Council is to sit for three years only; its meetings are to take place only in Calcutta, to be held in regular session beginning in or about the first week in December and ending in March of the following year. In case of any serious crisis or matter of great urgency the Viceroy and Governor-General will have power to summon the Council to meet "in such central city in the Empire being the seat of government of a presidency or province as may be convenient," but "the only business which shall be transacted in such extraordinary session shall be set forth in the notice issued by the Viceroy and Governor-General when summoning the Council."

It will be seen that Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill has been drafted very considerably in the interests of the Bengali Babú, who is so anxious to talk and so unwilling to work. The "electoral representatives" who are to compose one-half of the Supreme Legislative Council must have the following qualifications:—Ability to read and write English or some one of the vernaculars of India; to be in possession of an income of not less than one thousand two hundred rupees per annum; must not be an uncertificated bankrupt, or have been within the previous ten years in jail under conviction, not subsequently reversed, of a non-bailable offence.

These eligible representatives are to be returned by the electoral bodies already referred to. The electoral body is to be elected territorially every three years at the rate of twelve members per million inhabitants of its respective presidency, province, or chief commissionership, and the following are to be the voting qualifications:—

"Any male British subject resident on the thirty-first day of December in any year, and who has during the preceding six months so resided in any presidency, province, and chief commissionership in India, of full age, shall be eligible to vote for electoral representatives, provided that he shall not, within the previous ten years, have been in jail under conviction, not subsequently reversed, of a non-bailable offence; who shall pay revenue or rent to the Government, or to some superior landholder, on account of land or premises of not less than fifty rupees per annum, or be the managing member of a joint family enjoying an equal income, or pay direct taxes (imperial, provincial, or municipal) of not less than ten rupees per annum, or shall have an income of not less than one hundred and fifty rupees per annum, or be a member of a local or municipal board, or be a graduate of some university."

The same principle is to apply to the Provincial Councils. It will be seen at a glance that Mr. Bradlaugh has taken his ideas of what are the wants of India from what the Congress delegates have told him. But all others who know India know that the elective principle proposed cannot be introduced in this way amongst its many and divided peoples. If the attempt be made, the result will be as our contemporary the Evening Post points out, that "the Government will disgust the loyal community of India, and play into the hands of the noisy, half-educated, and unwarlike race, which has not one sentiment in common with the Natives of the North-West, of the Punjab, of Central India, of the Deccan, or of the Western Provinces."

THE KHALSA COLLEGE.

WE are now in a position to inform our readers that the new Sikh College is intended to give a thoroughly useful education, with the object of preparing students for the real work of life, whatever that may be. There are three standards which naturally suggest themselves for the general course—(1) Official employment; (2) The Army; (3) Professional work. Care is being taken to adapt the general course of study to the requirements of those three classes of work, and not until the student has attained reasonable proficiency in the main subjects will he be allowed to join the Special course, which will consist of higher instruction in Punjabi literature and the philosophy of the Sikh religion.

Just as might have been expected, when the Sikhs take a matter in hand they do it thoroughly and heedfully. This becomes conspicuous in the following sketch of proposed classes. At first instruction is to be given in Punjabi; the 1st and 2nd classes will give their whole time to acquiring a thorough knowledge of their Native tongue, relieved by physical exercises. Class 3 will give most of its time to the acquisition of general subjects of study through the Punjabi language; but English and Urdú will also begin to be taught, physical exercises still continuing. In Classes 4 and 5 Punjabi will be dropped, except for religious instruction; but English and Urdú will take a more prominent place, along with mathematics, history, geography, and physical exercises. In the 7th Class the subjects of study will be raised to a higher standard, and one of the classical languages (either Sanskrit or Persian) will be added. In the 8th, 9th, and 10th Classes English is to become the medium of instruction, and mathematics, philosophy, and the sciences be advanced to a high standard. After a student has passed the 8th Class he may be admitted to the Special Branch, which will give high instruction in Punjabi literature, English, Sanskrit, and Persian, with professional and scientific training. Physical exercises will accompany every stage of the course, and following the genius of the people those exercises will be of a military character, and in this way a body of well-educated and well-trained men will be raised who will be of the highest value to the country.

Such is a sketch of the proposed College, and it is sufficient to show that it is one which should command the fullest support of the Government, and of every friend of India. It is seen that it aims at giving a thoroughly practical training to its students, so as to fit them for professional and commercial work, as well as for the army, and for official employ. It starts on the sound basis that no man can be called educated who cannot express himself with propriety in his Native language; but it also recognises the fact that high education is impossible in India without a perfect knowledge of English. Hence the College course rises from Punjabi to English, adding Urdu for certain practical reasons.

MR. ROBERT KNIGHT AND THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

THE Bombay Gazette (Summary) of January 31st contains a tolerably full and appreciative review of the late Mr. Robert Knight's public life and career as a journalist, both in that city and in Calcutta. The account includes a history in outline of the Anglo-Indian Press in Bombay, and revives some forgotten incidents in that chequered story. This general character of the notice, however, renders, at least, one striking omission more conspicuous. Whilst the Bombay writer has very properly done justice to the departed, in spite of evident dissent from some of the principles the energetic advocacy of which made the late editor of the Statesman famous in his time, the same writer has done much less than justice to the living. He has carefully, and with manifest intent, avoided all reference to a surviving journalist, who was editor of the Times of India for even a longer period than was Mr. Knight himself. The omission to which we refer is from the passage where, after describing the munificent testimonial and the deservedly eulogistic addresses presented to the then eminent journalist, and mentioning his departure early in 1864 for England, the writer goes on:—"On his return (he) resumed charge of his paper from the Rev. Mr. Gell, who was acting for him. Subsequently, in consequence of differences with his partner, Mr. Mull, Mr. Knight severed his connection with his journal, and started a cheap paper called the Indian Statesman, at the same time editing the Indian Economist, Agriculturist, and the Statistical Reporter, which received the support of Government."

Now, it is only fair to supply what is wanting in the former portion of this passage. The late Rev. A. Gell did act as editor for a few months after Mr. Knight's departure; but before the end of 1864 that reverend gentleman (who was a chaplain on the Bombay Establishment) had fled from the ire of Bishop Harding, who was scandalised at one of his clergy having accepted the secular and—as the orthodox prelate appeared to think—demoralising profession of a journalist. He was followed in the chair, very early in 1865, by Mr. W. Martin Wood, who held that position until March, 1874, with the exception of a few months in 1868, when Mr. Knight was editor during the period of "differences" alluded to; after which, for a short time, Mr. Mull, who had been manager throughout, edited the paper until Mr. Wood resumed the chair, which he held to the date just mentioned, thus covering altogether a period of nine years. As correctly narrated in the Gazette's review, Mr. Knight followed Dr. Buist as editor of the Bombay Times in January, 1858, of which, and after its amalgamation with Mr. Mull's paper, the Standard, as the Times of India, he, as its editor, made his substantial fame as the most notable of Anglo-Indian journalists.

It can be no disparagement to Mr. Knight's reputation as an original thinker and writer on Indian affairs to recall the services of his successor, Mr. Martin Wood, who, indeed, has always acknowledged his indebtedness to his notable predecessor. In the Gazette's leading article on Mr. Knight's characteristics as a publicist it is remarked that "his criticism sometimes, indeed, lost weight through the over-abundant energy with which it was presented"; and "we are obliged to say of him that he had the defects of his qualities." In supplement to which it may be remarked, as the opinion of some, that Mr. Wood, whilst adhering, in the main, to the principles of his predecessor, advocated them with less asperity, and rendered the Times of India more generally acceptable to opponents and the impartial portion of the Indian public.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE relief of the Sikkim Field Force will not be carried out till the end of March.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL WOLSELEY, now on sick leave in England, returns shortly to resume his command at Mandalay.

THE inspecting officer of the Mysore war service troops will be chosen from the Madras Staff Corps.

THE Seaforth Highlanders will remain in Pindi this hot weather, and the Northumberland Fusiliers will go to the Murree Hills.

IT has been decided to charge the travelling expenses of Staff Officers proceeding to and from camps-of-exercise to the grants authorised for such camps.

THE Government of India have decided that officers appointed as Cantonment Magistrates and seconded in their regiments must be held to be liable for the payment of mess and band subscriptions at half rate.

THE Government of India has negatived the application for an increase to the establishment of the Adjutant-General's office, Madras, based on the ground of increased work caused by the transfer of Burma to the Madras command, and the administration of Volunteer corps under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the enrolment of the names of fourteen gentlemen residents of Aden as the nucleus of a corps of Naval Volunteers, to be designated "The Aden Naval Volunteers." The corps will be under the control of the Government of Bombay, and the port officer at Aden will most likely be the commandant.

THE Secretary of State has drawn the attention of the Madras Government to the charges incurred for the large number of unentitled passengers sent home in troopships to the exclusion of those entitled to the privilege. He says the correspondence reveals want of foresight on the part of the authorities concerned and a disregard of standing orders which should not recur.

ONE of the sights of Bombay during the Prince's visit will be a combined military and naval rehearsal of the defence scheme for the harbour and city. The local Volunteers, infantry, artillery, and light horse, will be asked to take part, and the operations being carried out under the Duke of Connaught, no pains will be spared to make them both instructive and impressive.

THE enlistment of 500 Kols for transport work with the Lushai Field Force is an experiment adopted in the hope that these hardy tribesmen, from the uplands of Chota Nagpur, will be equal to the trying work in the jungles, and will not succumb to the malarious climate. Their strength and powers of endurance are unquestioned, and they are more self-reliant than the ordinary coolies recruited from the plains. If the experiment proves successful on the Chittagong side, additional corps will be raised for transport work in the Chin Hills, where the sickness among the Punjabis has seriously interfered with the mobility of General Symons' column.

THE Secretary of State for India in some recent despatches having commented on the rapid increase in the number of non-commissioned officers allowed to proceed to England from India on private affairs, and the extra expense incurred thereby for passages, which is attributed in a great measure to the too liberal grant of these furloughs, it has been decided as a consequence to curtail the grant, and to limit the indulgence in future to special and exceptional cases. This is bad news for the non-commissioned officers of the Indian army, and it is hoped that the recommendations for furlough will be treated in a liberal spirit, as if the grant of passages is confined to the period the troopships are running, it is not apparent where the extra charge for passages comes in.

HERE is an extract from the "Garrison Orders" of Bangalore of the 31st ultimo, which may be allowed to speak for itself:—"The Brigadier-General regrets to have to notice the conduct of some of the troops engaged in the cavalry field-day of the 17th instant. It is clearly established that some of the third squadron, 3rd Madras Cavalry, under its commander, disregarding the rules on the subject in field manoeuvres, entered the village of Hosur when occupied by a dismounted party of the 21st Hussars, and engaged in a personal conflict with the defenders, and in at least one instance a sword was drawn by the 3rd Madras Cavalry. The individual directly responsible for this breach of discipline is the officer commanding the squadron in not halting his men outside the village, and his plea of ignorance of the rule for field manoeuvres cannot be accepted as an excuse. The Brigadier-General is unable, however, to overlook the conduct of men who permitted themselves, under any circumstances, to employ weapons confided to them for use against the Queen's enemies against their own comrades, and directs that the men of the third squadron, 3rd Madras Cavalry, shall not wear their swords at field manoeuvres until further orders."

A BOMBAY correspondent confirms in a very unexpected way the statements regarding the recruiting difficulty in the Western Army. He states that in one district a recruiting party was out for several months and yet failed to enlist a single man for service in the ranks. The country people would not listen to the sepoys' tempting offers, preferring the peace and (comparative) plenty of their village life to the career of a soldier in the Native army. Complaints have been numerous in the Bombay papers that men of the old fighting castes cannot now be obtained. The military authorities must be aware of this, and they should take careful note of the class of recruits who have during the past two or three years joined the colours. If these men are of non-fighting races they are obviously out of place in an army which is meant for service, and any great increase in their numbers will tend to lower the morale of the whole body of Native troops in the Western Presidency. It would be better that regiments which are deteriorating should be disbanded at once than that they should be formed of men unfitted in every way for campaigning. If compensation were given by the raising of new battalions from among the tribesmen of Biluchistan, similar to the 27th, 29th, and 30th Bombay Infantry, no complaints would be heard from the officers who would be affected by the change; they would, in fact, probably be only too pleased to serve in these new frontier regiments.

Miscellaneous.

CAPTAIN KUNHARDT, R.E., Manager, Tirhoot State Railway, goes to Lahore as Deputy Manager on the North-West Railway when the Tirhoot line is made over to the Bengal North-Western Company.

BRIGADE-SURGEON A. ALLAN, M.D., Medical Staff, has been appointed to be Honorary Surgeon on the Viceroy's personal staff, vice Brigade-Surgeon W. Temple, who has returned to England on completion of his tour of foreign service.

THE following are the arrangements in contemplation for the carrying out of the Indian reliefs for the season 1890-91. Regiments for India:—16th Lancers, from England; 2nd Battalion, Suffolk Regiment, from Egypt; 1st Battalion, Bedfordshire Regiment, from Malta; and 1st Battalion, King's Royal Rifles, from England. Regiments to return to England:—17th Lancers, from Bengal; 2nd Battalion, Leicestershire Regiment, from Aden; 1st Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers, from Burma; and 1st Battalion, Border Regiment, from Burma. The 1st Battalion, Connaught Rangers, will proceed from Bengal to Aden, in relief of the 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment.

THE officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the 24th Regiment, being desirous of erecting a memorial to their comrades who fell in the Burmese war, have commissioned Mr. Taylor, of Berners-street, to execute a stained glass window and memorial brass with the name of every man who fell in action, or died during the campaign, to be placed in the Priory Church, Brecon, where the memorial to their comrades, who fell in the South African Campaign, is erected.

THE consecration of the new-elected Bishop of Chota Nagpore, which takes place at the latter end of March, promises to be a most imposing religious ceremony. The Right Rev. Dr. Johnson, the Metropolitan of India, will be the consecrating Bishop, and the Bishops of Bombay, Madras, and possibly Dr. Strachan, of Rangoon, will assist at the service. These dignitaries of the Church will be attended by their respective domestic chaplains, and a large number of the clergy from the surrounding districts and stations are expected to be present. The sermon will be preached by Dr. Mylne, the Bishop of Bombay.

EXCHANGE WITH INDIA.—The "demonetisation of silver," and its twin sister "Bimetallism," have so long held the field of debate that it is a relief to be able to anticipate an early termination of the tiresome discussions on these topics. The "silver question," as it affects the United Kingdom, is nothing more than a matter of Foreign Exchange with countries having a monometallic silver standard currency. Our trade with European countries in that category is so small, however, as to be almost inappreciable compared with the vastness of our commercial relations with the Indian Empire; and the question, therefore, really resolves itself into one of Exchange with India. In the forthcoming numbers of Blackwood's Magazine the subject will be exhaustively discussed in all its essential aspects, and so conclusively, that the problem will be solved, or claim to be solved, to actual demonstration, absolutely beyond the possibility of cavil or controversy. Our manufacturers and export merchants connected with the East India trade, who have suffered so much from the outrageous embargo placed on English goods for so many years past, will no doubt hail this news with satisfaction, and will probably make their voice heard, in no uncertain tones, both in and out of the House of Commons, in the pressing demand for an immediate restoration of the legitimate exchange, which at the present moment should not be lower (but substantially higher) than 2s. 0½d. per rupee. This solution of the question will be as welcome as it is indisputable, and will give an effectual quietus to the mischievous fallacy (to use a mild term) known as "the depreciation of the rupee."

It is satisfactory to hear that three more of the new-type six-inch guns have reached Aden, where each of the two principal forts is now armed with a couple of these powerful weapons. In time the Ordnance Department may find itself able to think about the requirements of Karachi and Bombay.

THE Crocodile, Capt. R. Evans, which was docked on her last return from Bombay, sailed from Portsmouth on Wednesday morning with drafts for the forces in India. These included 57 men Royal Horse Artillery, under Captain Fanshawe; 273 Field Artillery, and 93 men of the Mountain Artillery, all from Woolwich. The passengers embarked at Portsmouth consisted of 60 officers, 431 men, 32 women, and 39 children. On arrival at Queenstown on Thursday the Crocodile was joined by 705 men belonging to various corps, and a number of families.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—The feature in this department on Saturday was a rise of  $\frac{1}{4}$  in the Mysore Company's Shares. Champion Reef declined 1-16. In defence of a Madras masalchi, accused of stealing cigars from a supper-room at a ball, it was urged by a pleader that the poor fellow was so overjoyed at the presence of Prince Albert Victor in the station, that he could not refrain from taking a few of the sahib's cigars to smoke in honour of the occasion.

THE two columns sent from Momeit on the south and Bharno on the north to punish the rebellious Kachins in the neighbourhood of Shweli river have joined hands at Manton, but it seems that a curious mistake was made before the movement was effected. Captain Greenway's column was already in Manton when Major Blundell and his men were coming within range, and being unaware of the arrival of the other column began to shell the place; thereupon the column in occupation mistaking the firing for that of the Kachin Jingals hastened to reply, and serious damage might have been done had not the error been discovered in time.

THE INCOME-TAX IN BURMA.—The latest official report on the working of the income-tax states that 4,448 persons returned their incomes at Rs. 500 to Rs. 700, and 5,795 had incomes exceeding Rs. 750 per annum. Of the total amount collected, Rs. 160,208 was derived from salaries paid by Government, Rs. 62,431 from other salaries, Rs. 83,148 from the profits of companies, Rs. 7,881 from interests on securities, and Rs. 1,45,017 from other sources. The system of levying and collecting the income-tax, which results in more than a third of the whole being collected on salaries to officials, can scarcely be satisfactory. The Chief Commissioner in his resolution on the subject, however, "is satisfied, on the whole, with the success of the tax." As to the violent opposition to the tax, he sees no reason why an income-tax should not be retained as part of the permanent taxation of Burma as well as of India. As to its alleged unpopularity, this is true all over the Empire; and if the trading and mercantile classes are to contribute to the revenues the Chief Commissioner sees no other way of directly touching their profits. "The tax," concludes the resolution, "must be regarded as a permanent tax, and the greatest care must be taken by the Financial Commissioner and the officers under him to make the assessment with care and with justice to the Government and the taxpayer."

THE COST OF LIVING IN AN EASTERN SETTLEMENT.—Last April a Commission was appointed by the Government of Hong Kong to consider the question of increasing the salaries of the colonial officials. It has now presented a report, which contains some interesting facts respecting the cost of living in a foreign settlement in the Far East. It finds that in the last ten years the cost of living in Hong Kong has increased 20 per cent. for Europeans and 10 per cent. for Chinese, clothing being the only necessary which is cheaper now. Rent has increased from 100 to 150 per cent. for Europeans and 100 per cent. for Chinese houses, servants' wages have increased 10 to 15 per cent., imported articles have risen in proportion to the fall in exchange, the cost of medical attendance has doubled, while the decreasing purchasing power of the dollar is severely felt by those who have families to maintain or educate at home. The Commission therefore proposes that official salaries generally should be raised to an amount in current dollars equivalent to their original sterling value, taking the dollar at 4s. 2d., while non-European officials should receive an advance of 20 per cent. The report is signed by five leading merchants (one being a Chinese) and the Chief Justice, who was the only official on the Commission. In an appendix to the report the commissioners lay it down that the Superior English officials may reasonably expect—(1) to live in comfort; (2) to be able to go home when leave is due; (3) to marry at thirty; (4) to be in a position to send their children to England and educate them there; (5) to be able to insure their lives; and (6) to save sufficient to live in comfort on their retirement, for which their pensions would in themselves be insufficient.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ROBERT WALLACE, K.C.S.I., Bengal Staff Corps, son of the late Robert Wallace, of Carshalton, died on the 12th inst., at Leamington, aged sixty-eight. He was formerly Political Agent at Babroda, East India, and retired on full pay as lieutenant-colonel.

MAJOR WILLIAM BRYDON, late Bengal Staff Corps, eldest son of the late Surgeon-Major William Brydon, C.B., died at Colon, Panama, on the way to Texas, on the 10th inst., at the age of forty-four. The deceased joined the service in 1863, obtained his lieutenancy in 1867, captaincy in 1875, and his majority in 1883. He served in the Looshai Expedition in 1871-72, receiving the medal with clasp, and in the operations against the Naga Hill Tribes in 1878, being mentioned in despatches.

THE Times referring to the late Sir Louis Mallet's connection with the Indian Council says:—"Here he worked to such good purpose that in 1874, on the death of Herman Merivale, he was offered by the Duke of Argyll the post of permanent Under-Secretary of State for India. His work at the India Office continued till 1883, being only interrupted by the visits he paid to India in 1875 and to the Paris Monetary Conference in 1881. It was about this time that, adopting the views commonly held by Anglo-Indians, he became a bimetalist, though, as his recent letters to this journal have shown, not a bigoted bimetalist. This was his weakest point, but it must be remembered that he was at the position of greatest difficulty at the India Office just at the time when the sudden, though, as it seems, permanent, fall in the value of silver occurred to perplex Indian statesmen and to cause distress in every English family which draws its support from Indian pay. Of other Indian matters it is only necessary to say that Sir Louis Mallet was a staunch supporter of the plan for extending the employment of Natives of India throughout the lower branches of the public services of that country."

THE Serapis, Capt. F. R. Boardman, C.B., left Port Said on Monday for Portsmouth. A naval correspondent writes that this troopship has narrowly escaped a total wreck at Bombay. On the outward voyage the crew were being exercised in the drill known as "man overboard," during which the engines were reversed, and as the ship was going full speed astern a defect was discovered in her screw shaft. On arrival at Bombay divers were sent down, but they being unable to repair the damage it was resolved to dock the ship. This very nearly led to grave disaster, for, after the defect had been made good, the Serapis was being undocked when she stuck amidships in the thick mud of the harbour. She remained tightly fixed, and it was feared that she would have to wait for the next tide, in which case, as the vessel was wedged amidships, with the two ends unsupported, the strain on her hull would have been such that it was believed the Serapis would have been wrecked. Happily, this was averted, for Captain Boardman and his officers, by means of steel hawsers and tugs, dragged the vessel bodily through the mud; and, so far as could be learnt, no more damage was done to the troopship than the loss of the bilge keel, which was torn away. Naval experts present, however, concluded that the Serapis had had a narrow escape, and instance this as another argument in favour of there being better dock accommodation at so important a place as Bombay.

THE Maharaja of Ulwar has, in consequence of his recent illness, been advised to take a sea voyage. As arranged, his Highness was to have left his capital by the 1st of this month and will proceed straight to Australia, whence he will return after a sojourn of three months.

They were met some months ago, on the Pamir, by M. Dauvergne, the French traveller. They had been shooting ovis Poli, and intended to winter in the country north of the Karakorum.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DIS-COVERED A REMEDY to denote
which he coined the word CHLORO-DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE
INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect
that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated
publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS
BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the
INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—
See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE
PALLIATIVE in
NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
London, REPORT that it ACTS as a
CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmacuticals,
Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon
the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars,
and, judging from their sale, we fancy
their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy
of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia,
the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during
many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's,

The Parents' Cabinet of Amusement and Instruction.

BY

MARTHA HILL and FRIENDS.

NEW EDITION.

EDITED BY

CONSTANCE HILL.

The School Board Chronicle says:—"It is a library of bright, lively, wholesome reading in short pieces—about twenty separate tales, fables, poems, articles, and sketches to the volume. Now that the work has been so handsomely and happily revised, no school library will be quite what it should be without it."

The Guardian says:—"We hope that the children of the present generation will welcome, as we remember doing, 'The Parents' Cabinet.' So much did we love the book that the sight is a real refreshment."

The Englishwoman's Review says:—"The work will be prized, we believe, by a new circle of readers for its own sake, as well as by those who re-read it to recall the impressions of their childhood."

The Scotsman says:—"All the articles are written in popular language, being well brought within the capacity of those for whom the work has been compiled. . . . Will prove one of the most popular productions of the season for the rising generation."

The Daily News says:—"Each book is complete in itself, in token of which the order is indicated, not by figures, but by stars. . . . Mrs. Hill was the inventor of this convenient method. . . . May be separated without assuming the appearance of odd volumes."

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it has long held, and there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPEN E.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIA MAIL.

MONDAY, MARCH 3, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th Feb.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 12th Feb.; and from Calcutta to the 12th Feb.

THE annual Financial Statement will be presented to Council on March 21st, and discussion upon it will take place on the 28th.

THE Report of the Select Committee on the Indian Railway Bill was to be laid before the Legislative Council on Feb. 21st. Its consideration will be delayed for a month, the Bill being probably brought up and finally passed on March 14th.

THE action rendered necessary by the Secretary of State's despatch upon the Public Service Commission's Report will occupy the attention of the Local Governments during the next few months.

WITHIN a month probably the whole case of the Government of India in justification of its excise policy will be before the public. It will meet the charges made by Mr. Caine, both in principle and details, with a very complete refutation.

It is probable that the Bengal Tenancy Act will be extended to Orissa, the Lieutenant-Governor having asked the Board of Revenue and Revenue officers employed in that division for opinions on this subject.

THE Viceroy on his journey from Calcutta to Simla in the early part of April will pay a visit to the Dun.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR during the past week has visited Amritsar, Kapurthala, Patiala, and Delhi, at all of which places he was fêted. At Kapurthala his Royal Highness enjoyed some excellent pigsticking; at Delhi he was afforded every opportunity to see spots rendered memorable by the Mutiny in 1857.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS is detained at Umballa by the consequences of a strain which he suffered from the plunging of a restive horse. It is now more than a week since the accident happened.

THE Duke of Connaught and the Headquarters Staff of the Bombay Army have returned to Poona from Quetta.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN was to give a farewell ball to the 17th Lancers on March 5th. He remains in Lucknow until quite the end of that month, and then marches through Garhwal in the direction of the hills.

SIR GEORGE GREAVES leaves Meerut by March 10th for Bombay, and Sir John Hudson will take over from him at Meerut before his departure, and will therefore be leaving the Allahabad Division a day or two earlier. Major-General Montmorency—who is now Major-General Lord Frankfort, having come into his father's title since his appointment to India—was not expected to be out for some time; but it now seems probable that he will take up the Allahabad command almost as soon as it is vacant.

THERE will be an acting High Court Judgeship, the first for a long time past, vacant for the civilians of the North-West this hot weather, as Mr. Justice Tyrrell intends taking six months' furlough. Mr. Justice Straight also takes three months' privilege leave from May. Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, at present officiating in the Legislative Council, will fill the temporary vacancy caused by Mr. Tyrrell taking leave.

MR. STODDON is gazetted to officiate as a Judge of the Punjab Chief Court during the absence of Mr. Frizelle on furlough.

SIR EDWARD BUCK, Secretary to the Government of India in the Revenue and Agricultural Department has returned to Calcutta. The results of his visits to Gwalior, Berar and Coorg, where he conferred with the local authorities as to the operations requisite for the survey and settlement of those territories will not be officially published for some weeks. In each case the authorities have accepted the system carried out in the Central Provinces by Mr. Fuller, under which the major part of the work will be effected by local establishments instead of by imported agency.

SIR JOHN EDGAR, Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, takes six months' leave from the 1st May. Mr. Macaulay, on return from furlough, will presumably act for him, being next in seniority in the Secretariat.

MR. H. F. MOULE succeeds to the Lucknow Commissionership when Mr. W. E. Neale moves up from the Oudh Division to Agra.

As Mr. Neale, the present Commissioner of Lucknow, cannot relieve Mr. Cadell at Agra for another two months, Mr. J. H. Twigg, Collector of Ghazipur, takes over the Agra Division in the interval, and at the end of that time goes on to Jhansi. Mr. Wells, by this arrangement, becomes again officiating Collector of Ghazipur.

MR. R. T. HOBART, C.S., Inspector-General of Police, N.-W. P., now on furlough, has sent in his papers to retire from the service.

MR. H. A. ACWORTH, Collector of Bombay, is gazetted to succeed Mr. Ollivant as Municipal Commissioner of that city, when the latter takes up the post of Political Agent in Kathiawar.

THE Bishop of Calcutta was to start on a tour of visitation on Feb. 13th to the Central Provinces. After his return to Calcutta he makes a second tour through Behar, which will occupy the greater part of April.

GENERAL STRACHEY was to remain in Calcutta till the end of February, making short excursions over the East Indian Railway from time to time. He will take a more or less circuitous route back to Bombay, according to the time at his disposal, and will sail for England about the middle of March.

H.E. LORD REAY has been unable, through indisposition, to keep any of his public engagements during the past week.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS has received with favour a petition from the inhabitants of Masulipatam, praying that the Nizam's State Railway or the Bellary Kistna State Railway be extended to the port of Masulipatam.

THE Bombay Fine Arts Exhibition was opened on February 12th by Sir Charles Sargent, Chief Justice, in the absence of his Excellency the Governor.

ANOTHER piece of the Bengal Nagpur Railway is now complete, the section from Bilaspur to Raigarh having been opened for goods traffic on February 10th.

SERIOUS dacoities are reported from the Bijour and Moradabad Districts.

PEARL catches continue very plentiful at the Tuticorin fisheries, but prices remain very low.

MR. VERNON's cricket team has defeated Lucknow by 123 runs, after being 46 behind on the first innings.

THE number of the Madras infantry regiments which are to be localised in Burma will be ten. They will be solely officered from the Madras Staff Corps, but recruited from Upper India.

NOTES.

It is quite consistent with a spirit of the most profound loyalty to express editorial delight at the first line of the Times Calcutta correspondent's telegram, which we reproduce elsewhere. "Prince Albert Victor's movements have not attracted much attention during the past week." This means some relief from the monotonous reading of this princely tour through columns of close type week after week since H.R.H. set foot on Indian soil. And for this relief much thanks.

CALCUTTA is "at it again." It having been whispered in official circles—the wish being possibly father to the thought—that the Viceroy and Council would start for Simla this year a month earlier than usual, the dwellers in the Ditch at once industriously spread abroad a report that Simla had been invaded by diphtheria, and that the rate of mortality there, especially amongst children (this was to alarm the mothers in the plains preparing to take their darlings to the hills), was positively alarming. For a day or two there was consternation in Chouringhee, and gloom and depression amounting almost to despair.

BUT a friend—that friend to all officials in need—the Pioneer, came rushing to the rescue, and thus ministered comfort and confidence to the terrified :—

"Some disquieting rumours have reached the plains during the past fortnight regarding the extreme unhealthiness of Simla. An epidemic of diphtheria was said to have broken out, with numerous deaths from this particularly terrifying disease; measles were reported to be still prevalent; and, of course, influenza had seized upon all who were suffering from ordinary colds. The residents themselves knew nothing of these alarming stories until telegrams and letters began to be received; one of the recipients being the senior Civil Surgeon himself, in whose family diphtheria was supposed to have claimed two victims. The Allahabad paper is glad to be able to state that Simla is at the present moment as healthy as usual at this season of the year. There has been no fresh case of measles for over six weeks, the cold weather having put a stop to the epidemic, which began in June. The type of disease was exceptionally mild, and though between 250 and 300 Europeans, adults and children, were attacked, only two deaths occurred—both of infants under twelve months of age, who died from lung affections following the measles. In the last four years only two genuine cases of diphtheria have occurred in Simla, and the improved sanitary arrangements make any epidemic outbreak extremely unlikely. Coughs and colds there are naturally among residents on the Himalayas in the winter months; but the influenza wave has not reached India, and no alarm need be felt about the latest bacillus which medical experts in Europe claim to have discovered."

It would appear from the following that the Congress delegates have frugal minds regarding the payment of postage on their Petitions of Rights to Her Majesty and Parliament :—"On the 3rd instant the Director-General of the Post Office of India wrote to Mr. Allan O. Hume, C.B., general secretary of the Indian National Congress, Bombay :—'In acknowledging receipt of your letter, dated Jan. 10th, 1890, I have the honour to thank you for bringing the matter to my notice. Petitions to Her Majesty and to Parliament are exempt from postage by Sections 40 and 41 of 3 and 4 Vic., Cap. 96, but there has been some doubt whether this is applicable to India, and hitherto no such exemption has ever been claimed or allowed. The subject has now been under consideration, and as I am satisfied that the provisions of the Statute are applicable to India, I have issued the necessary instructions in the matter.'"

THE Bombay Gazette says :—"Indian Civilians who devote themselves to mastering the Russian language by a more or less prolonged stay in the dominions of the White Czar are not treated by their paymasters with excessive liberality. It is true that the period spent in Russia is allowed to count as Indian duty, but it is not accompanied by Indian pay, as is the case with military officers. Even "military civilians" receive two-thirds of the amount of their last salary in India. The poor Civilian, pure and simple, has to be content merely with furlough pay. Why such a distinction should be drawn between "military" civilians and "civil" civilians is one of those things that no ordinary mortal who lives beyond the Simla sphere of influence can understand. It will be a misfortune if the effect of this characteristic specimen of bureaucratic eccentricity and stinginess is to prevent some who would otherwise be disposed to study Russian from doing so. We fear that such a result is not altogether beyond the bounds of probability. Among the entire body of Crown servants there are none more public spirited and patriotic than the members of the Indian Civil Service, but it is not every married civilian who can afford to keep his family at home and himself in Russia for the good of the State on furlough allowances paid in a sadly depreciated currency.

SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN and Captain Patten, with one or two other adventurous persons, have obtained a concession from the Burmese Government of four square miles of petroleum country in Upper Burma. The oil boss, it seems, is destined to elbow the ruby king out of the market. If Captain Patten does as well with petroleum as he has done with rubies, Sir Lepel Griffin may account himself lucky. The motive power of the future promises to be electricity generated by petroleum, which will supersede coal and steam. In six months' time there will probably be a boom in Burmese petroleum shares on the Stock Exchange.

PROBABLY it would tax the ordinary reader not a little, says the Pioneer, to have to say how many columns there are now operating in the Chin-Lushai country and what each of them is about—so far has the process of subdivision been carried since the plan of campaign was laid down. To take the nearest first, on the Chittagong side, General Tregear's force is divided into two parts—the Haka column, which is pushing on to join the force coming from the Burma frontier; and the Northern column, which has gone off almost at right angles to the main line of advance against Lienpunga and the Changri Valley raiders. Co-operating with this latter force there is the Cachar column of frontier police with headquarters at Changsil Bazaar. On the Chin side there is the headquarters' force at and around Fort White in the north, with the Yokwa or Southern Column, which is directing its efforts to effect a junction with the Lushai force. South of this again a third column, composed entirely of the Chin Levy which was raised a year ago under the orders of the Government of India, is operating independently in the country of the Chinboks. Its operations lie in an unknown tract among an unknown people, the wildest and most primitive that are to be found in all the tracts between Burma and the Chittagong plain. Only in Central Africa, and hardly even there after Stanley's journey, would it be possible to find men so ignorant of the resources of civilisation as to hover around within thirty yards of regular troops with their bows, having no conception of any missile that would inflict damage at distances longer than the flight of an arrow, and then, when they found by experience their mistake, collecting in groups at 200 or 300 yards, never imagining that that could be within the zone of effective fire. It seems difficult to realise officers who were here in our midst yesterday, engaged to-day in conducting such an extraordinary warfare; but, after all, to the officer familiar with Defoe and stories of savages and cannibals from boyhood, these things may not strike with their full sense of strangeness. What must they seem to the Punjabi sepoy, who never knew of any life different to that round his own homestead till Fate suddenly shipped him off to the Chin Hills?

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 2.

Prince Albert Victor's movements have not attracted much attention during the past week, his visits to Oodeypore and Jodhpore, although marked by the usual State receptions and banquets, being chiefly devoted to sport. The tour in Rajpootana is now concluded. His Royal Highness arrived at Bareilly on Thursday morning, whence he proceeded the same day to Mundia Ghat on the Nepal borders. Major Durand, the Resident in Nepal, accompanied him. Maharajah Beer Shumshere and other high officers met the party at the frontier. About a week will be spent shooting in the jungles at the foot of the hills, after which the Prince will go via Baroda to Bombay.

Last Sunday the Duke and Duchess of Connaught left Poonah, which has been their headquarters since the Duke assumed the command of the Bombay army. Nearly the whole of the population turned out to see them off, and the station was profusely decorated with flowers and arches bearing appropriate inscriptions. During their stay in the Western Presidency they have been most popular with all classes, and there can be no doubt of the sincerity of the regret felt at their departure.

At the annual meeting of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on Friday the retiring president, Sir Alexander Wilson, delivered an address in which he touched on several subjects of interest and importance. After alluding to the unsuccessful efforts of the Chamber to induce the Government to curtail the number of Native holidays, with the compulsory stoppage of business which they involve, he went on to the railway question, and stated that a committee of the Chamber had recently had a conference with General Strachey, chairman of the East Indian Railway, who was now visiting Calcutta. Several matters were discussed at that conference, such as the question of freights generally, and especially on coals and the inability of the East Indian Railway to meet more largely the growing wants of this side of India. This inability was due, according to General Strachey, not to any defects in the existing line, but to the company's want of power to raise money on debentures or otherwise to construct feeder lines and develop the system. This power was taken from them when the Government took over the line, and the company was thereby rendered entirely dependent upon the Government for any outlay that could not be met from revenue. General Strachey also informed the committee that it was proposed to form a local Board of Directors of the East Indian Railway to assist the Board at home.

Sir A. Wilson then proceeded to speak of the Calcutta Port Bill, and took credit to the Chamber and its representative in the provincial Legislature for the strenuous exertions by which they had procured the removal of a most unjust and oppressive provision from that Bill. Turning next to the Indian Factories Bill now pending before the Supreme Council, he said there was nothing to call for any change in the law, whether in regard to the arbitrary enactment of monthly holidays or raising the age of the children employed. The conditions of life and of factory labour in India, the social surroundings of the people, and their requirements in the way of food and rest, were all so radically different from anything obtaining in Europe that it was impossible to assimilate the laws relating to working people to those of Western countries, and he believed that employers and employed were united in opposing any change. He concluded his address by alluding to the important need of the establishment in India of an Imperial system of weights and measures.

In the course of the discussion which followed, Mr. Turner, speaking of the struggle over the Port Bill, suggested that the Chamber and its legal advisers should closely scrutinise all legislation dealing with commercial interests, and especially Bills initiated by the Bengal Government, because law-making in the Provincial Council appeared to be the result of executive inconvenience, and if they were to judge by the nature and tenor of several recent acts of that Council, they must conclude that the Provincial Government did not deem it necessary or convenient for Her Majesty's subjects to enjoy here that protection of the Courts of Justice which at home was never appealed to in vain. This was a serious menace to public liberties. Another reason for close scrutiny was that, while Bills before the Imperial Council were always submitted to the High Court Judges for consideration, those of the Provincial Council were free from such criticism.

The charge of hasty and ill-considered action in matters affecting private interests which Sir A. Wilson and Mr. Turner brought against the Bengal Government is further illustrated by a letter which Mr. Mackay, president-elect of the Chamber of Commerce, has addressed to the local newspapers. During the discussion in the Supreme Council on a measure amending the Inland Steamships Act, certain proposals by the Bengal Government were thrown out, but with a prospect of being again brought forward next year. Their aim was to insist upon the survey by Government surveyors of private steam launches not carrying passengers for hire. As Mr. Mackay points out, the Government might with equal reason claim the right to survey private carriages. Apparently, the sole object sought was that of deriving increased revenue from the fees to be levied by the Government surveyor.

The telegraphic summaries hitherto received of Lord Cross's Councils Bills are too brief and vague to give more than a general idea of its nature. The Anglo-Indian public and Press seem disposed to approve the Bill so far as these summaries enable them to judge of it, and, indeed, it is generally recognised that an increase in the number of non-official members of Councils is highly desirable, and that the time has come when a limited right of interpellation may be granted with safety. Some of the more moderate Native papers take similar views. Thus, the Reiss and Rayyet describes it as a substantial measure of progress, although it would have preferred that the right of electing representatives to Councils should have been conferred on well recognised public bodies, such as the Chambers of Commerce and the British Indian Association. This, it thinks, would be better than nomination, which, it says, has generally been a conspicuous failure. At the same time it admits that its experience of municipalities and local boards has considerably modified its views on the subject of election. The Congress organs, it need hardly be said, are altogether dissatisfied with the Bill.

It is stated that a movement is on foot among the Mahomedans of the Punjab and the North-West Provinces for the purpose of presenting a petition to Parliament against Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill, on the ground that it would have the effect of entirely swamping their community and throwing everything into the hands of the Hindoos. It may also be mentioned that Sir Madhava Rao, the only Native statesman of repute who took part in the Congress, has addressed a letter to a Madras newspaper, in which he says :—

"I do not care much about the non-concession of popular election, because careful observation and experience convince me that popular election at present would have insured the failure of the extended Councils, whereas nomination would probably be their success."

The meeting of the Senate of Bombay University, which was called to consider the action of the Government in not sending an answer to the Bill forwarded to it sixteen months ago, took place on Friday. On the previous day the Government at last broke silence by informing the University authorities that, after careful consideration, it had arrived at the conclusion that the Bill would not enhance the usefulness or efficiency of the University. At the meeting the resolution proposed by the Hon. Mr. Latham, and seconded by Mr. Justice Birdwood, requesting the Governor in Council to forward to the Supreme Government for favourable consideration the project of an Act to consolidate and amend the Acts relating to the University, which was sent to Lord Reay on October 16th, 1888, was passed with only two dissentient voices. Several leading members of the University spoke, and all insisted that the Government should forward the Bill to the Viceroy. The local Press supports the Senate.

An epidemic, which appears to be similar to or identical with influenza, has appeared in Bombay, and is spreading rapidly. Large numbers of children are unable to attend school, and work at some of the mills is almost stopped from the illness of the employés.

The Sikkim negotiations are not yet complete. The Chinese Amban remains at Darjeeling, but it is hoped that he may visit Calcutta soon.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 2.

There is a report from Afghanistan that the Ameer after going to Herat will visit Chaman to see the railway works.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

RANGOON, MARCH 2.

The latest telegrams from Haka state that Brigadier-General Symons has not yet opened up communications with Colonel Tregear. A reconnoissance, led by Brigadier-General Symons, has reached the village of Hmulipi, which is believed to be within eighteen or twenty miles of Colonel Tregear's camp on the river Koladain. A detachment of twenty-five of the King's Own Borderers and twenty-five Goorkhas, commanded by Captain Rundle, has been despatched from Haka with instructions to try to reach Colonel Tregear's force. They take ten days' rations with them.

It has been decided to establish a permanent military post at Haka. The garrison will consist of 400 Goorkhas. Supplies for eight months are being stored. Until roads have been constructed the post will practically be cut off for months from all communication with the plains.

Reconnoissances are being made in various directions from Haka. No serious attempt to reach the Tashon capital has yet been made. The Haka chiefs have given up several captives.

Although the health of the troops at Haka has improved, there is no marked improvement yet in the sanitary condition of the rest of the force. Lieutenants Denne and Kellie, of the 2nd Madras Native Infantry, have been invalided. Five officers are in hospital at Kan, and 150 Punjab coolies have been sent back by the medical officers as unfit for further work. On the 21st of February Brigadier-General Symons reported that there was much sickness at Yomwa.

The Tonhon column has effected little towards the pacification of the district in which it has been operating. Although the Kachyens have been sharply punished they are still defiant, and resist vigorously.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 2.

From the Chin-Lushai expedition comes the satisfactory news that advance parties of the Burma and Chittagong columns have met at a point about midway between the two forces. Brigadier-General Symons returned yesterday from a reconnoissance to within eight miles of the Tashon Ywama. There was no opposition. The distance of that place from Haka is about thirty-two miles.

On Sunday a reconnoitring party under Lieutenant Brownrigg captured a strong stockade after a fight, in which Lieutenant Brownrigg and a Native officer were wounded. The Lushais lost from ten to fifteen men.

BURMA.

RANGOON, MARCH 2.

There is a considerable renewal of dacoity in various districts. A gang of sixty dacoits from Wuntho has burned the large village of Kangyi, which is in British territory. The dacoits, pursued by the military police, took refuge in Wuntho. The police then crossed the frontier. In the skirmishes which ensued seven dacoits were killed and two Sepoys wounded.

The mountainous district between Pyimaya on the east and Taungdwingye on the west is much disturbed. Parties of mounted infantry are in pursuit, and Mr. Porter, Deputy Commissioner of Pyinmana, has been relieved of his other duties and placed on special duty to hunt down the bands of dacoits. Pagan and Myingyan are also troubled.

In the Kyankse district the dacoits are again troublesome, and a large band is reported on the western bank of the Irawaddy opposite Prome. This is believed to be the same band which burned Sandoway.

Sir C. Crosthwaite has proceeded to the Ruby mines, where he will meet Sir Lepel Griffin.

THE INDIAN EXCISE.

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY NIGHT.

A long despatch from the Viceroy to the Secretary of State has been published. It is dated the 4th ult., and is a reply to the debate and resolution of April last on the Excise question.

The statements of Mr. Smith and Lord Cross are shown to be inaccurate and misleading, and the Government complains of being condemned on wrong evidence. A Bill was introduced in Council on Friday, proposing to tax imported beer similar to that brewed in India.

THE SIKKIM QUESTION.

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY NIGHT.

Probably no garrison in Sikkim will be required after the settlement with China is ratified. It is believed that it will entirely exclude Thibetan influence.

SHORT TIME IN THE BOMBAY MILLS.

CALCUTTA, WEDNESDAY.

The Bombay Millowners' Association proposes to stop working eight days each month.

Three or four mills are likely to stop altogether for the present.

The proposal to work short time is due to over-production, the China market being found to be glutted.

THE CHINA EXPEDITION.

HAKA, FEB. 23.

A small force was despatched from here this morning with orders to endeavour to join the northern column of the Chin-Lushai expedition. Only the Tashin Chins now intervene, and when these submit the main object of the operations will be accomplished, and Bengal and Burma will be joined by road.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE MASSES IN INDIA.

(Madras Mail.)

The Indian peasantry has changed in no characteristic features from what it was in the early periods of the Aryan age. In those days the tillage of the soil went on in the presence of contending armies. It was understood that the cultivators were not to be molested by either party, and thus they were at liberty to cultivate relations of benevolent neutrality, that is, of indifference with regard to both. Nowhere in their history is it recorded that they ever spontaneously took up sword and buckler in defence of their immediate lord, or more distant overlord. They could fight when forced to do so, but it had to be in a cause that concerned themselves, without reference to any quarrel that might be going on between their own chief and those of any outsider. In what respect have they changed since those remote times? So long as they are not harassed or plundered in the cultivation of their lilliputian farms, they little care as to the form of Government under which they lead their laborious existence. The salt duty affects them very slightly. If the price of that universal condiment be low they may indulge in its use a little more freely; if it be high, they deny themselves, or pay their money with grumbling. It is simply a bazaar commodity, and is liable to fluctuations like any other form of seasoning. They buy it from day to day with the other materials of their simple meal, and scarcely know if the pinch they receive be a little greater or a little less than usual. They do not trouble themselves to inquire into the causes of the variation of its amount. Cheap salt means health for their children and cattle, and a larger preservation of fish, but they never pause to ask if it would be more plentiful under Home Rule. We may rest assured that they know nothing whatever as to the constitution of the Legislature. Possibly in a luminous moment of imagination they might demand the abolition of all legislation, and elect to live for ever under the laws to which they have become accustomed, and the incidence of which they do not feel. Can any man in the least degree acquainted with the character of the Indian population suppose that their happiness would be promoted by having to turn out as Volunteers, to be drilled at certain hours, and taken from their habitual occupations without sufficient compensation for the annoyance? No doubt they would rejoice to be entrusted with a rifle, as a means of warring upon wild beasts, and of protecting their crops from the ravages of wild boars, and their kids and children from the ferocity of wolves and occasional tigers. Beyond that their martial ardour does not go. What is it to them that the Russians frown upon the Afghans, or that the French smile upon the Shans? Would the price of labour be enhanced, would the rupee bring home more articles from the bazaar, would the monsoon be more regular, or the soil better manured, if the Cossack crossed the Hindu Kush, or the French were the first to open communications with South Western China? If that be not the case, let the Sirkar settle its own affairs in its own way, and either fight the enemy, or accept his terms of peace.

It is a good sign that many members of the Congress are beginning to realise that the Congress may prove a real blessing to the masses were it to leave political and military questions outside its purview, and apply itself to the consideration of moral and social reforms. There is much to be done to raise and purify the moral tone of the Indian peoples. The betrothal and marriage of children, for instance, is an abuse that cries aloud for correction. The inhuman treatment of widows is likewise a disgrace to any civilised race. Other excesses and shortcomings, not sanctioned or contemplated in the sacred books of either Hindus or Mohammedans, should be taken seriously in hand. The educated Natives of India, and above all the Bengalees, enjoy a high reputation throughout Europe for the progress they have made in Western science and literature, but it must not be supposed that these terrible blemishes are cordoned or forgotten. It is matter for universal wonderment that any nation so intellectually advanced should be so backward in its morals. History, no doubt, refers us to the examples of ancient Greece and Rome for examples of the highest mental triumphs combined with debasing superstitions and moral degradation, but those instances should serve as warnings, and not as a state of things to be imitated. Our English-speaking Indian fellow-subjects cannot be unmindful of their own backslidings even from the condition of their early Aryan ancestors, and should be anxious to show themselves worthy contemporaries of Europeans and Americans at the close of the nineteenth century of the Christian era. It is not tall talk about politics that is needed, but a solid and practical reformation of bad ancestral usages.

MILITARY LANGUAGE EXAMINATIONS.

(Times of India.)

A month or two back we discussed the whole system of language examination for military officers at some length, and now that the subject has "cropped up" again we will take the opportunity of mentioning some of the defects in the manner of conducting the examinations in this Presidency. In Bengal the Secretary to the Board of Examiners is invariably a European officer, who has attained considerable proficiency in oriental languages, and a good knowledge of their literature. In Madras the examiner in Hindustani is also an officer selected for his knowledge of the language, and he himself corrects the papers of the candidates, and decides on their fitness or otherwise to pass the examination. But in Bombay, of late years, the tendency has been to appoint officers of long and meritorious service to the Examination Committee, without paying any regard to their linguistic qualifications. The members of the Committee almost invariably hold other appointments, the duties of which do not allow them to give as much time as they could wish to the important duty of examining candidates in the native languages. No doubt these officers, from the very fact of their having served for many years in India, are generally good judges of what may be expected of the candidates colloquially. But for the correction of the exercises for the Higher Standard, and for nearly the whole of the higher examinations, they must of necessity depend on the verdict of the natives attached to the Board as assistants. The latter are doubtless well versed in several Eastern tongues, but their knowledge of English leaves much to be desired, and it is certain that young officers presenting themselves for examinations would prefer to have their capabilities judged by a competent European. Some time ago a very senior officer—a well-known linguist—was undergoing examination according to one of the higher tests, and when the president informed him, in the usual formula, that "the Board regretted that his exercises did not come up to the required standard," he asked to be allowed to see his corrected exercises. A junior officer would probably have been refused, but in this case permission was granted. One of the sentences to be translated into the vernacular stood in English as follows:—"From his carriage I judged him to be a gentleman." The Munshis of the board insisted that the word "carriage" meant vehicle, and that the officer had made a mistake in rendering it, as if it had been "bearing." The European members of the Committee having no acquaintance with the language that was the subject of examination the mistake would not, under ordinary circumstances, have been discovered. No Englishman could mistake the meaning of the above sentence, but it is easy to understand that a native, even if he possessed a very fair knowledge of English, might do so. To take up another point we would ask why officers serving in large stations, where there are plenty of good Munshis, should find it necessary to study Hindustani in Bombay, or to come to Bombay for the examination? Is the language so difficult that only the Bombay Munshis are competent to teach an officer sufficient for him to be able to pass the Higher Standard? Even if the officer comes to Bombay only a few days before the examination, it is considered necessary to engage one of the two or three best known Bombay Munshis to give him a finishing touch, and in this case the officer, if he passes, has to pay backshish to both the Munshi with whom he has been reading up-country, and the man who gives him a few lessons in Bombay. If an officer working for the Higher Standard in a large up-country station where there are plenty of Munshis is asked why he puts himself to the expense of going to Bombay for the examination when he might be examined at the station where he is serving, he will probably reply, "I have a much better chance of passing if I go to Bombay; in any case, the papers will have to go there, and the Board scarcely ever passes candidates who go in for the examination up-country." And so he goes to Bombay, and has to pay his expenses there and back, and backshish on passing to both Munshis.

THE NORTHERN SHAN STATES.

(Rangoon Times.)

An interesting report by Lieutenant H. Daly, Political officer, on special duty, of the Northern Shan States, has recently been published at the Government Press. It contains a map of the States administered under Lieutenant Daly's superintendence, and the various routes over which he travelled, with descriptions of the roads, camping places, &c. Some of the hills are 6,000 feet high, whilst nearly all the principal towns or villages are from 2,000 to 5,000 feet. The appendices to the report will be of great value to future superintendents of the Northern Shan States, although every one must hope that the day will be distant for Lieutenant Daly's departure. He seemed to be just the man for the work. Popular with chiefs and people, active, as his journeys over these hill passes show, and acquainted with the Shan dialects and peculiarities, his loss to the government, when in the nature of things he leaves his post, will be great. We should like to see a couple of European assistants driven to this post, so that youngsters in the Commission may be trained under so efficient an officer, and the continuity in the administration not be interrupted. The post chosen for head-quarters of the Northern Shan States, about 1½ miles to the north of the Lashio bazaar, is doubtless, the best that could have been hit upon, but it has its disadvantages. Water is there in abundance, but it all comes from hill streams which are contaminated in the rains by decayed vegetable and animal matter. In the neighbourhood of the post water was struck near the surface, but the wells dug did not prove satisfactory, and the heavy rainfall filled them with mere surface drainage. The health of the military police, mostly young Punjabis, is not satisfactory. About 25 per cent. of the force was non-effective in the rains, suffering from fever, ague, and bowel complaints. As these men come from an exceedingly dry climate, it is scarcely surprising that their transfer to an exceedingly moist one would have rendered them liable to ague and fever. The sickness has probably been aggravated by the want of Hospital comforts, and by the character of the rations issued to the men. Getting only ½ lb. ration of atta, they were living almost entirely on rice, a strange and unsuitable diet for Punjabis. The ghee sent for their use was said to have been "of very bad quality." It is to be hoped the establishment of a farm at Lashio will enable the Punjabis to get good fresh ghee on the spot, and a more liberal allowance of wheat, whilst in the present dry season steps will, no doubt, be taken to prevent the contamination of the wells with surface drainage. With a little care and attention, we may be certain the health of the Military police in the Northern Shan States will soon show considerable improvement. There are hot springs near Lashio, the water of which has been recently subjected to chemical analysis, and was found to contain sulphates of lime and magnesia with traces of potash. It is believed that internally and externally the water would be highly beneficial—externally in cases of chronic rheumatism and gout, and that internally it would affect beneficially a congested liver. With improved communications and good wells, Lashio may yet become a fashionable sanitarium for people from Lower Burma, and we hope Lieutenant Daly may live to see the day and continue to occupy the important and responsible post he so worthily fills at present.

SURPLUS GRADUATES IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The number of successful students who pass out into the world every year from our Universities is already so large that many of them cannot find remunerative employment. The majority look to Government service, and, failing this, they mostly drift into the army of vakils and mukhtars, which is already largely overstocked. As Mr. Justice Banerji said, there is no long catalogue of literary and scientific achievements made by the graduates of the Universities. "The truth is that they, for the most part, come from the poorer classes; they have to earn their livelihood; they find very little encouragement for labour in the fields of literature and science in the shape of fellowships and in other shapes in which such labours are elsewhere encouraged, while they find better prospects in other lines." This is doubtless quite true, but will the liberal foundation of scholarships, as the Vice-Chancellor suggests, solve the difficulty finally? It will unquestionably strengthen and improve the defective teaching machinery, and thus reduce the number of failures at the University examinations, but the struggle for existence will become more and more severe as the list of successful graduates grows in volume. We should be only too glad if educational institutions could absorb the surplus M.A.'s and B.A.'s who are practically turned adrift after such examination to earn their livelihood in an overstocked labour market; but there is a limit to the number of preparatory schools and colleges, and it is only in these that they can find employment. The vernacular school-master, the teacher of the masses, is a poorly paid and ill-educated pedagogue; and his work is not of the kind which the English-educated Native could possibly undertake. He will hold his own in any case; for his fees are low, and he is part and parcel of the village community. The foundation of fellowships to provide for the graduates of our universities, cannot be undertaken on a large scale by Government—such funds as are available should be devoted to primary education, to the gradual enlightenment of the people as a body, rather than to increasing the number of highly-educated men who look in vain to the State to provide them with well-paid appointments. The question really narrows itself down to one of public policy—is it better to satisfy the clamorous demands of the small English-speaking classes, or to stretch a helping hand to the millions whose continued ignorance is a reproach to the country? There are at the present moment only some 350,000 of the youth of India studying English; are their claims to override those of the thirteen or fourteen millions who are receiving no instruction at all not even in the simplest elements of reading and writing in the vernacular? We have no desire to see a retrograde policy pursued in connection with higher education; but until it can be made more practical, and until the recipients of it can face the world with something more than book-knowledge, it would be unwise to sacrifice everything to its development. The endowment of our universities with fellowships is unquestionably most desirable, but to call upon the State to do this is scarcely a reasonable request.

BENGAL.

(Feb. 12.)

THE Bengal Government will shortly hold a Conference of the Colonial Emigration Agents to consider certain questions regarding emigration to the Colonies.

SIR JOHN EDGAR, Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, takes six months leave from May 1st. Mr. Macaulay, on return from furlough, will presumably act for him, being next in seniority in the Secretariat.

THE Englishman hears on good authority that no date has yet been fixed for the Viceroy's departure to Simla, and it is unlikely that the move will be made on an earlier date than that of last year.

IT is said to be highly probable that Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, at present officiating in the Legislative Council, will fill the temporary vacancy in the Provincial High Court, caused by the Hon. Mr. Tyrrell taking six months' leave in the spring.

MR. SPENCER'S second balloon ascent at Calcutta on Saturday was most successful. He went up about two miles, and alighted on the top of a house. He took with him an instantaneous photographic apparatus, and is said to have managed to get fine views.

MR. C. J. O'DONNELL has been appointed Census Commissioner for Bengal, and in his hands the destinies of the province are safe. As far as is known at present, the Census of 1891, from inception to completion, will occupy close upon three years, the greatest care being taken to have the most accurate record ever made.

THE fifth annual general meeting of the National Association for supplying Female Medical Aid to the Women of India was held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on February 7th, and was, like its predecessors, a great success. His Excellency the Viceroy presided. A most gratifying feature of the meeting was the large attendance of the Hindoo and Mahomedan aristocracy, which showed commendable interest by the very people whom the Fund was intended to benefit. A great deal of ability and acuteness was shown in the speeches. Although the proceedings were protracted for two hours and a-half, the concluding speakers—his Excellency the Viceroy and the Lieutenant-Governor—were listened to with lively interest. Two ideas were prominent throughout the evening—viz., the unexampled success of the Countess of Dufferin's scheme, and the backwardness of Bengal and Calcutta in spite of the munificence of the Maharaja of Dhurbhangah and other gentlemen. The Hon. Mr. Hutchins made a very earnest appeal for half a lakh of rupees, which are still needed to build the Dufferin Zenana Hospital, and pointed to the liberality and zeal of less important centres which had thrown Bengal completely into the background. Syed Nawab Amir Ali took up this point, and impressed it with a great deal of force, urging Bengal not to let it be said that English ladies had helped her when she was unwilling to help herself. Mr. Behary Ghose followed, and in a speech sparkling with witticisms made a point of the proverbial generosity of the people of India, which merely required to be guided into desirable channels. The Hon. Rao Bahadur K. L. Nulkar, the Mahratta Member of Council, said that he felt confident that in a few years the Native ladies all over India would wonder how they had ever got along without medical advisers as attendants of their own. Sir Stuart Bayley's address was a neat summing up of each of the speaker's remarks, and made grateful mention of Lady Lansdowne's valuable and gracious help as president of the Association. His Excellency the Viceroy tendered a well-deserved tribute to Lady Reay, whose departure from India, he said, would be a loss to the Association, which was only second to that of Lady Dufferin.

MADRAS.

(Feb. 12.)

THE MOHANT OF TRIPATI.—The Bengali, alluding to the Mohant of Tripati's case, remarks:—"It is the old story once again. The Mohant, though a professed ascetic, laid no restrictions upon himself, and though the trustee of the temple he did not hesitate to make away with its funds. If an inquiry were instituted we fear the same revelations would be made in connection with many Hindu temples and their Mohants. The benefactions of past ages are being wasted, dissipated, and abstracted; and yet our countrymen who are so willing to criticise the Government in all cases will not move their little fingers to remedy this state of things, but, on the contrary, will throw obstacles by raising up phantom difficulties in the way of those who are willing to exert themselves in this direction. It is time that some action should be taken to prevent a repetition of the scandal which has been witnessed in Southern India. If there was even the shadow of anything like supervision—if the Mohant felt the smallest degree of responsibility to superior authority—he could not have abstracted the money—it would have been there, and might have been applied to the public benefit. It is time that an inquiry should be ordered with regard to public endowments—not private debottar property—as the basis of any future action which might be taken to protect Hindu religious endowments."

A CALCUTTA paper hears from Hyderabad regarding the late report of a plot to assassinate the Minister, that an investigation has been going on in camera for some time. Numerous witnesses have been examined, whose testimony, it is reported, points to a Native official holding a high position in the Nizam's service, as being at the bottom of the plot. The preliminary investigation was held by a European officer of considerable detective experience, whose report is said to have strongly confirmed the suspicions as to the real culprit; but attempts, our contemporary says, are now being made to screen him, and every influence, official and non-official, is being used for that purpose.

THE recent case of beheading reported from Gulburga is only one out of many occurring in other parts of the Nizam's dominions periodically. Beheading of condemned criminals is an old institution in the country, and the atrocity of the performance is a matter which never concerns His Highness' executive. The horrible details which have been disclosed of the last performance may, however, yet draw the attention of the British Resident to the scandalous practice, and he may arrest its further perpetration. Local opinion condemns the practice with one voice, and hopes are entertained that the Minister may move in the matter without being pressed from outside.

BOMBAY.

(Feb. 14.)

THE committee appointed to assist the Municipality in organising a Horse and Cattle Show on the occasion of the Fête to be held in honour of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor's visit to Bombay next month, met yesterday at the Natural History Society's Rooms in the Fort.

Major J. Humfrey, the Acting Commissioner of Police, presided.

Mr. J. H. Steel, A.V.D., stated that the hon. secretaries had issued two circulars in December last with a view of ascertaining what support might be expected from the independent Chiefs and other large horse owners on this side of India, and that from the answers received to date there appeared to be no doubt that a considerable number of animals might be expected for exhibition.

It was unanimously resolved that the proposed Horse and Cattle Show be held on the occasion of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor's visit to Bombay inasmuch as the promised support appeared to be satisfactory.

The draft prospectus, prepared by the honorary secretaries, was then discussed, and finally adopted.

On Friday afternoon Mr. Henry S. King, M.P., C.I.E., left Bombay for Europe by the mail steamer. At about two P.M. Mr. King, in company of his brother, Mr. Harold R. King, Mr. A. Breul, and Mr. Holland Burn, took lunch at the Yacht Club, where Sir Henry Morland and a few members of the European Civil Service, wished him bon voyage. At 4.30 P.M. Mr. King, accompanied by the three gentlemen, came to the Apollo Bunder, where he was received by Messrs. Shivjee Dhurmajee, Arthur King, G. H. Gell, and the whole staff of the firm of Messrs. H. S. King and Co., of Bombay. The office establishment then decorated Mr. Henry S. King with garlands of flowers and presented him with a bouquet, which compliment he courteously acknowledged. After shaking hands with the party, Mr. King, in company with a few friends, stepped into the police launch, which was specially placed at his disposal, and as the launch moved off the bunder the gentlemen gave three hearty cheers. Colonel S. B. Miles, Resident of Meywar, in Oodeypore, was also a passenger by the same steamer. Pundit Salegram Vyas, Secretary to H.H. the Maharaja of Nathdwar, in Meywar, Mr. Shamjee Crustnavarma Pundit, M.A., barrister-at-law, and Mahadevsingh, the Bombay Agent to H.H. the Maharaja of Nathdwar, were present at the bunder, and accompanied Colonel Miles to the mail steamer to see him off. A large number of Vaishnav Hindoos of Bombay intended to assemble at the bunder to give the Colonel a hearty parting greeting, but it was at the special desire of the Political Resident that the ceremony was dispensed with. The Hon. Mr. George Curzon, M.P., and Viscount Marham, A.D.C. to H. E. Lord Connemara, Governor of Madras, were also passengers by the same steamer.

GREAT FIRE IN THE NATIVE TOWN.

DESTRUCTION OF TEN LAKHS OF PROPERTY.

ON Wednesday evening about a quarter past five o'clock a fire broke out in a six-storied building situated on the Nagdevy Road, belonging to Curreembhoy Allybhoy Barodawallah. The fire originated on the first floor of the house in a room occupied by Borahs, and in a very short space of time the flames spread throughout the whole building. On an alarm being raised, telephonic communication was at once established with the various fire brigade stations, and several of the engines were at work upon the spot by 5.30 P.M. At this time the building in which the fire had originated was completely gutted, and the flames had spread to six of the adjoining buildings in the block. There was at first great difficulty in obtaining a free supply of water, and there being a strong northerly breeze prevailing at the time, the two houses situated upon the opposite side of a narrow lane, owned by Meejee Luddah and one Mooltanee, were quickly in flames. In an incredibly short time the fire also spread across the Gagdevy-road and attacked the premises occupied by merchants from Rana Durrah, consisting of no less than eight buildings. A part of the Borah Masjid, which lies at the back of these buildings, also caught fire. The locality being thickly populated, a great panic seized the inhabitants of the surrounding houses. Filled with terror, hundreds of families hastily removed the furniture and household goods from their dwellings, and the neighbouring streets were blocked by crowds of these persons, the exodus being general for a long distance around the burning buildings and extending to the Crawford Markets. Several European police-officers came promptly upon the spot, foremost amongst them being Superintendent Brewin, who did good service, assisted by a large number of European police-officers. Both they and the members of the Fire Brigade had, however, hard work to get the fire under control. The flames burned furiously amongst the old wooden houses, and great danger presented itself, as portions of masonry were falling with a heavy crash. Serious apprehensions were expressed regarding the fate of some Borah women and children, who were seen by some of the neighbours on the upper stories of the building that first caught fire; the conflagration spread about with such amazing rapidity, and so great was the hold it had acquired upon the burning structures, that, amid the alarm and confusion that prevailed on all sides, the police were not able to ascertain with any precision whether any and what loss of life had really taken place. The flames shot up to an immense height, the sky being brightly illuminated, and dense clouds of smoke were seen to roll across the harbour in the direction of Oorun. An hour after the first outbreak the flames spread with such alarming rapidity that the whole street was threatened, but after great difficulty, the fire was got under control about eight o'clock, when things began to look safer for the neighbourhood. The origin of the fire is not yet known, but there is a rumour that it was caused by the carelessness of a servant in the manipulation of some kerosine oil. The extent of the damage cannot as yet be accurately ascertained, but it is roughly estimated at ten lakhs of rupees, only a small percentage of which is covered by insurance.

THE Civil Service dinner at Allahabad on the February 7th went off with great success. To the regret of the company Sir Auckland Colvin would not be "drawn" for a speech; but Sir Lepel Griffin was induced to respond for the guests, and spoke with his habitual plainness of expression. Sir Auckland Colvin, hearing that many more Civilians would have attended the dinner but for the difficulties of accommodation in the race week, undertook that Government House, Lucknow, would in future be placed at their disposal for the occasion during his term of office.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

DURING the next financial year the re-armament of the field artillery in India with the new breech-loading gun will be completed.

THE purchase of mules in Persia for the transport is proceeding very satisfactorily. The seven or eight hundred required will all be obtained at reasonable prices.

NEW rules are about to be published making Pushtu an obligatory language in the Punjab Frontier Force and other regiments of the Bengal Army—9th, 10th, 11th, 13th, and 19th Bengal Lancers, 15th and 17th Bengal Cavalry, 19th, 20th, 21st, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, and 28th Punjab Infantry—having a Pathan element. Officers admitted to the Staff Corps must qualify within two years from the 1st January, 1890, and those not yet finally admitted within two years from the date of admission or posting.

THE Accountant-General, Military Department, a correspondent writes, would confer a boon on British officers who have to deal with British regimental accounts, if he would but issue a revised edition of the instructions for the payment of British troops serving in India on April 1 next. The publication of such a work would not be expensive, would require but little labour to revise, and would be a help to those who have to use the book, as, owing to the many corrections that have been made since its issue in 1885, it is difficult to determine what holds good.

THE Civil and Military Gazette hears that a representation has been made to Government that Brigadier-Generals actually in command of districts be allowed to take precedence next below the position assigned to a Major-General. According to existing regulations Brigadier-Generals are at the bottom of the first class, which places Major-Generals and Civilians of thirty-one years' standing at the top. Between these two ranks, or between the top and the bottom of the first-class, are a large number of civilians, such as Secretaries, Advocate-Generals, Chief Engineers, Archdeacons, &c. It is contended that Brigadier-Generals Commanding Districts, especially when their headquarters are situated in Presidency towns, should hold a much higher social position than they do at present.

It has been decided to hold three classes of garrison instruction yearly in each Presidency instead of two as now, and that each class shall consist of ten instead of twelve officers, and that the first of the three classes in the Madras Presidency be held at Mandalay instead of at Bangalore, in such years as the Commander-in-Chief, Madras Army, may think necessary. This decision will be subject to a full report being rendered at the end of the first year as to the extra expense incurred by the measure. The classes will be held in the several Presidencies on the following dates:—

Bengal.—1st class, from 8th March to 10th May.

Madras and Bombay.—1st class, from 15th Jan. to 19th March.

All Presidencies.—2nd class, from 1st June to 3rd August; 3rd class, from 15th August to 17th Oct.

THE rate of exchange for the adjustment of financial transactions between the British and Indian Governments for the year 1890-91 has been fixed at 1s. 5d. the rupee.

THE death of Subadar Major Bullea Thappa, Sirdar Bahadur, late of the 4th Gurkhas, occurred on the 22nd January, but the career of this distinguished veteran deserves something more than a formal announcement of his death. Enlisting at the early age of sixteen, he served in the old Nusseeree Battalion from 1837 to 1843, when he voluntarily took his discharge. But his soldier like instincts soon reasserted themselves, for he re-enlisted again a few months afterwards in May, 1844; served with the Nusseeree Battalion in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46; and was present at the battles of Aliwal and Sobraon, for which he received a medal and two clasps. He subsequently served as Subadar-Major of the 4th Gurkhas in the Umbeyla Campaign of 1863, the Hazara Expedition of 1868, and the Lushai Expedition of 1871-72, in all of which he performed right good service and received the Indian medal with three clasps. He also served with the 4th Gurkhas during the first phase of the Afghan War of 1878-79 (medal).

THE change which it is contemplated to make in the Native Army of Madras by which ten battalions of infantry will be localised in Burma, is one which should prove acceptable both to officers and men in the Southern Presidency. At present there are 32 battalions, of which eleven are in Burma, where service has been by no means popular. It is calculated that in the future, when the various frontier operations have been brought to a close and the Bengal troops have been sent back to India, ten native infantry regiments will be always required for garrison work. The cadres of these will be transferred permanently from Madras to Burma, and in process of time the rank and file will consist entirely of men recruited from Upper India. The gradual reduction in the Military Police will set free a number of men of the fighting classes who will no doubt volunteer for what will really become a local army on the further side of the Bay of Bengal. The Sikhs, Punjabis, Gurkhas and Hindustanis, who form the bulk of the Police, have taken kindly to the country, and with the special rates of pay which obtain in Burma they are not likely to refuse the chance of enlistment in regular battalions. The Madras Government have found some difficulty of late years in obtaining good recruits for their 32 regiments, and there can be little doubt that men of an inferior stamp have of necessity had to be taken. But with only 22 battalions to be maintained in the Presidency itself the recruiting ground should be equal to the demands made upon it, and the army as a whole is thus likely to benefit by the change. It will be seen that no reduction in its strength is contemplated, and the officers of the local Staff Corps will not find their promotion blocked. In fact such of them as are fortunate enough to be posted to Burma will command men equal to the best sepoys in the Bengal Army, and service with the ten selected regiments should be much sought after. The military administration of Burma will remain under the direct control of the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, the local establishment being one Major-General and three Brigadier-Generals. With so large an extent of country to be held, extending from Moulmein and Rangoon on the south to Bhamo and Mogoung on the north, the distribution of the garrison into three brigades seems absolutely necessary.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 24.

CROPS IN MADRAS.

MR. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he was aware that, owing to the deficiency of rain in October to December, 1889, in Southern India, the collectors and other revenue officials in the southern districts of the presidency of Madras who were absent on leave from their stations and during the Christmas holidays were, at the end of December last, recalled by the Government of Madras to their respective headquarters to inspect personally and to report at once upon the present state of the crops in their respective districts, and what the outcome of the failure of the rains was likely to be; whether such reports had been received by the Madras Government; and whether the Secretary of State would lay them upon the table.

SIR J. GORST: The statement in the first paragraph is correct as regards eight districts to the south of Madras, in which, up to the last week in December, the rainfall of the north-east monsoon had been deficient. During the last week of December, however, there was good rain over the threatened districts, matters have changed for the better, and prospects are reported generally fair. The detailed reports by the district officers have not yet been received by the Secretary of State.

CHITTAGONG AND ASSAM RAILWAY.

MR. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Secretary of State for India would lay upon the table the despatch received by him from the Government of India in July last recommending the granting of a concession of land, 7,250 miles in extent, to a syndicate of railway promoters as one of the conditions for the construction of a railway from Chittagong to Assam, together with any correspondence thereon; and whether he would state whether the Secretary of State had adopted or rejected the recommendations of the Government of India.

SIR J. GORST: In July last the Secretary of State received a despatch from the Government of India on the subject of the Chittagong-Assam Railway. The contents of this despatch are incorrectly described in the question. The matter is still under the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council.

FEB. 27.

THE FACTORY SYSTEM IN BOMBAY.

In reply to MR. S. SMITH,

SIR J. GORST said: A Bill on the lines stated last Session in Parliamentary Paper 162 was introduced into the Indian Legislature on Jan. 31 last. The hours of labour of adult males in India are as unrestricted as they are in Lancashire. Such a petition may have been received by the Governor-General of India, who would give it every consideration, but it has not been forwarded to the Secretary of State. No child can be employed in Indian factories for more than fifty-four hours a week, and the Secretary of State cannot understand how such a case as that described can have occurred. But if the hon. member will furnish his authority, the Secretary of State will cause inquiry to be made. The Bill for amending the Indian Factory Act in the sense I have indicated is now before the Indian Legislature.

OBITUARY.

—O—

GEN. JOHN LIPTROTT, of the Bengal Infantry, died on the 25th ult., at Southsea, at the age of 77. He entered the Service in 1829, and served throughout the campaign of 1842 in Afghanistan under Gen. Pollock (medal). He also served in the Sutlej campaign of 1846, and was present in the action of Aliwal, his horse being shot (medal).

LIEUT.-COL. JAMES VAN HARTHALS MONTAGU, who died on the 23rd ult. at Lowick Hall, Ulverston, at the age of 68 years, served with the 10th Regiment in the Sutlej campaign in 1846, and was present in the battle of Sobraon, receiving the medal.

LIEUT.-COL. HON. JOHN COLBORNE, Knight of the Medjidie of the 3rd Class, late of Hicks Pasha's Staff, died on the 13th ult. at Cairo; served with the 77th Regiment in the Crimea from January, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol, receiving the medal with clasp and Turkish medal.

MAJOR WILLIAM BAINES MORRIS, 7th Hussars, and Adjutant of the Shropshire Yeomanry, third son of John Grant Morris, of Allerton Priory, Liverpool, died on the 20th ult. from a fall in the hunting field, at the age of 37 years. He obtained his lieutenantcy in 1873, captaincy in 1883, and his majority in 1889, and served with the 19th Hussars in the Egyptian War of 1882, and was present in the action of Kassasin (9th Sept.), and at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, receiving the medal with clasp and Khedive's Star.

MAJOR THOMAS VENABLES, late 83rd and 97th Regiments, died on the 22nd ult., at Ashton, Herts, at the age of 65 years. He served with the 97th Regiment in Bengal in suppressing the Mutiny in 1857-58, and was present in the actions of Nusrutpore, Chanda, Uneerpore, and Sultanpore, siege and capture of Lucknow. He served in the operations in Bundelcund and the Chutterpore territory in 1859, and commanded the Nowgong Field Force in the affair of Suleia, receiving the medal with clasp.

The death is announced of a man whose case excited much interest some four years ago—Nawab Sadik Hassan, husband of the Begum of Bhopal. It will be remembered that Sir Lepel Griffin detected him in treasonable practices, and on his report the Viceroy degraded Nawab from the position of co-ruler of the Bhopal State, and appointed an English Minister to assist the Begum. There has never been any question of the Begum's loyalty, but she felt the blow keenly, and, having strong belief in her husband's innocence, she repeatedly sought to obtain the reversal of the sentence. His death has now put an end to the controversy, and it may be hoped that there will no longer be any friction between the Indian Government and Bhopal.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S ADDRESS

TO THE KARACHI NAVAL VOLUNTEERS ON BOARD THE "MANORA" ON THE 25TH JANUARY, 1890.

"Captain Parker, officers, petty officers, and seamen,—I feel very pleased to meet you to-day. I thank you on behalf of the Government of India for your exertions in getting up your corps to the standard of efficiency in which I find it. I am aware that it has been at no small sacrifice of time and labour, and at great personal inconvenience, you have been able to bring yourselves up to your present condition. It will be a source of satisfaction to the Government to know that they have at this rising port a naval corps of able-bodied men they can rely upon in an emergency. In making the effort you have you do credit to yourselves as Englishmen, and honour to the flag under which you serve.

"I have authority to say that the Government of India will do all you require in supplying you with equipment and other necessities; and when your vessel, the Manora (in which you gave me a pleasant cruise this afternoon), becomes your arsenal, furnished in every way with all you require, I have no doubt you will take greater interest in the work you have so well begun. I may not have the good fortune to see you again, but, if I do, I hope to find you as efficient as you are now, if not more efficient.

"Captain Parker has asked me to connect my name with the Karachi Naval Volunteers, and I shall have much pleasure in associating my name with the brigade, and will consider in what way it can best be done; and if in any way, however small, I can be of service in adding to your welfare I shall be very glad to do so. I wish you every success."

THE ANGLO-INDIAN PASSAGE ASSOCIATION

The honorary secretary of the Anglo-Indian Passage Association writes to the Anglo-Indian Press:—

"Sir,—As from certain letters and articles that have recently appeared in some of the various Indian newspapers a misunderstanding apparently exists regarding the present position of the Anglo-Indian Passage Association, together with its object and prospects, will you kindly allow me, therefore, to endeavour to correct the same through the medium of your columns.

"Though the Association has at present failed in getting a reduction for its members from the leading steamship lines running out here, it does not follow that such a proceeding breaks up the Association. On the contrary, we are not extinguished by any means, nor I trust likely to be. What has taken place has been merely a preliminary skirmish as it were, and its results have not come as a surprise.

"We have made no absurd demands from any of the steamship lines, nor do we expect all sorts of advantages, such as weekly sailings, high rate of speed, luxurious accommodation and food, &c., for very cheap fares. Far from it. I think, I may safely say that any steamer company that enters into negotiations with us will find that our demands are exceedingly moderate and reasonable.

"As I have pointed out before, the main object of the Association is to provide passages for those people of good position, both "in the services" and "out of it" who cannot afford either to go Home themselves, or to send their wives and children, at the existing rates; leaving out the question whether these rates be excessive or otherwise; and it is to these people, as well as the many who are willing to do their neighbours a good turn that we look to chiefly for support.

"Now that the leading steamship lines have refused to negotiate with us, it has been proposed to form a limited liability company and run our own vessels, but as we are still in correspondence with a few outside lines, we have some hope that this extreme course may perhaps be avoided. Experience shows us, however, that our best plan will be first to get together a sufficient capital such as would give some weight to our negotiations, as well as be a guarantee of our stability. So we are now asking all who wish to support us to give us a promise of taking one or more shares of the value of Rs. 100 each, when called upon to do so. The new prospectus now in course of construction will give all details.

"The committee fully realise the gravity of the task before them, and will proceed with the utmost deliberation and caution in every step they take; and as they have now been nearly three years at work in this cheap passage movement some experience of considerable value to them has been gained; and, moreover, they have the advantage of being able to get the advice and aid of some good business men, who have kindly volunteered their services on behalf of the association.

"I am glad to say that already several offers to become shareholders have been received, and, no doubt, once the prospectuses are circulated, we shall have the full support we expect and hope for.

"In conclusion, I beg to state for the information of all interested, that Messrs. William Watson and Co., of Bombay, have severed their connection with us."

HORSES FOR INDIA.

Can we rely on Australia for a supply of horses for cavalry service in India? From the statements of Lieut.-Colonel Carré, R.A., who has been travelling extensively in Australia and New Zealand, it appears that as matters now stand we cannot. The Colonial returns of stock show that there about a million and a half of horses in Australia; but the percentage suitable for light draught is remarkably small, and they are either too heavy or too light for military purposes. The reason of this is said to be the small demand for this class, and it is known that it is easier to buy them in Calcutta than in the land where they are bred. Melbourne is the port from which India at present receives its supply of Australian horses, the trade there being in the hands of a syndicate, whose agents penetrate into Southern Australia and the borders of New South Wales. The climate unfortunately is not favourable. The large landed proprietors possess runs where the pasturage is plentiful in what are termed good seasons, but in the dry portion of the year, or after continued droughts, the mares and their produce are obliged to roam over vast tracts, seeking a precarious existence on the dried-up roots of grass that remain above soil. In Colonel Carré's opinion the Northern Island of New Zealand, from which thoroughbred stock are already exported in large numbers, is the best adapted for horse-breeding of all our Colonial possessions. He suggests that the Indian Government should send officers to New South Wales, Queensland, Tasmania, and New Zealand, to assist these colonies in the breeding of suitable horses as remounts, and so place them in a position to compete with Victoria, which at present holds the monopoly.—Daily News.

ORIENTAL TRANSLATION FUND.

The Committee (Messrs. H. H. Howorth, M.P., T. W. Rhys-Davids, and F. F. Arbuthnot), appointed at the General Meeting held at the Royal Asiatic Society's Rooms on the 4th of December, 1889, met there on the 19th of February, 1890, and passed the following Resolutions:—

1. That the old name of Oriental Translation Fund should be continued as the name of the proposed new Society.

2. That a preliminary list of two or three works in the following languages should be prepared, showing what works should be recommended for immediate and early translation:—Chinese, Sanscrit, Hebrew, Arabic, Persian, Pali, Japanese, Turkish, Armenian, Russian, Thibetan, and Cingalese.

3. That the words to be translated should in the first instance be strictly confined to those of historical value.

4. That, in addition to Annual Subscriptions, it is desirable to start a Reserve Fund of £5,000 to form a basis for the New Society to work upon.

Promises of donations to this Fund can be forwarded to

LONGEVITY OF INDIAN ARMY SURGEONS.

The Indian Army List is an interesting volume to the student of Indian history. Its pension list exhibits a remarkable record of the longevity of Indian Army surgeons, some of whom retired so far back as more than half a century ago, and are still enjoying their annuities from the State. We glean the following facts from the most recently corrected Indian Army List:—

MEDICAL OFFICERS STILL ON PENSION ESTABLISHMENT.

Year of Retirement.	Assistant Surgeons.	Surgeons.	Surgeons-Major.	Seniors S.G. & D.S.G.
1825 to 1830	1	1	—	—
1831 to 1840	4	3	1	—
1841 to 1850	2	8	1	—
1851 to 1860	2	9	10	2
1861 to 1870	1	8	35	18

The first series of these pensioners brings us face to face with centenarians, the others with quite a group at ninety, a still larger at eighty, and over thirty at seventy-five years of age. For this comparatively small list of survivors from the burdens and toils of those earlier periods of Indian official service, what a terrible record there is of noble lives cut short in the prime of youth, usefulness, and promise. The recent death-roll of the Indian Medical Service is a very formidable one, and few would grudge to those who, having safely passed through the trying and eventful experiences of an Indian career, enter upon their well-earned pensions. Among these veterans are names still fresh in the affections of many an Indian medical student, and the mention of a few of them will recall pleasant memories to many minds. Who does not remember with reverence Drs. Mouat, Macrae, Eatwell, Brougham, Baillie, and, to a younger generation, the familiar names of Fayrer, Ewart, Palmer, Macnamara, Partridge, and Charles. These names and a host of others, household words in Calcutta, live not only in the pages of the Army List, but in the hearts and homes of hundreds who remember them with gratitude, affection and respect.—Indian Medical Record.

ANGLO-INDIANS, as well as archaeological students, will be glad to hear that the Afghan inscription obtained by Professor James Darmesteter, of the College de France, throws a considerable light on the history of Candahar. M. Darmesteter has just communicated the last of his notices on the subject to the Academy of Inscriptions. Having dealt on the difficulties of acquiring epigraphical information respecting Afghanistan, M. Darmesteter announced that he received a reproduction of the great Candahar inscription in Persian through the help of the British agent at Quetta and a native. The first part of the inscription dates from 1552, and commemorates the taking of Candahar by Baber, who afterwards became the Grand Mogul. The second part is dated 1558, and resumes the history of Candahar from Baber to the time of the Emperor Akbar.

INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCILS.—Viscount Cross's Bill for the enlargement of the Indian Legislative Councils has been printed. It fixes the minimum number of "additional members" of the Supreme Council at ten, and the maximum at sixteen. The Madras and Bombay Councils are to consist of not less than eight and not more than twenty. The Viceroy in Council may increase the Bengal Council to twenty and that of the North-West to fifteen. He may make rules authorising the discussion of the budget in the Supreme Council, and the asking of questions under certain conditions and restrictions. Similar powers are to be conferred on the Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and North-West Legislatures. No member, however, is to have the power of proposing a resolution or dividing the Council in respect of any financial discussion or official answer.

THE OFFICERING OF THE INDIAN ARMY.—I.

THE Asiatic Quarterly Review—a periodical which merits a wide circulation not only amongst Anglo-Indians, but amongst all who take an interest in Indian questions—has published in its issue for the current quarter a thoughtful, if somewhat lengthy, article on the vexed question of the offcoring of the Indian army. The importance of the question cannot be denied, but it does not seem to have had that attention paid to it by the "authorities" at home that it requires. But, as the writer of the article points out, the importance is not only great, but "growing rapidly in view of the undoubted fact that India is daily becoming more part and parcel of Great Britain's world-wide empire, and that Indian troops are likely to become, probably at at no distant date, a very momentous factor in our military economy.

The scale, therefore, on which British officers should be supplied to Indian troops, and the source and mode of that supply, are therefore matters of the most serious consideration, and the reviewer devotes a considerable space to the ventilation of his opinions upon these urgent points. He pays at the outset of his article only a well-deserved compliment to the soldiery of the Native Army, who, under the leadership of officers possessing their confidence and esteem, will "go anywhere and do anything." But he holds that such leaders must be British officers, and for an excellent reason: "The importance of the British officer to Indian troops is accentuated by the fact, too commonly overlooked, that these troops are not, and obviously cannot be, animated by national feeling, or inspired by the sentiment of patriotism—at all events, of a patriotism legitimately due to us; and that, when duly considered, however good they are, they are essentially mercenaries. The Native soldier, accordingly, in a peculiar degree, looks up to and relies on his British officer. He sees in him the type and impersonation of a superior and conquering people; he believes in his ikbal or prestige; and when his officer is of that stamp, happily not uncommon in the Indian army, which appeals to his affection and awakens his personal devotion, he cheerfully and proudly dies for him." In putting forward this statement, the writer repudiates any intention of saying anything in depreciation of the Native officer, to whom he allows "highly useful and meritorious qualities," and in whose history "instances of bravery" have not been wanting. He draws a picture of him in the "good old sleepy pre-mutiny days which is far from flattering, and he does not say whether there is now much improvement in the subject of the portrait:—

"He was generally little more than a respectable old Sepoy, who, as a reward for a blameless, but often undistinguished, service of some thirty years, was raised from the ranks, and became, at least in name, an officer. But he seldom possessed any of the qualities essential for the due performance of the duties of that rank; except, indeed, personal courage. He was too often indolent and devoid of zeal or intelligence, and having attained to the highest position which was open to him, he too generally abandoned himself to sloth and good living, consumed large quantities of "ghee," and rode a "tattoo" on the line of march, whilst on parade he would "lard the lean earth" with the copious perspiration from his bulky and over-fed form. The Sepoys concealed not their contempt for him; and if he belonged to an inferior caste, as was frequently the case, the Brahmin private was a greater man than he. It goes without saying that such an officer was little better than useless; and, indeed, his inutility was conspicuously proved in the Mutiny—in a manner, it is true, fortunate for us—by the fact that hardly in a single instance did that class furnish to the rebel ranks a leader worthy of the name. Perhaps the sole utility of the institution, and its sole justification, consisted in the fact that the position formed a valuable goal for the ambition of the Sepoy—a powerful incentive to fidelity and good conduct in the ranks, and a cherished reward for blameless mediocrity."

We do not say that this picture is altogether more of a caricature than a portrait, because, in the days referred to, especially in the ordinary line regiments of the Bengal army, old and effete Native officers were by far too numerous. But the writer makes no mention of gallant and able fellows recruited from the warlike peoples of northern India, who were well fitted for the commissioned ranks, and to take their place beside their British leaders. These were to be found rather in the Irregular corps, and the writer evidently is not an admirer of the Irregular system—a system which, however, brought to the front some of the most dashing and brilliant soldiers of whom there is any record in military history. His argument against that system is based on the want of fidelity shown by so many of the Native troopers during the Mutiny. "It was claimed," he says, "for these troops that they were animated by more personal devotion to their three selected British officers than the men of the Regular regiments felt towards their larger number of officers not specially selected; and were more faithful to their salt than these. But, alas, for theory! The stern facts of the Mutiny swiftly brushed away this belief. The once renowned horsemen of Christie, Fisher and Holmes, with others of scarcely inferior fame, scrupled not to stain their trusty blades in the blood of their officers, while local and irregular contingents of every shade, though officered on the Irregular system, joined the standard of revolt."

We do not exactly see how this argument tells in favour of regular corps with a full complement of British officers. Considering how so many of the regular regiments also raised the standard of revolt and murdered their officers—for whom they professed the utmost regard and devotion—the argument might be made to read the other way, and the inference be drawn that if many British officers with a Native corps failed to secure loyalty and fidelity a reduction rather than an increase in the British element was advisable. Not, however, that we hold such an argument. We only mean as a passing remark that it is hardly fair to condemn the old Irregular system with its few British officers because certain corps mutinied when the fact stands that so many regular regiments, with their numerous British officers, did likewise. We do not believe that the question of numerical superiority or inferiority in the supply of British officers had anything whatever to do with the cause of the military revolt of 1857. A better argument against the Irregular system is that which the writer advances further on when he admits that the internal economy and military spirit of the regular regiments had at that time fallen into a condition inferior to that of the Irregulars.

"It should be borne in mind that in those days almost every officer present with a Native regiment of the line was more or less a disappointed and discontented man, while every officer attached to an Irregular regiment was a man flushed and gratified by the éclat and the emoluments of his situation. The Regular officer daily witnessed the departure of his more fortunate comrades to fill offices of honour and emolument; he daily hoped to go and do likewise; and under the influence of such feelings, how could it be expected that he should take much pride or interest in his regimental duties? The Irregular officer, on the other hand, had nothing to sigh for; he was a gratified and successful man; he was in good spirits and good self-esteem; and proud of his men, and of himself as their commander he performed his duties in a spirit far different from that of regimental routine. His men saw his temper and shared it; they perceived his jaunty satisfaction and partook of it, and all went well."

Allowing this, he, however, adds: "But happily that system is now changed," and he proceeds to argue how, in view of present and pending necessities in India, a full complement of British officers is essential to the efficiency of our Native troops—an argument which we shall go on to notice in a subsequent issue.

OVERLAND TO AUSTRALIA.

A ROUTE WHICH IS NOT GEOGRAPHICALLY IMPOSSIBLE.

Considerable surprise was excited among people who had never taken the trouble to look at the map when some thirty years ago Lieutenant Waghorn projected the overland route to India. Such a route had previously been regarded as a geographical impossibility. Perhaps there may be now existing, despite board schools and the fashion for culture, some who think that an overland route to Australia is likewise geographically impossible. True, an unbroken line of railway from London to Melbourne is not likely to be carried out until, at any rate, we have discovered some better means of carrying a railway across the sea than by bridges and tunnels; but, all the same, it is a fact that within a comparatively short period we may be able to accomplish the journey from London to Australia almost entirely by rail, and consequently, with much greater comfort and in far less time than it now involves.

The first step towards this important and attractive end has already been taken by the Government of the Straits Settlements on the initiative of their new Governor, Sir Charles Warren. In an address to the Legislative Council, Sir Charles announced that he intended to ask the sanction of Her Majesty's Government to the construction of a railway across the Island of Singapore to the Johore Straits. The cost of the line is estimated at $600,000. Sir Charles added that he specially brought this matter under notice at the present time because there were strong indications that a railway is likely soon to be commenced in Johore. One cannot help being struck by the enthusiasm with which this announcement was received in the Settlements. The Straits Times points out that a "junction of the Malay Peninsula railways, with those of British India, no longer lies within the domain of remote possibilities. When the Indian railways become connected with the iron road across Asiatic Russia—an event sure to happen in the near future—Singapore will be brought within about a dozen days' journey from London. A prospect like this calls forth glowing ideas of the future awaiting Singapore which only intensify on reflection. The strategic and commercial importance of Singapore would then be more unquestioned than ever. It will distance all competitors and leave its rivals far behind in the race for commercial supremacy in this part of the world."

The question arises what are the prospects of this gigantic scheme which is to place London in direct railway communication with the Land's End of Asia, and is to produce such momentous results? It is well known that Sir Andrew Clarke has already surveyed portions of the Malay Peninsula with the view of constructing a railway from its extreme southern point—the Sultanate of Johore—up to Burma, and thence on to Calcutta. It is, perhaps, not so well known that the Sultan of Johore has promised to give the land for so much of the railway as will lie within his territory; and that the other Sultans would follow his example hardly admits of doubt. Let anyone take a map of the world and trace the route described above. He will start from London, and with the solitary break at the Straits of Dover he would have no difficulty in tracing his way by rail to Bitlis, in the Caspian Sea. Here, of course, the line terminates, but it would not be difficult to carry it along the southern bend of the Caspian through Persian territory, until it met at Askabad, on the Russo-Persian frontier, the Russian railway from Michaelovitch, on the eastern coast of the Caspian Sea, to Bokhara. From Bokhara to the most northerly point of the Indian railway system is a comparatively short distance, especially since progress is being made with the railway to Cabul. Once in India the route continues itself easily to Calcutta, and Calcutta is the starting point of the projected Indo-Burmese-Malayan line.

That, however, is only one of several practicable routes. Sir Edward Watkin has laid before the Government a scheme for an Anglo-Indian railway via the North of Africa. If he can obtain permission to construct the Channel Tunnel, he will be able to supply unbroken railway communication as far as Gibraltar. He does not propose to tunnel the Gibraltar Straits, but to place there a huge broad-beamed vessel, which would transport an entire train to Tangier, and there put it once more on the railway. From Tangier the line would proceed via Algeria and Tripoli to Egypt, where it would connect with the existing Egyptian lines. From Cairo it would be constructed across Syria, possibly taking Jerusalem on its way, to Basra at the mouth of the Euphrates on the Persian Gulf, and thence it would follow the eastern shore of the Gulf until it connected with the Indian railways at Kurrachee. We believe that this would be the shorter route of the two, but it would involve the construction of far more new line than the Central Asiatic route, and, moreover, it would pass through countries which, so far as one can judge, are not so capable of development as the vast and fertile plains of Central Asia.

The reader will now be good enough to take the map again, and start at Singapore. We have described Singapore as the Land's End of Asia. But for the Straits of Malacca and of Sunda that title might be claimed by the island of Java, but we fear the Straits of Malacca are just as impassable by railway now as they were by Dutch ships in the time of the great Van Tromp. Whatever railway scheme is projected from London to the extremity of Asia it must undoubtedly end at Singapore. Singapore, however, is only six days' sail from the Australian mainland, and the Australians are working as hard as their resources will permit to complete the trans-continental line from Adelaide to Port Darwin. The scheme we are considering assumes now an entirely different and immensely more important aspect. We may look forward to the time when, whether we go by Sir Edward Watkin's line or by the trans-Asiatic route, we may go by rail to Melbourne with no breaks in the journey, save those at the Straits of Dover, the Straits of Gibraltar, and the six days' sail from Singapore to Port Darwin. The whole distance, which now takes thirty-six days to cover, will then be traversed in twenty-four, and although the expense would, no doubt, be increased, that can hardly be regarded as a prohibitory factor when so great a saving of time is effected. It is hardly necessary to point out that unless the continents of Europe and Asia bring their railway systems down to Singapore the enormous sums of money the Australians are spending on their trans-continental line will largely be thrown away.

Port Darwin itself is not the objective point of this great enterprise. The real objective point is London, and it may be hoped that the British Government will not be slow to recognise and reciprocate the efforts of Australia to bring about better and quicker means of transit between itself and the mother country. Apart altogether from political and strategic considerations, it should not be forgotten that in the Malay Peninsula, in Burma, and in Siam there lie possibilities of new openings for industry and commerce such as are offered by no other countries in the world. In Malay alone, besides the valuable timber which the railway would bring within reach, it is probable that tin and gold may be discovered, for both are known to exist towards the north and east. Moreover, the greatest good would ensue from the opening up of the country to the tropical planter. All the labour he requires would be immediately obtainable; the Chinese, who are not wanted in Australia or America, would offer themselves in unlimited numbers. They are treated justly in the Settlements, and many of them become very wealthy.

Our best policy in that quarter of the world is to be on friendly terms with the Chinese, for China, too, will be rendered a thousand times more possible as a field for British enterprise by the construction of a line which would pass close to her very gates. The climate is one of the finest known. There are no long droughts, no hurricanes, no epidemics, no famines. From a fiscal point of view the advantages are almost unique. Singapore itself is a free port, and in the Malay Peninsula there are no taxes. One is almost afraid to reckon up all the features of the prospect lest one might be accused of exaggeration. The important point to bear in mind is that the Straits Settlements themselves have taken the initiative, and that all they are asking now is that English capital and labour and commercial enterprise shall follow their example.—New York Herald.

THE DWINDLING RUPEE.

I came to India quite a boy,
My health was good, my life a joy,
No cloud my happiness could mar,
For the rupee was then at par.
In love I fell with Jessie Deane,
And won her for my blushing queen, (Finance was not so brilliant then, Rupees had changed to one-and-ten).
Still on we struggled, she and I,
To lay a little money by,
But then more bitter grew our fate,
Rupees went down to one-and-eight.
Our boy and girl were treasures both,
To send them home we were full loth,
When just to put us in a fix,
Rupees climbed down to one-and-six.
Now we are five—we may be more,
But with rupees at one-and-four,
We've little else to do chez nous,
But wait until they're one-and-two.—Globe.

WHILE the English market has been short of gold, the Indian has been equally badly off for silver. But over a million pounds' worth of silver is now on its way to India from England to meet the demand for money here. The shipments of silver have been averaging £400,000 weekly during the last month.

In Six Volumes. Each Volume complete in itself. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each volume, or £1 1s. the set,

The Parents' Cabinet of Amusement and Instruction.

BY

MARTHA HILL and FRIENDS.

NEW EDITION.

EDITED BY

CONSTANCE HILL.

The School Board Chronicle says :—"It is a library of bright, lively, wholesome reading in short pieces—about twenty separate tales, fables, poems, articles, and sketches to the volume. Now that the work has been so handsomely and happily revised, no school library will be quite what it should be without it."

The Guardian says :—"We hope that the children of the present generation will welcome, as we remember doing, 'The Parents' Cabinet.' So much did we love the book that the sight is a real refreshment."

The Englishwoman's Review says :—"The work will be prized, we believe, by a new circle of readers for its own sake, as well as by those who re-read it to recall the impressions of their childhood."

The Scotsman says :—"All the articles are written in popular language, being well brought within the capacity of those for whom the work has been compiled. . . . Will prove one of the most popular productions of the season for the rising generation."

The Daily News says :—"Each book is complete in itself, in token of which the order is indicated, not by figures, but by stars. . . . Mrs. Hill was the inventor of this convenient method. . . . May be separated without assuming the appearance of odd volumes."

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.
You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm! The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better tomorrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, MARCH 10, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21st Feb.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 19th Feb.; and from Calcutta to the 18th Feb.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council on 21st Feb. Bills amending the Indian Steam Vessels Act and the Central Provinces Civil Courts Act were passed. The Report of the Select Committee on the Charitable Endowments Bill was presented.

THE Commander-in-Chief reached Calcutta on 19th Feb., and according to programme would start the same evening for Assam. But there are many questions in connection with the allotments in the coming Budget which it is desirable that the military members of the Council should settle together, so that Sir Frederick will probably postpone his departure until the end of the week. His Excellency has not quite recovered from the effects of the accident which recently befell him, and is still unable to ride.

THE gift presented to the Punjab University by the Maharaja of Patiala in commemoration of Prince Albert Victor's visit is Rs. 50,000, although this was not mentioned in the address of the Maharaja to the Prince when his Royal Highness was at Patiala.

THE British Agent from the Amir's camp confirms the report of Abdur Rahman's intended visit to Herat. Preparations are now being made for the march.

THE Amir of Kabul has just appointed Colonel Wali Ahmed, son of the late General Amir Ahmed, to be his Agent temporarily with the Government of India. Aziz Ahmed, grandson of the Envoy, had carried on the work of the Agency for the past three months.

GENERAL STRACHEY and Sir A. Rendel have been engaged in a careful examination of the annual estimates of expenditure on the East Indian Railway, with the result that they expect to be able to make a large saving, possibly as much as twenty lakhs.

SIR A. M. RENDEL has left Calcutta for Madras to officially inspect and report on the Madras Harbour Works, in his capacity of Consulting Engineer.

COLONEL POLE-CAREW has retired from the Military Secretaryship to the Commander-in-Chief, and made over charge of his office to his successor, Major Nicholson, R.E., for good and all.

MR. R. T. HOBART's resignation of the Bengal Civil Service has been officially notified, with effect from December 24th.

MR. W. T. CHURCH, Magistrate and Collector of Bareilly, has decided to resign the service, and will leave India in April next.

MR. GAY, Comptroller General, goes on furlough in April. He will be succeeded by Mr. Jacob. Mr. Cox, Accountant-General, Bombay, goes on furlough next month, Mr. R. Logan from Lahore relieving him, and Mr. E. W. Kallner, Deputy Comptroller-General, filling the Punjab vacancy. Mr. Rivett-Carnac, now at Nagpore, takes three months' leave in the hot weather, and Mr. Brereton will officiate for him, Mr. Gamble, C.S., coming to Allahabad in his place.

MR. H. LEE, in the grade of Joint Magistrate, but now officiating as a Collector, is likely to succeed to Sir Henry Harrison as Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation if he cares to accept the appointment.

COLONEL BERESFORD LOVETT, Superintending Engineer of Military Works at Rawalpindi, is granted a year's furlough.

DR. ROBERTSON, Agency Surgeon, Gilgit, who has been engaged for some time in Calcutta in writing a report of his work in Chitral and on the Kafirstan border, has been granted three months' leave to England.

MR. HICKS, Sub-Assistant Conservator of Forests, following up a wounded tigress on foot the other day in Mandla district, was seized by the brute, and badly mauled. He was at first reported to be killed, but in reality is making a good recovery.

THE rule regulating promotion in the Telegraph Department, by which successions to permanent vacancies were gazetted only twice a year, has been abolished. Promotions now will be made from the dates on which vacancies occur, and the Department will be relieved of a vexatious grievance.

THE Sikkim relief will take place at the end of March. One company of the Buffs will be stationed at Gnatong, with two companies of Native Infantry in support.

A LADY DUFFERIN HOSPITAL has just been founded by the Nawab of Tonk.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS will probably make a short tour through Barreilly, Naini Tal, Almora, and Ranikhet on his way to Simla from Assam.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, at a recent meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council severely criticised the communications of the Calcutta correspondent of the Times with regard to the Calcutta Port Trust Bill.

A VERY small proportion of Rs. 65,000 promised last Congress has been subscribed. Of Madras's share, Rs. 6,000, only Rs. 150 has yet been paid.

SIR LEPHEL GRIFFIN has been interviewed in Rangoon regarding the Ruby Mines and the Labour Question.

THE Chinchli Agricultural Horse and Cattle Show was opened on Feb. 14th, and proved very successful.

THE HON. GEORGE CURZON, M.P., who spent some four or five months in Persia, intends publishing his conclusions upon the present political condition of the country, and its importance as a factor in the Central Asian question.

It is said that the Uncovenanted Service will be allowed to commute their pensions into sterling at the rate of one shilling and eightpence.

THE Government of India offices close in Calcutta on the 1st of April, and reopen at Simla on the 2nd.

THE European, D. King, who was charged with murdering a durwan in Calcutta recently, has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

OBITUARY.—MR. H. P. Lawrence, manager, New Oriental Bank, Calcutta.

EIGHTEEN Mahomedans and low-caste Hindus were charged recently before the Magistrate of Dum Dum with an unprovoked assault upon seven soldiers of The Buffs. The latter, who were unarmed, were mobbed by a crowd of Natives, beaten with lathies and pelted with stones within one hundred yards of a police-station. Eight of the prisoners concerned were sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment, and fines of Rs. 15. The attack is believed to have been made owing to the ill-feeling that has existed against soldiers since the Dum Dum murder case was made public.

NOTES.

THE Government of India may, as the Times telegram from Calcutta tells us, have administered a rebuke to Mr. Caine and other ignorant meddlers in the matter of Indian excise, but such gentlemen are not silenced by having facts arrayed against them. They will continue to interfere in questions which they have neither studied in earnest nor honestly sought information about so long as they can get an audience amongst that large body who are "mostly fools"—the British public. The misfortune is that Parliament should ever assist agitators here to attempt the weakening of the hands of the Government in India. If some of the assertions regarding our rule in that country which have been made by the pseudo-philanthropists were treated by the House with silence instead of the Secretary of State calling upon the Viceroy for explanations the mischief would soon be at an end. Now it is increasing, because encouraged.

THE London edition of the New York Herald seems to be anxious to rival the Times in having a correspondent to wire intelligence from India on Sundays also. The Herald's telegram is from Bombay yesterday as follows:—"The arrangements for the departure from India of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught have been completed, and they will embark at Bombay on Thursday next on board the P. and O. Steamship Kaisir-i-Hind. Travelling via Colombo and Singapore they will visit China and Japan, and will cross the Pacific to Vancouver Island. Thence they will take train on the Canadian Pacific Railway for Quebec, where they will probably make a short sojourn, and embark for England on June 12th. Their children will leave here for England on the 17th inst., taking the usual sea route. The Duke last night attended a farewell banquet given in his honour by the Bombay Yacht Club, and in a speech thanking the members for their good wishes, took occasion to refer to the extensive military manœuvres which were carried out under his direction last week. The object of these manœuvres was to test the strength of the defences of Bombay, and the Duke now expressed his regret that the test had shown a very unsatisfactory result, proving conclusively that the existing defences are utterly inadequate for the proper protection of the city."

THE Indian Councils Bill has been read a second time in the Lords, but the Congress agitators have little cause for rejoicing. Viscount Cross's Bill will hardly meet their demands, and Lord Salisbury's remarks will possibly be received with "indignation." But to all who know India, who have lived in the country, who have a fair acquaintance with the condition and character of its varied peoples, will strongly endorse his Lordship's opinion that the elective principle—government by representation—is not an Eastern idea, and does not fit Eastern traditions or Eastern minds.

HIS words are words of warning, but of wisdom too:—"Representative government answers admirably so long as all those represented desire much the same thing and have interests tolerably analogous, but it is put to a terrible strain when the represented community is divided into two portions, of which one portion is bitterly hostile to the other. We know how the Mahomedan and Hindoo population stand face to face with each other; in representative government we do not know how they would view each other, but we know, at all events, that one of the heaviest duties and severest responsibilities of the Government of India is to prevent the outbreak of the difficulties which are caused by the profound differences between those two communities—differences in race, traditions, history, and creed. . . . You must not drift into an elective government of India."

THE following is from the Pioneer:—"Mr. Eardley Norton has been giving some good people at Bangalore a very explicit exposition of the loaves and fishes theory of the Congress, which Congressionists are usually eager to disavow. 'The Government,' said Mr. Norton, 'gave the people liberal education, made them fit to do things that were required of them, and when they came up to the standard the Government closed the doors of advancement. What, then, was the good of higher education? That is to say, that no Government should foster education unless it is prepared to find posts for all the educated. But even if we admit the validity of this somewhat extraordinary principle it would be interesting to know how it is to be given effect to, even supposing all the Congress demands granted. The Government of India closes the door of only a few hundred posts; but supposing they were thrown open, where will be room for the thousands of students who now leave the Indian colleges annually? Mr. Norton, of course, and a few others would get seats on the extended Councils; if political prudence were thrown to the winds a few Natives would get posts now reserved to Europeans; and, finally, everybody would have a vote; but does Mr. Norton think this would satisfy the thousands who would still be hungry, and whom he now says have a right to have their hunger appeased?'"

India is the title of a newspaper issued by the "Indian Political Agency," of which Mr. Wm. Digby, C.I.E., has guidance and control. In the second issue of the paper there is a poem of considerable length, entitled "A Welcome to Mr. Bradlaugh. The deplorable condition of the country to Indian eyes." In this poem, to which special attention is called in an editorial note, Mr. Bradlaugh is described as an incarnation of Buddha, and also as one "who dost not even fear God in treading the path of justice," but the loyalty and truthfulness of the production may be judged from the following picture of the Natives of India under British rule:—

How can subjects prosper where the laws and their administrators are so peculiar?

Only those who are kith and kin of the rulers,
Or those who serve them assiduously with servility,
Obtain happiness, reputation, advancement, and their selfish ends;

Other people are generally surrounded with troubles.
Should (these latter) desire to prosecute any enterprise, great or small, either with their own or with borrowed capital,
They are not allowed to carry it out without an unreasonable burden of taxation;

Those who pass many years in the acquisition of learning and skill

Get no suitable employment without (special) recommendations.

Those who enter the army for a living are not properly treated, because they are not "white."

The distinction of black and white is everywhere so predominant

That the word "Native" is a term of reproach.

The "whites" sometimes escape punishment, even for murder;

But the "blacks" are insulted if they merely carry a stick.

The rulers are solicitous for the comfort of the "whites,"
And a hundred anxieties oppress the "blacks" when they speak of their discomforts.

The name of the poet is not given, but the editorial note says that, "In the vigorous and faithful translation which Mr. Pincott has made for the readers of India is presented a description of our great Eastern Empire as it appears to the people who live in it."

THE services of Surgeon F. F. MacCartie (Bombay Establishment), Probationer in the Assay Department, Bombay, has been replaced at the disposal of the Government of Bombay.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—Mysore Shares on Saturday were in demand, and rose 3-16, this being the only change. Mysore Shares were last quoted 6 to 6½ xd., Nundydroog 1 15-16, to 2 1-16, Indian Consolidated 2s. 6d. to 3s., Balaghat-Mysore fully paid (£1) 9s. 6d. to 10s., Ooregum Ordinary 2½ to 2½, ditto Preference 2 1-16 to 2 3-16, Devala-Moyar 3s. 3d. to 3s. 9d., Nine Reefs New (17s. paid) 8s. to 9s., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 11s. to 11s. 6d., Mysore-Wynaad (18s. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d., South-East Mysore 2s. to 2s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 3s. to 3s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 15s. to 15s. 6d., New South-East Wynaad 6d. to 1s., and Mysore West (16s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 9.

The Indian Government has published a reply to the strictures which the House of Commons, at the instance of Mr. Caine, M.P., and Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., passed on its excise administration last year. Immediately after the House passed its resolution the supreme Government called upon the provincial Governments for full reports, and after they were received some six months were spent in digesting and arranging them. The result is a most complete and crushing answer to the indictment. As that answer with the appendices covers nearly 400 printed pages, it is impossible to do more now than mention some few points. After alluding to the serious difficulties which have to be met in establishing a system of excise in India, the Government go on to say:—

"These difficulties are, we believe, greater than are met in any other country which is ruled on principles in accord with modern civilisation, and the complexity of the questions involved makes it difficult for those who have no practical experience of the working of the administration to appreciate the obstacles with which we have to contend. Under such circumstances it is a matter for regret that the statements made in the debate on the Indian excise system should, as they appear to us, have been inaccurate and misleading, and we feel it necessary to reply at some length to criticisms which have resulted in the condemnation as a whole of the many widely differing and complex excise systems in force in India."

Several of Mr. Caine's statements are next discussed in detail, and their inaccuracy is exposed. For instance, with reference to his assertion that drinking had greatly increased in Bengal during the last few years, it is shown that he only offered evidence up to 1884, while it was not till the following year that the Bengal Government proceeded to carry out the recommendations of the Excise Commission, with the result that the issue of spirits from the central distilleries greatly decreased. Again, it is proved that he entirely misapprehended the statements made to him in conversation by an excise official at Bombay whom he quoted in the debate. On this the Government remark:

"We do not charge Mr. Caine with intentional misrepresentation. His mistake, no doubt, was made in ignorance, but we would strongly urge that statements of this sort, made in Parliament when they cannot be contradicted at the time, should not be accepted as evidence sufficient to justify what was practically a vote of censure on the excise administration of the Government of India."

A number of other misconceptions and mistakes are exposed in no less complete a manner. One incident is described as a striking illustration of the disadvantage at which the Indian Government is put when its policy is discussed in England. A similar remark might be made of nearly all Mr. Caine's and Mr. Smith's allegations, and no one reading the document can doubt the triumph of the Indian Government.

The debate on Lord Cross's Councils Bill, although as yet we have only a brief and not very clear telegraphic summary, is attracting much attention. It may be said generally that the whole of the Indian public, with the exception of the Congress party, are disposed to regard the measure with favour. The Indian Spectator, a Native paper published at Bombay, says the Bill ought to be welcomed as a fair result of the agitation for the right of election. That right, it adds, is not of much practical need just at present, and will not be so until it can be shown that the Government selects incompetent or weak men. Even when able and independent councillors are available election might in the present state of things lead to failure if extended to the councils, whereas nomination will probably lead to success.

The Indian Mirror, a Congress organ published in Calcutta, maintains that the Legislative Councils have hitherto been shams, and will continue to be so until the right of electing members is conceded to the people. The Bengalee, another Congress paper, is surprised that Lord Cross should have introduced a Bill which deliberately ignores the elective principle.

Mr. Hume, general secretary and principal organiser of the Congress, writing to a Bombay paper, says:—

"I wish to distinctly place on record before leaving India my conviction that the Bill is worse than nothing, that it is simply an insult to the country. It is a case of the authorities, whom we humbly petitioned for bread, casting a stone in our faces."

Against these utterances of the irreconcilable party may be set the fact that the movement among the Mahomedans of Upper India to petition Parliament against Mr. Bradlaugh's proposed Bill is steadily gaining strength, and that the petition is likely to be largely and influentially signed

Some useful lessons as to the fitness of India for representative institutions may be gathered from the recently published report of the Punjab Government on the working of the local boards established under Lord Ripon's local self-government scheme. The report states that the work done by the boards has not been fruitful, that the people take little interest in them, and that men of good standing shrink from the shame of defeat at the polls, and so do not offer themselves as candidates.

Prince Albert Victor spent last week in a shooting excursion to the Nepal jungles. The party had fair sport, although heavy rain interfered to some extent. They return to British territory to-morrow, and then proceed towards Bombay, making a few halts en route.

Some naval manœuvres that were held at Bombay last week appear to prove conclusively that the present armament of the forts is insufficient to protect the city against a strong and enterprising enemy. The steamer Lawrence, which was supposed to represent a heavy ironclad belonging to an enemy, easily defeated the turret ship Abyssinia, and then passing up the harbour took up a position beyond the range of the batteries and shelled the city.

For some time past a band of dacoits under a notorious leader named Jhunda have been the terror of Meerut and the surrounding districts. Last Monday a police force under the district superintendent came upon them when they were about to plunder a village. The dacoits got possession of a small fort, where they provisioned themselves and refused to surrender. The police thereupon attacked them. A sharp fight ensued, and it is said that over 100 rifle shots were fired by the dacoits. After some time the dacoits tried to escape, but were captured. Jhunda and another man were killed. The police escaped unhurt. Two Martini-Henry rifles were found with the band.

The Chamber of Commerce of Upper India has followed the example of the Bengal Chamber in protesting strongly against the proposed Factories Act, which it declares to be unnecessary and not suited for India. The chairman, in addressing the Chamber, expressed an opinion in favour of cutting down the large number of Native holidays now observed by the Government, and also spoke at some length on the necessity of having an alternative railway line between Calcutta and Upper India.

The epidemic which has been raging in Bombay for some time now shows signs of abating. There it is a difference of opinion as to its nature, some maintaining that it is influenza, others that it is only a mild type of fever. It appears to have been as universal as the influenza was in England, and to have necessitated almost entire cessation of work in the manufactories and schools. Reports of outbreaks of influenza also come from other quarters, notably Vellore in Southern and Lucknow in Northern India. At the latter place it appeared about a week ago, and has already prostrated the larger portion of the garrison.

The case of O'Hara, a private of the Leinster Regiment, who, a fortnight ago, was tried before the Calcutta High Court on a charge of murdering a Native and sentenced to death, has been brought before the Court for revision on the certificate of the Advocate-General. The case was argued for four days before the Chief Justice and five other Judges. The main point was whether the two principal witnesses for the Crown were not accomplices whose uncorroborated evidence was insufficient for conviction. The Court has taken time to consider. The case is exciting much interest, and many persons believe that the evidence at the trial was altogether untrustworthy.

The Viceroy leaves Calcutta early in April. He spends a fortnight at Dehra Dûn before going to Simla.

The Chinese Amban, who has been residing at Darjeeling for about a year, is expected to arrive in Calcutta on Wednesday. It is hoped that the negotiations on the Sikkim question will then be brought to a final conclusion.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 9.

A Lahore newspaper learns from a trustworthy Native source that the Ameer has determined to subdue Kafiristan, and is preparing to enter the country from the north as well as the south.

BURMA.

RANGOON, MARCH 9.

The Rangoon Times reports that a conspiracy has been discovered at Mandalay to fire the town, seize the palace, and place an Alompra pretender named Moungha on the throne. Numerous arrests have been made. A number of Phoongyees are said to be implicated.

Sir Lepel Griffin has returned to Rangoon from the Ruby mines. He remained four days at the mines. Owing to the difficulty of the road, and the stringent regulations, the Ruby mines district remains very much terra incognita. Sir L. Griffin's visit has again attracted public attention to the mines, which has been heightened by the fact that a correspondent of the Rangoon Times, who, with Sir L. Griffin's consent, proposed accompanying him to the mines, was prevented from going by the local officials at the mines. The Rangoon Times suggests that the real reason of the prohibition was that the officials were unwilling that the truth about the progress of the works should be known.

The following authoritative statement of Sir Lepel Griffin's views appears to negative this suggestion:—The visit was satisfactory, and Sir L. Griffin considers that it has resulted in placing the affairs of the company on a more assured basis. The great difficulty of the company was smuggling. No good rubies reached the company's agents under the existing rules, which compelled the miners to dispose of stones to the company, or sell them by public auction, paying the company 30 per cent. on the valuation. With the approval of the Government the existing rules will be abolished, and a free market for the sale of rubies established by a limited number of miners, who will pay fees estimated to produce £15,000 yearly. No fresh Native mines will be allowed to be opened. As a result of these changes all the detectives, and three-fourths of the Goorkha military police, will no longer be needed. Sir L. Griffin considers that the expensive and elaborate hydraulic methods of Californian mining, which it was originally proposed to adopt, are unsuited to the ruby mines. He declares that the enterprise, if carried on with energy, will be a brilliant success; but much remains to be done before the company will be in working order.

A concession of the mining rights over four square miles of coal-bearing land at Kalay, in Upper Chindwin, has been granted to a Calcutta syndicate, represented by Messrs. Balmer, Lawrie, and Company. A coal-mining concession near Kyaukmyoung, on the Irrawaddy, has been granted to another syndicate.

Oil-bearing land at Kean-Angyoung is being marked out in mile-square blocks, which will be offered to public competition.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

RANGOON, MARCH 9.

An advance on the Tashon Ywama will be made by two columns from Haka and Fort White on the 11th inst. They will meet on the bank of the Manipur river, advancing thence on Thop. The Haka column will be accompanied by two mountain guns. It is reported that the Tashon Ywama is strongly fortified. The general opinion is that the Tashons will offer resistance.

A force of 50 Borderers and 50 Goorkhas, commanded by Major Skene, which was sent from Fort White to attack the village of Yawlu and enforce the submission of the Shwebin-gaji tribe, has had a skirmish with the Chins. One Borderer and one Goorkha were wounded. The Chins burned the village and retreated, and subsequently cut the telegraph near Kalemio, carrying off four miles of wire.

The Haka chiefs have taken the oath of submission to the British power.

Brigadier-General Symons reports that Colonel Tregear's resources will not allow him to advance further this season. A gap of 80 miles exists between Haka and Colonel Tregear's camp on the Koladain. Brigadier-General Symons advocates that only one post—at Haka—should be established in the Chin country. The garrison will be completely isolated from Burma for several months. The Tounghkal River, which is in flood for five months, makes 11 miles of the road recently traversed by the troops impassable during the rains.

The health of the troops is still bad. Of the last detachment of 100 Borderers sent from Rangoon only 52 reached Haka. Ninety-nine more Punjab coolies have been sent back invalided.

CALCUTTA, MARCH 9.

The reconnoitring party which Brigadier-General Symonds sent to meet Colonel Tregear's column, and which recovered the heads of Lieutenant Stewart and the two British soldiers who were killed by the Lushais in 1888, also obtained three Snider rifles and Lieut. Stewart's aneroid and field glasses.

The troops are now encamped at Haka, which is described as a delightful place in a broad, open valley, with wild pear trees blossoming in profusion, and violets and other English flowers. Lieut. Brownrigg, who was lately wounded, is doing well. As the two columns have now joined hands there is little left to do, and the forces will soon return, leaving garrisons at various points.

Mr. Cox, now acting Accountant-General, Bombay, will go on furlough for two years about the end of March, and Mr. Robert Logan, from Lahore, will relieve him. Mr. E. W. Kellner, the Deputy Accountant-General, moving up as Accountant-General to the Punjab Government.

THE USE OF HILL TORRENTS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

We are glad to learn that efforts are being made in the Gujrat district to induce the zemindars to use the hill torrents usefully by throwing embankments across them and taking off water channels to irrigate the land. This is done largely in Dera Ghazi Khan and Dera Ismail Khan; in some parts of the Gujrat district the hill torrents, like the Tabi and Bhimber, both swollen by affluents from the Pubhi range, are eating into the good land and covering it with sand, after the manner of the Hoshiarpur "chos." The ruin which is gradually overtaking the zemindars from this cause could easily be stopped if they would exert themselves; but the Punjabi zemindars are the stiff-necked generation known to science. The only way to teach them to adopt an improvement is to induce one person to do so, and wait until his resultant prosperity becomes undeniable. Then all his neighbours may become amenable to reason. It is no use trying to convince them of anything by argument, or even by illustration on Government ground. They must see a villager, one of themselves, waxing fat, and escaping from the bunnia's clutches, before they can see the advisability of mending their ways likewise. We are glad, therefore, to learn that one village is being separately taken in hand, and will be made a model of embankments and water channels. A seer of example to the rustic mind is worth a maund of preaching.

THE NORTHERN SHAN STATES.

(Englishman.)

There can be no doubt that the condition of the Northern Shan States shows marked improvement as compared with last year. Mr. Daly, in his report, points out that Kun San Ton Hon's authority has been peacefully extended throughout North Theinni; that in South Theinni confidence has been restored by the establishment of the post at Lashio; and that there are prospects of better and firmer government in Mainglon. The North Theinni Sawbwa has readily agreed to introduce in his State aims regulations similar to those recently brought in by the Thibaw Sawba, and it is hoped that the system may shortly be extended to South Theinni and Taungbaing. The mixed character of the population renders the measure one of some little difficulty in Theinni and Taungbaing. The amount of tribute on account of 1887-88 actually paid in by the various States was Rs. 32,175, leaving about 15 per cent. of the demand still outstanding. During the year the health of the Lashio Military Police was a cause of grave anxiety, about 25 per cent. of the force being unfit for duty in July last. Some 80 per cent. of the detachment are young Punjabis, upon whom the change of climate seems to tell severely.

DACOITY IN THE PUNJAB.

(Pioneer.)

We know from the annual report of the Thuggi and Dacoity Department that dacoity still flourishes with almost its original vigour in many of the Native States, and is still of comparatively frequent occurrence in the less populous districts under British rule; but we certainly do not expect to find the game of stand and deliver played at this time of day on the public highway within a few miles of a city like Delhi. Yet this is what, as our local correspondent telegraphed, has actually happened. The dak carrying the Karnal mails was stopped not more than fifteen miles from Delhi by a band of twenty men. The robbers, after the manner of the typical highway-men of romance, seem to have been extremely polite, offering no violence, but only relieving the dak of everything it carried. The worst of it is that the Punjab police have scarcely the excuse of being taken entirely unawares. For several years back a band of robbers, probably the same as that which made this successful coup, has been systematically exploiting Delhi and its vicinity. The leader, a daring rascal belonging to the Gujar fraternity, a well-known criminal tribe, was captured in the summer of 1828; but the spoiling of the Karnal dak shows only too clearly that his band is as strong as ever, and indeed his recent escape and recapture seem to have merely increased their audacity. The robbers, though their band is evidently well organised and their plans are always carefully prepared, have played the same game so frequently that it is astonishing they have so long eluded capture. A robbery is planned somewhere in the Meerut and Bulandshahr districts, the dacoits make their way one by one to the scene of action, the booty is secured, and the marauders then retire across the Jumna to distribute their spoils and lie quiet until the hue-and-cry has died away and they see a fresh opportunity. It is scarcely creditable, however, that a band which has made itself so notorious should have been able to carry on its depredations so long. Serious crime has been becoming alarmingly prevalent in the Punjab of late years, and the police of the Province cannot afford to let the rose fall from their chaplet much oftener. Such an affair as that ought to be altogether impossible in British territory.

ROYAL DRESS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

A Native correspondent complains that Prince Albert Victor does not wear a distinctive dress when he appears in public. This may appear a small thing; but we have received so many letters from Natives on the subject that it evidently is not so in their eyes. Take the case of a villager who has tramped many miles to Lahore to see the future Emperor of India, and is pledged to bring back full accounts to his village in the desert. What kind of a figure does he cut when he returns, and says that he saw a number of sahibs in carriages, but does not know which was the Prince. Our Burma correspondent telegraphed how the boatmen of the Irrawaddy had spent days of waiting to see the Prince, and when he came clamoured to any European who would stop to listen to tell them which was the Prince, and were filled with satisfaction and delight when the distinguishing peculiarity of his civilian costume was pointed out. No doubt, to save trouble, any civilian might have been pointed out, and would have satisfied them equally well; but this is not the way in which India expects to recognise the great ones of her world. So far, at any rate, as the Punjab is concerned, we feel sure that if, on the Prince's visit to Lahore, some simple symbol of sovereignty or other device to distinguish the Prince from his neighbours had been devised, a large amount of disappointment would have been obviated. It is difficult to those who know all the members of our Royal Family from photographs and illustrated papers, and are familiar with the etiquette of processions, to realise the difficulty which Natives find in selecting the central figure of our ceremonies. It is impossible for us to realise the importance which they attach to the mere fact of looking on the Queen's grandson. As, however, the percentage of disappointed ones, who send "letters to the editor" of an English newspaper, must be fractional, we feel sure that disappointment has been widely felt.

AFGHANISTAN.

(Pioneer.)

The announcement made by the Amir that he intends to visit Herat in the spring proves that he has at last completed the settlement of Afghan-Turkistan. For more than a year he has remained in his military camp at Mazar-i-Sharif, rooting out the disaffection caused by Ishak Khan's intrigues, and re-establishing his authority in a province where it had been seriously shaken. The sinister rumours that his power had been undermined in Afghanistan generally, and that his absence from Kabul would be a signal for a general rising in the capital and the eastern districts, has been falsified by events; and there can be no doubt that his vigorous policy in connection with the rebellion of 1888 has strengthened his hold upon the country. His reign has been a stormy one hitherto, but there are signs that the troublous period has passed away, and that, apart from any hostile action on the part of Russia, Abdur Rahman has now nothing to fear from his enemies. His defeat of Ayub Khan at Kandahar, the suppression of the repeated insurrections among the Ghilzais and Shinwaris, and the dispersal of Ishak's adherents after the battle of Ghazniak, have stamped him as a fit ruler of the turbulent Afghan race. His methods are, of course, not in harmony with those of civilised Governments, and the merciless severity of his punishments cannot be approved; but none can question the success he has achieved in consolidating his kingdom. He had at the outset to combat the suspicion of the fanatical element in the population, whom his alliance with the British Government had excited, and to overawe the priesthood who had thoroughly aroused the people during the war of 1878-80; and this he succeeded in doing mainly by reorganising his army, and relying solely upon it in all emergencies. The subsidies of money and arms provided from India enabled him to create out of the wreck of Shere Ali's and Yakub Khan's troops a force so well equipped that his success in any civil war was assured. The last risk of assassination lies always before a ruler in Afghanistan, and Abdur Rahman's escape at Mazar-i-Sharif was a danger surmounted by his good fortune only. In his earlier appeals to the Government of India for liberal assistance the Amir bitterly denounced the treachery and lawlessness of his subjects, and the occurrences of the last nine years have more than justified this estimate. Had the mistaken policy been followed of leaving him to his own devices we should probably have seen Afghanistan lapse into a state of anarchy such as followed upon the death of the Dost. As it is, the British Government have at least the satisfaction of seeing the country held by an ally whose military strength is greater than that of any previous ruler, and who has loyally carried out his engagements regarding his relations with foreign Powers.

HONORIFIC PREFIXES.

(Indian Daily News.)

There are many inconsistencies in the conduct and claims of some of our Native fellow-subjects; and an instance of it occurs in the letters which we published a few days ago as to the use of honorific prefixes. One writer objects to the use of the word "Baboo" as being one of contempt. He admits that it was not always so, but that it has become so from use or association. He wants it to be dropped altogether, or to be substituted by the English prefix "Mr." We are not concerned for the appropriation of the latter, for we have no special love for it as a prefix or for the affix "Esq." There is nothing good or bad in either, and yet they have a sort of value or convenience in conventional use which seems to justify their acceptance. We are told that "Baboo" is the real equivalent of "Mr.," and that it was once respectable. No doubt it was, and was applied to men of good position. Judges of the High Court and Native barristers were termed "Baboo" but some of those who had been to England seemed to repudiate the term and preferred "Mr." The use of one or the other is no guarantee for character, but either may indicate position. If the term "Baboo" has become one of contempt or reproach it is the result of affectation and change of relations that attend the course of "civilisation" that is now running in India. Whether this be good or bad we do not now inquire. But it is somewhat strange that the people who are ready to denounce the pantalooned and batted "England-returned Baboo" are so anxious to have the English "Mr." and to repudiate the national term. If they prefer the dhotee and chudder, why do they decline the indigenous prefix? Why seek that to which they have no claim? Not that it has any value in itself; but, as we say, it has a conventional use with marked distinctions. There are occasions on which the honorific prefix should be used, and there are others where its omission is rather complimentary than otherwise. Nor is it difficult to distinguish when to use them. The writer to whom we refer would rather, he intimates, be addressed by his personal name without any prefix than be called "Baboo," and he implies in a general way that it is quite respectful and proper to make the omission indiscriminately, as we do not say Mr. Shakespeare or Mr. Milton.

BENGAL.

(Feb. 18.)

VISCOUNT DUNLO, the eldest son of the Earl of Clancarty, is at present on a visit to Calcutta.

MR. H. LEE in the grade of Joint Magistrate, but now officiating as a Collector, is believed to be a likely successor to Sir Henry Harrison as Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation if he cares to accept the appointment.

It is said to be highly probable that Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, at present officiating in the Legislative Council, will fill the temporary vacancy in the Provincial High Court caused by the Hon. Mr. Tyrrell taking six months' leave in the spring.

DURING the first day's operations of the "defence of Calcutta" at Diamond Harbour, two men of the 8th Bengal Infantry contrived by some means to fall into the water. One swam ashore, but the other was gallantly rescued by Captain W. G. Mansel, of the same regiment.

THE Englishman learns that on the 4th inst. Mr. W. B. Savi, Officiating Superintendent of Dacca Kheddahs, effected a very successful capture of a herd of forty-seven elephants in a single drive at Chirangiri in the Garo Hills. This makes nearly a hundred and fifty elephants caught by this skilful operator during the two months he has already officiated for Mr. Sanderson.

MR. SPENSER made another successful balloon ascent on Saturday at Calcutta. The balloon was 75 feet high and 50 in diameter, the cubic capacity of which was 52,000 feet. At 5 P.M. Mr. Spencer, accompanied by Mrs. Magri, Babu P.C. Laha, Mr. Castelberg, and a native servant, cast off: The balloon rose three thousand feet, where a lovely view was obtained. They ultimately came down at 6.45 in a village near the Salt Lakes. The people were much astonished, and could hardly believe that a woman was in the car.

MADRAS.

(Feb. 19.)

SATURDAY was the scene of great excitement throughout Madras. All the Native shops and bazaars were closed. The Town Hall and its park began to be crowded from 3 P.M., and over ten thousand persons, including merchants of all classes, were present, the Town Hall being insufficient to accommodate them. The president declared that an open-air meeting not being found possible, it was proposed to have six platforms erected in different places. The chief meeting was presided over by Somasundrum Chettiar. There were several speakers. The resolutions of the last Congress was ratified, and a memorial to the House of Parliament was adopted for the expansion of Indian Legislative Councils, praying for the support of Mr. Bradlaugh's Bill. The memorial was proposed by S. Subramaniaiyer, C.I.E., and seconded by the Rev. G. M. Cobban. At the overflowing meetings held in other parts, the Hon. Sankaranaiyer, Rungiahnaidu, Kristnasawmi Chetti, and Rajagopalachari, presided. Speeches were made in vernaculars. Never was such a meeting held in Madras. Everything was orderly, the petition was printed in all vernaculars, and circulated for signature.* The Black Town merchants, about 200 in number, formed themselves into a merchants' committee to obtain signatures, and make house-to-house collection for the Congress Fund.

A MEETING was held to-day, under the presidency of the Hon. Mr. Stokes, to consider proposals for the establishment of a Society for the Production of Sound and Wholesome Literature for the People of India.

THE Madras Government have, at the request of the planters, sent Mr. Lawson, Government Botanist, to the Wynad, to investigate causes of dying off of extensive fields of young cinchonas.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR returned from Ganjam, suffering from fever, yesterday, and was, therefore, unable to attend the Council meeting. He has recovered to-day, and comes to Government House from Guindy, this evening.

BOMBAY.

(Feb. 21.)

A NEW School of Art is shortly to be opened at Limdi.

In this week's Bombay Government Gazette it is notified that Mr. C. B. Pritchard, C.S., C.S.I., has been granted an extension of three months' leave.

AFTER the return of Mr. W. J. Holland to duty, Mr. J. B. D. Adams, District Superintendent of Police, Ahmedabad, will be allowed furlough for fifteen months.

SURGEON A. MILNE, M.B., C.M., has been appointed to act as Civil Surgeon, Nassik, during the absence of Surgeon-Major P. Murphy, M.D., M.Ch.

LADY REAY paid a return visit to the Begum Saheb of Mangrol on Monday evening at her bungalow on the Chowpatee Road. Her ladyship stayed there for nearly half an hour. There were also a few well-known Parsee and Mahomedan ladies present on the occasion.

CANON WILBERFORCE delivered a lecture on Temperance at the Money School on Wednesday evening. In an eloquent address he sought to prove that drunkenness was ruinous; that moderation was dangerous, and that total abstinence was positively safe. The lecturer was listened to with rapt attention by a large audience, and was loudly cheered at frequent intervals.

MR. C. PALMER, the Marine Examiner of Accounts, Bombay, proceeds home on furlough for one year and eight months on the 8th of March. It is not definitely decided as yet as to who will officiate for him during his absence, but the acting incumbency is said to lie between Captain Field, Military Department, of the Government of India Office, and Mr. F. Place, the Marine Storekeeper of the Bombay Government Dockyard.

In view of the expected visit of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor, most lavish preparations are in a forward state at Bhownugger. On the 17th of March, the day his Royal Highness is expected to reach there, the whole of the town from the port to the remotest corner will be brilliantly illuminated, and a contract for illumination has already been given. There will be an unprecedented display of pyrotechnics, as more than Rs. 6,000 are to be expended over it.

THE Durbar room in the Town Hall was on the 13th inst. the scene of a long and animated meeting of the general committee appointed at the public meeting held in the Town Hall on the 7th inst., to organise a reception for H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor on the occasion of his forthcoming visit to Bombay. The Hon. Sir Raymond West presided, and there was a large attendance. The business transacted included the appointment of a large, influential, and representative executive committee to make the necessary arrangements for the reception of his Royal Highness and the election of a chairman of the committee. The appointment of the committee, which was proposed by Sir Henry Morland, provoked very little discussion, but the election of the chairman created some excitement, much personality being imported into the discussion. Sir Henry Morland proposed Mr. Grattan Geary as chairman, while Mr. A. F. Beaufort nominated the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley. Mr. Beaufort, in support of his nomination, read a telegram from Sir Frank Forbes Adam, expressing the opinion that as Mr. Geary was chairman of the Municipal Corporation and pledged to plans which might clash with the scheme of the general committee, it would be advisable to elect an independent chairman. Mr. Geary had scarcely had time to state his denial of the insinuation, when Mr. N. S. Symons rose, and, amidst much confusion, declared that Mr. Geary had openly expressed himself in political sympathy with the Fenians, and in these circumstances asked whether such a person was the right man to head a loyal movement, such as the one they were then engaged in organising. Mr. Geary thereupon rose to explain matters, and stated that he had never at any time had any political sympathy with the party to whom Mr. Symons had referred. After this explanation the chairman proceeded to take a division on the question of the election, which resulted in the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley being appointed, the announcement being received with loud and prolonged applause.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 4

—O:—

EXCISE ADMINISTRATION IN INDIA.

MR. CAINE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he had yet received the reply of the Indian Government to the despatch of the Secretary of State for India, "Revenue No. 52, Excise Administration, resolution of the House of Commons," dated May 16, 1889; when it would be laid upon the table of the House; and whether it would be circulated to members.

SIR J. GORST: The despatch has just been received, and if the hon. member moves for it it will be laid upon the table.

THE VOLUNTEER FORCE OF INDIA.

MR. CAINE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Secretary of State for India was aware that, while admission to the Volunteer force of India was refused to the inhabitants of that country as such, Indian Christians were permitted to become members of these organisations; and whether, if he found the facts were as stated above, the Secretary of State would give instructions to the Government of India to remove a disqualification which depended solely upon the profession of a particular religion and make it possible for any Indians who might desire to do so to join the Volunteer forces of the country.

SIR J. GORST: There is no such exception in favour of Christians; all Natives of India are alike eligible for admission to Volunteer corps.

THE RIOT AT ROHTAK.

MR. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he would lay upon the table the papers relating to certain disturbances and rioting in Rohtak, in the Punjab, in August and September last, and the reports of the trial of certain persons accused in connection therewith, and of the appeal and judgment thereon.

SIR J. GORST: The Secretary of State has no papers relating to the riot at Rohtak. The persons implicated were dealt with by the ordinary tribunals, and no report of the trials or judgments would, in the ordinary course, be sent to the India Office.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 6.

—O—

INDIAN COUNCILS BILL.

VISCOUNT CROSS formally moved the second reading of this Bill, the object of which is to extend the functions of the legislative bodies in India and to enlarge the area from which the members of the supreme and other councils are selected.

The Earl of NORTHBROOK gave his cordial support to the measure, and pointed out that the proposals it contained were by no means new, but had been many times brought forward and fully considered. It, therefore, could not be said to be premature, and he was satisfied that the additional powers which would be given would materially strengthen the hands of the Administration in India. He very much regretted, however, that the Government had been unable to introduce into the Bill any system under which a portion of the members of the local councils should be chosen by election or selection, and not be chosen entirely, as at present, under a system of nomination. He should, however, deprecate the laying down in this country of any definite plan or scheme of a system of selection applicable to the whole of India, but it might be possible to authorise the Viceroy in Council to submit some scheme for the consideration of the Secretary of State which, on being approved by the latter, might be carried into effect.

In Committee he intended to move an amendment on the subject. (Hear, hear).

The Marquis of RIFON said that with respect to the mode in which any extension of the numbers, both of the Governor-General's Council and of the local councils, should be carried out, he earnestly hoped the Government would reconsider the desirability of so framing the Bill that it would be possible for the Government of India to prepare a scheme of election or selection. Looking at the difficulty of selecting men for nomination, and of meeting misrepresentation and misunderstanding, and the assistance it would be to have men on the councils who would speak freely of the Government measures and afford an opportunity for defending them, he agreed with the Earl of Northbrook that the time had come when the object of the Act of 1861—viz., to obtain representative Native Indians upon the councils—might be best secured by providing that a portion of their members should be chosen by some such bodies as the larger municipal councils or other public bodies.

Viscount Cross thanked their lordships for the way in which this Bill had been received, and was glad to see that the papers he had laid upon the table had disposed of the objections taken to it upon the first reading. In reply to the observations which had been made, he said that everyone who had had anything to do with India knew the necessity for care and caution in view of the vast population and the varying creeds, races, manners, and customs of the inhabitants. India was, in fact, more like a collection of nations than one country. They had, moreover, to consider the state of the population as far as education was concerned, and he might point out that out of a population of 200 millions in British India, according to the latest information only about 5 per cent. could read and write, and only 1 per cent. could speak English. He had great hopes, however, that what was now being done would vastly improve the population of that country in regard to education, but they must be very careful not to take a step which it might be difficult to retrace if it did not answer their expectations. Parliamentary constituencies such as we had were absolutely out of the question, and no one in his senses would ever think of introducing into India anything like our system of English parliamentary government—(hear, hear)—for if an adverse vote were given, instead of the Government resigning, they would be in India compelled still to remain in power, as they were responsible, not to the people of India, but to the Sovereign and the Imperial Parliament. There was no doubt that the intelligence and experience of a number of natives in India was of inestimable value to the Government of India, and it would be very difficult to hold the position we did without availing ourselves of their services. Great steps had already been made in this direction, and this Bill took a further step, and a long step, forwards. The only fault found with the Bill was in regard to what was left out of it; but the Government considered that the question of the system of election was not yet ripe for settlement, although the time might come when such a principle might be adopted. At present, however, the constituency had not been discovered.

The Earl of KIMBERLEY welcomed the Bill, not as a long step in the direction desired, but as a substantial step. He thought it was possible, however, to frame some scheme containing the elective principle, at all events, in regard to the local councils.

The Marquis of SALISBURY did not think noble lords opposite recognised how deep a responsibility must rest upon any Government or any Parliament which introduced the elective principle as an effective agent in the government of India. It might be that that was the ultimate destiny of India, but the beginning of that new principle was one of the greatest parting of the ways which it was possible for any Government to tread. Government by representation was not an Eastern idea, it did not fit Eastern traditions or the Eastern mind. They had seen some attempts to introduce it on that branch of Oriental population with which they had some acquaintance. An effort had been made to introduce it in Turkey and Egypt without having produced any result. An effort also had been made to introduce it into Crete, and there it could not be said to be the medium of producing peace and the development of the country. One difficulty in India was also due to the fact that they had to deal with a deeply divided population; and another was to be found in the fact that the first step of the journey towards representative government had not been traversed, and that was that they were entirely without the constituency in India. They had been offered as a constituency representing warlike races, aristocratic races, and a vast number of ryots, bodies elected for the purpose of making streets and drains, and he did not think, without the least imputation upon the patriotism or capacity of those bodies, they were fitted to perform that function. What appeared to him alarming in the utterances of noble lords was the idea that they could stumble and slip into this great change, and that no harm would come if they failed, if they had not determined beforehand the way their steps were to be placed, and the direction of their journey. They must, however, make up their minds how their constituencies were to be framed, and how varying interests were to be represented before they assigned themselves to the care of the most powerful principle that communities had ever introduced. Therefore he hoped it was not imagined that they could retrace their steps on the result of any mistake, and he earnestly urged the House not to make so great a change without most careful examination of all the conditions which surrounded it, and not to give representation to constituted bodies such as proposed—not to a small section of the people, but to the living strength and vital force of the whole community of India. (Hear, hear.)

Earl GRANVILLE said the Government were incurring a great responsibility in putting aside the recommendations which were understood to proceed from Lord Dufferin.

The Bill was then read a second time.

SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN INTERVIEWED.

(Correspondent of the Times of India.)

RANGOON, FEB. 17.

Sir Lepel Griffin arrived here yesterday. He was interviewed at the mouth of the river by a representative of the Rangoon Times, and the result was published in that paper last evening. He says he will be probably one month in Burma, and leaves Bombay on the 21st March for England. Lady Griffin will accompany him on his tour. He thinks the unhealthiness of the Ruby Mines district is exaggerated in Rangoon. As regards the reluctance of English capitalists working in this province, on which he was questioned, Sir Lepel Griffin replied:—I believe you will soon find that the English capitalists will be very ready to come forward in Burma. I think it is a mistake to imagine that they are not willing to come here. There is now on board this ship Mr. Kirby, who has come out to take up some large oil well concessions. He is a very well-known engineer, and I know that financialists in London are ready to put any amount of money into Burma directly the country is known to be quiet. I think that English capitalists are looking to Burma very much nowadays, and my opinion is there will be no difficulty in getting plenty of money. That is my firm conviction. I myself know half-a-dozen schemes in the air, having reference to Burma, which the first men of the day are inclined to take up. I know many things are talked of in London in connection with Burma at the present moment. There is a very favourable opinion of Burma in the London market. It is requisite, however, for the Government to be liberal and not too red-tapist. The Government must not be too dilatory in its action. If the Government here chooses to encourage English capital it will come very fast, indeed, I have no doubt.

The Times Reporter: May I ask whether you have the ordinary Indian civilian's reluctance to keep out land speculators?

Sir Lepel Griffin: I know nothing of the land system of Burma. English capitalists want land—I do not know in what way—but each scheme has to be considered on its merits.

The Times Reporter: Do you not think it advisable for Government to be more liberal in giving grants of lands to capitalists, even although they may speculate and make money out of such grants?

Sir Lepel Griffin: Well, you see, unless there is some thought of enterprise in that way, you won't get very much chance. It seems to me that in consequence of the Burman being, from all I have heard, very much averse to doing any work himself, there must be in every possible way fresh enterprise by grant or otherwise, if the country is to be pushed on. The Burman does not demand very great consideration if he declines to do anything for himself. Now it is very different with regard to the Native of India, who is one of the most industrious of the people of the whole world; it would not be fair to put him aside. As to a race like the Burmese, well, they must either work themselves or allow other people to work, whether they be the people of India, or the Chinese, or any others.

The Times Reporter: What do you think, Sir, of the Government project for bringing labourers here from Behar and other congested parts of India by forcing grantees and others to employ only such labour when there is no labour law nor anything to prevent men when brought here at great expense, running away directly they arrive?

Sir Lepel Griffin: I know nothing about that project, but I should say the more immigrants we get the better. The question is to get an immigrant whom the country would suit, and so far it appears that such immigrants would be the Chinese. Is not that so?

The Times Reporter: I quite agree, and our journal has for months past advocated the encouragement of Chinese immigration.

Sir Lepel Griffin: The labour market must be filled by somebody. The Indians will be much better than the Chinese in some respects, and in other ways a loss. The good, in my opinion, however, is that the Chinaman was created for a country like Burma.

THE PIONEER DEFAMATION CASE.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 14.

The Pioneer Defamation Case came on to-day before the Presidency Magistrate. Mr. G. W. Allen was called up, and the charge against him was given him to read. After perusing a few lines he said he had read the copy, and was satisfied.

The Magistrate then said: Mr. Allen, you have heard what has been said against you, have you anything to say.

Mr. Allen: No, I reserve my defence.

The Magistrate: Have you any witnesses to call?

Mr. Allen: No, thank you.

The Magistrate then said that the accused shall be committed to take his trial at the ensuing Sessions, and is to be released on his personal recognisance of Rs. 10,000 and two sureties of Rs. 2,000 each, and concluded by observing that he did not think there would be any difficulty about sureties. Mr. Upton undertook to look to the matter, and after having the necessary papers drawn up he and Mr. Fitz stood suerties.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 17.

Mr. Allen pleaded guilty to-day on an indictment charging him with having defamed Captain Hearsey. The case was not put before a jury. The Chief Justice in passing sentence said:—George William Allen, you have pleaded guilty to having defamed the complainant in this case by the publication of this article in Calcutta, within the meaning of the Penal Code. Your counsel tells me that you regret having done, so and you desire to express your regret for it. It seems to me that you are very well advised to have adopted the course which you have adopted in this case. In this country the definition of defamation is anything which is published with a view to injure the character or reputation of another person and among the cases in which persons may write and publish matters concerning others are cases in which the matters are true and it is in the interests of the public that such matters should be published. Now that is the law which the Legislature has laid down. There cannot be a doubt as to the wisdom of that law, the intention of it being that a man shall not, for any purposes of his own, whether for the purpose of injuring a person or for the purpose of obtaining any advantage to himself, rake up old stories of life of another person and give them out to the public, whether they are true or false, unless it is for the interest of the public that these stories should be published. Now in this case, and as far as I am concerned it makes very little difference whether the statements are true or false, they appear to have been made in what was really nothing more than a petty squabble between persons whose character had no element of publicity in them. For how the complainant here could be called a public man in any sense is difficult to understand; if he is a public man, every man who has ever held a commission in the army or in the navy, or who for any reason whatever has got his name into the newspapers, is a public man. It is unnecessary to do more than state that to show how absurd the proposition is. That being the case, the public had no interest whatever in knowing what the history of Captain Hearsey's life was, or whether these stories were true or false. In having pleaded guilty to this charge, you, as I have said before, exercised a wise discretion. If, instead of doing that, you had determined to persist in your defence before a jury on any ground which was open to you, and if the jury had come to the conclusion on hearing the matter that you were guilty of defamation, the question of punishment would have been a very serious matter indeed. Having regard to the course which you have taken, I do not think it will be necessary that I should mark my sense of the gravity of this libel by sentencing you to imprisonment; but, nevertheless, as I have said before, it seems to me that this offence is an extremely grave one. Reading that libel in this paper, it is apparent that a considerable amount of care and considerable amount of trouble had been taken to find out materials for making an attack upon this person's private life in a way which has been done, and which is unwarranted in every sense of the word. Consequently, it is necessary that this offence should be visited in such a way as to mark the sense of the Court of its enormity. The sentence of the Court upon you is that you pay a fine of Rs. 3,000.—Times of India.

THIBET.

After the events of last year the Chinese Resident in Thibet has come to the opinion that the forces in that country require reorganisation, and, according to his showing, there is certainly room for improvement. He states that in former times the garrison in Thibet was recruited in the country itself, but in 1875, owing to the number of troops enlisted being larger than was required for the sake of economy, it was decided to discontinue recruiting in Thibet and to draw the men from regiments in China. Another reason assigned for doing away with the Native troops was that they were much addicted to the practice of disclosing official secrets. The new scheme, however, does not appear to have been a success, for the Resident affirms that the troops drafted in recent years for service in Thibet, although containing a certain proportion of strong and serviceable men, have been largely composed of soldiers who have either committed some offence or have earned the contempt of their commanding officers by a reckless disregard of regimental duty. Frequently they spend months and even years on the journey, and when they do arrive they often turn out to be men who have returned under assumed names, after having been sent back in disgrace to China. As a rule, he says, they are a depraved, enfeebled, and unscrupulous body of soldiers with but a very small admixture of honest or reliable men among them. To remedy this state of things, and having observed that in Thibet itself and at various stations on the way from Sechuen there were numbers of sturdy and intelligent Chinese who knew the Thibetan language and would stand the trials and privations of a military life, and, owing to the pressing requirements for more troops on the frontier, the Resident determined to enlist a number of these men on his own responsibility. In this he appears to have so far successful, and the new men have shown great courage and energy in the discharge of their duties. It is even proposed that in future steady and reliable men should be selected from the Chinese population in the neighbouring districts to the extent of thirty per cent. of the total strength of the garrison in the country. As to the remaining seventy per cent. the commanders of regiments from which the men are drafted are to be held responsible that only well-conducted and able-bodied men are sent. Should this scheme be carried out, it will not only, he says, maintain the balance of Chinese influence in the country, but also obviate any miscarriage of frontier questions. The proposal has met with the partial approval of the Imperial Government, and the Board of War has been ordered to consider and report upon it.—Englishman.

NATIVES AND COMPETITION.

The Poora Sarvajanik Sabha pamphlet on the economic condition of India, to which we referred a few days since, puts forward the recommendation we are all so familiar with as the universal panacea in the eyes of Native grievance-mongers for all evils, real or imaginary, social and industrial as well as political, that are supposed to afflict the country. It is the duty of the Government, we are told, to interfere and protect Native interests against competition. Free Trade is a delusion and a snare in the eyes of this Native economist. What is wanted, in the first place, is a huge system of protection. The Government is blamed for not having discovered earlier that protection is a necessity for the industrial salvation of India. The indigenous industries ought never to have been allowed to dwindle and die out under the pressure of competition from European machine-made goods, sold at prices that the Native hand workers could not rival. The Government, according to the Sarvajanik Sabha, ought to have placed prohibitive duties on foreign manufactures until the indigenous industries, by the advance of education, the introduction of machinery, &c., should be able to compete with them on even terms. Until? Does anyone suppose that manufacturing industry in India to-day would, under such conditions, have been any "forrader" than it was, say, fifty years ago? "The British Government in this country," the pamphleteer laments, "did not think that their duty lay in such direction. They did not think it right or expedient to foster by artificial aids the system of Native industries, and save it from its destined doom. And accordingly they not only declined to stand between us and our rivals and extend to us a helping hand in the fight, or even observe a strict impartial attitude of neutrality and allow us to settle our account as best we could, but, going further, they did all they could to help on the foreign competitor as against us in various ways—by adopting Free Trade measures, by pushing railway extensions, by making grants of special privileges to foreign enterprise, &c., &c." What can Mr. Bradlaugh and the other friends of India in England think of the state and prospects of progress in the country when a public body, claiming to represent the most intelligent and best educated opinion of a large area of the Bombay Presidency, is found to approve and endorse arguments of this sort without detecting the patent fallacies that lie a very little way beneath the surface?—Indian Daily News.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.*

Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co., of 13, Waterloo-place, S.W., have recently published a work on the "Indian Evidence Act," and other Acts relating thereto, which should be welcomed by all lawyers, whether judges, jurists, or practitioners. It is by Mr. William Griffith, B.A., of Cambridge, and Barrister-at-Law, of Lincoln's Inn, who is already well-known as the author of several law books, chiefly, however, works on the laws of India. Amongst his works may be mentioned the "Institutes of Equity"; Commentaries on the "Indian Trusts Act, 1882"; "the Indian Easements Act, 1882"; "the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure"; "the Indian Code of Civil Procedure." The last-named work we had the pleasure of reviewing lately.

The work in question commences with an introduction which consists of a clear and able exposition of the principles of judicial evidence. Both the Indian Evidence Acts (Nos. 1 and 18 of 1872) were framed by Mr. Justice Stephen, when he was the Legal Member of the Viceroy's Council, the first being the principal Act, and the latter only for the purpose of amending the former. In the introduction the author points out that many branches of the law of evidence of this country are not comprehended in the principal Act, for which the framer of the Act has been found fault with in some quarters, but that such omissions were really intentional; and he states that he has endeavoured to supply in his notes such omissions, not by citations from other writers, but by extracts from or references to the Indian Statute Book. These extracts and references will be found principally in the notes to sections 1, 2, 6, 7, 80, 136, and in the introductory remarks on chapter ix. of the Act.

The introduction is followed by a prefatory explanation of the distinctions between evidence, testimony, and proof, as well as of the meaning of certain terms connected with the subject, such as apparent, visible, obvious, &c., tracing each word to its root.

The author has divided the principal Act into three parts, the first being devoted to the "Relevancy of facts," the second to "Proof," and the third to the "Production and effect of evidence." Each part consists of the sections of the Act relating to the subject, followed by commentaries consisting mainly of decisions of the superior courts of this country, and of the High Courts in India, as well as of extracts and references to English Statutes and Indian Acts.

Act XXIII. of 1872, which, as we have said before, is an amending Act, is then mentioned. But inasmuch as the amendments made thereby are noticed in the notes to the principal Act, its sections are not reprinted.

Then follows the Indian Oaths Act (No. X. of 1873), which is dealt with in a similar manner to that in which the first of the Indian Evidence Acts is done. A noticeable feature in this Act is the provisions of Section 9, which gives power to a Court, where one party to any proceedings before it offers to be bound, if the opposite party or any witness of his will also agree to be bound, by an oath or solemn affirmation in any form common amongst or held binding by persons of the race or persuasion to which he belongs, and not repugnant to justice or decency, nor purporting to affect any third person, to ask the opposite party or any witness of his if he will take such oath or make such affirmation. No such power, as the author points out, is possessed by the English Courts of Justice, nor has such an oath a counterpart in this country. It has, however, in France, as appears from the extracts from the French codes given in the notes to the section of this Act above referred to. From the same notes we learn that "oaths of purgation and judicial oaths are not forbidden by the founder of Christianity, who, in the Sermon on the Mount, restricted his condemnation to rash and foolish oaths in ordinary communications between his actual or professing disciples."

At the end of this Act is given a short commentary on historical evidence, beginning with an extract from Sir George Cornwall Lewis' work on the credibility of the Early Roman History, and concluding with the reasons assigned by the late Mr. Forsyth, who was Consul to the India Office, for believing, on historical grounds, the truth of the narratives in the New Testament.

The work contains two appendices, A. and B. In the former are giving a number of precedents of interrogatories taken from those "drafted or collected by that most able judge, Chief Justice Petheram, when at the English bar," which must be most useful to every practitioner. In this appendix is also given an extract from * "The Indian Evidence Act, with an Introduction on the Principles of Judicial Evidence and Commentaries." Also the "Indian Oaths Act." By W. GRIFFITH, Author of "The Indian Code of Civil Procedure," &c.

Taylor's "Medical Jurisprudence on Physical Facts," which will also be found useful. Appendix B contains a comparative view, very useful to every jurist, of the differences between the English and the Indian Laws of Evidence, for which the author acknowledges indebtedness to Mr. Whitley Stokes, who was also once the Legal Member of the Viceroy's Council.

The work concludes with a full and useful index, which is always a great boon in books of reference. The book is well printed and well bound, and the paper excellent, and with the subject-matter it contains it is sure to command a large sale.

SHINING LIGHTS OF MODERN GERMANY.*

In the course of his interesting—albeit mainly elementary—discourse on "The Utility of Forests and the Study of Forestry," delivered a fortnight ago by Dr. W. Schlich at the Society of Arts, he reminded us that German is now one of the three obligatory subjects in the entrance examinations at Coopers' Hill for students of forestry. French is still retained as one of the optional subjects. Perhaps the Commissioners consider that the latter is now an inseparable portion of "the education of a gentleman," and that, though youths will learn the facile tongue for the sake of recreative reading in fiction, they must be put under compulsion to learn the harsher language of Bismarck, Virchow, and Hartig. No doubt the Commissioners are quite right in thus backing up their scientists. Nevertheless, as young Indian foresters are thus compelled to study German, they may, having once acquired it, desire to find their way into recreative reading in that language—if such there be—so that in lonely jungle hours they may be able to take a turn in the playground of Teutonic literature.

Hence we are glad to be able to show them an easy wicket-gate into that, shall we say, somewhat sober pleasaunce; for Germans, even in their hours of ease, are somewhat strenuous. This wicket-gate is opened to future Indian foresters by Dr. N. Heinemann's "New German Reader"—Shining Lights of Modern Germany. This interesting book chiefly consists of letters of eminent men and women, all full of love of "the fatherland," but most of them are also citizens of the world, and each typical of their class. Take the ladies to begin with—Louise Queen of Prussia, and the mother of Goethe. The epistles of the latter serve to throw light on the growth of that great genius, and vie with those of the talented royal lady in abiding and ever fresh interest. Next come the letters in which kings, emperors, and princes unbend their minds from the cares of State; this series includes several by the last two Emperors, which are replete with side lights on recent history. The great warriors have their turn; and it is curious to note the epistolary style of the looting dragon Blucher, while in Sharnhorst and Moltke we have a higher literary strain. In the fourth division come those of statesmen, from Metternich to Prince Bismarck. As to the latter, those who find pleasure in vigorous, idiomatic German will get it to the full; besides, the special historic interest that attaches to this remarkable man's career comes out with permanent interest in his descriptions, to his private correspondents, of the battle of Sedan, the surrender of Louis Napoleon, and the stirring events of that memorable crisis. The literary men come last (as they generally do in the fortunes of life), but the reader will probably turn to them first, when he catches the names of the Brothers Humboldt—whose personal fame, by the way, seems to have suffered undeserved eclipse of late—the Brothers Grimm, and divers poets, of whom we know far too little. So much for the material of the book. Its contents are well arranged, and the whole accompanied with notes, which Dr. Heinemann has indited so as to elucidate the difficulties of idiom or locution that occur in such free, vernacular compositions. Thus not only lonely foresters, but men and women of light and leading—who have happily acquired some facility in the Teutonic tongue—may find a perennial fund of instruction and pleasure in these "Shining Lights of Modern Germany."

BRITISH WAR MEDALS, MILITARY AND NAVAL, AND HOW THEY WERE WON.†

We have received from Messrs. Groombridge and Sons the first number of a new and revised edition of "British War Medals," by Thomas Carter. This has long been known as the standard work on the subject, and will now be brought down to date and completed in eight monthly parts.

The illustrations are accurate and most beautifully produced in fac-simile, and, altogether, the present issue well sustains the reputation of the work.

THE OFFICERING OF THE INDIAN ARMY.—II.

THE question of increasing the number of British officers with a Native regiment, which has been so exhaustively discussed in the pages of the current number of the Asiatic Quarterly Review, is again being mooted in the columns of the Anglo-Indian Press. The Times of India says that it is one which demands immediate and serious consideration. "While many changes have taken place as regards the Native ranks the British element remains practically the same as it was over a quarter of a century ago, except for a very small increase of two per regiment of that wonderful genus, the 'wing officer.' Now, when, in 1864, the reorganisation (or, as we have sometimes heard it called, and with a great deal of reason, too, the disorganisation) of the Native regiments was made, the chief object in reducing the number of British officers was to utilise the Native officer, bring him more to the front, and to encourage him towards self-reliance and a sense of responsibility by making him a company commander. Ask any commanding officer; go even further, ask any Commander-in-Chief or member of the Headquarter Staff if this object has been arrived at, and he cannot but reply in the negative. Except for advanced education and instruction in various matters of his calling the Native officer of to day, so far as self-reliance and responsibility are concerned, is just the same as he was five-and-twenty years ago. Send him on detachment, or place him in an important position on service or in field manoeuvres, where he is left to his own resources and intelligence, and he will be found wanting—what?—the superior reliability and resource of the British officer." This is an excellent reason by itself for advocating that British officers with Native regiments should be increased, and each company commanded by one of them; but the writer brings forward another argument to strengthen his case, which it hardly does. That argument he calls, regarding the question from a "social point of view":—"Everybody knows what an absurd farce it is to keep up a separate mess in Native regiments in some of the Mofussil stations, and we need not recall the oft-told tale of two or (if very lucky) three officers sitting down together, night after night, until they are heartily sick of each other's society. Contrast with this state of things a well-managed, comfortable mess of, say, some eight or ten members." This is all very well, but the desired increase of the British element in Native regiments is not likely to be granted by those having the power to do so, merely to ensure that sufficient numbers for diversified conversation at mess, or for a rubber at whist afterwards, may be secured. The really strong argument in favour of the suggested increase is the proved inefficiency of the Native officer if entrusted with responsible command. On this point the writer in the Asiatic Quarterly and the writer in the Times of India are agreed. The former says:—"Instances of bravery on the part of Native officers have never been wanting, and assuredly nothing could surpass the almost romantic bravery of the gallant Goorkha Subadar who last year in the Black Mountain district of our North-Western frontier so heroically stood by the body of his slain commanding officer, Colonel Battye, and by the wounded Captain Urmston. But bravery alone will not make an efficient leader; and no Native officer can ever possess that mysterious 'ikbal,' that subtle prestige of superiority and success which seems to radiate in so wondrous a way from the person of even the youngest British officer." If this be so, the argument in favour of increasing the number of British officers with Native regiments is conclusive, but it must be remembered that this very dogmatic dictum has been urged before, and has been before contested. Whether Sir John Jacob, whose opinions the writer in the Review considers justly entitled to the greatest weight, was right or wrong in his advocacy of the Irregular system, there seems to be still some weight in opinions which he expressed long ago on this very question of officering the Native army. Seven years before the Mutiny he wrote:—"The great number of European officers now allowed prevents the Native officer, whatever his merit, from attaining a responsible or very respectable position in the army; thereby keeping out of its ranks Natives of birth, wealth and family, and preventing in the Native soldier the full development of that love for, and pride in, the service which are essential to great efficiency." But one need not go so far back as the days of General Jacob for opinions on this matter contrary to those held by the Asiatic Review. By the Overland Mail of this week we have to hand a very able paper contributed to the Pioneer, in which the writer says:—"It is idle to assert, as I have heard some do, that the Natives of India are unfitted to fill high commands. History teaches us otherwise. In conquering India, in suppressing the Mutiny, ay, even in our wars in Afghanistan, we have met Orientals who have showed themselves capable generals. I fancy Sir Frederick Roberts would recognise the skill of Mahomed Jan, and General Burroughs would certainly pay a tribute to the ability of Ayub Khan. But it is not necessary to look so far forward as this. The real question is: Are there no openings which shall show the Native officer that we value his services and rate his ability at something more than a mere troop or company commander? The first step towards fitting them for command is to give them education. This must be a gradual process; and eventually to establish an Indian Sandhurst and recruit our commissioned ranks mainly from the sons of Native gentlemen who have graduated at the institution will be the result of the very practical suggestion of the Duke of Connaught."

There can be no denial of the fact that little or nothing has been done in India towards fitting Native officers for responsible commands. As the writer in the Pioneer pertinently puts it:—"We expect these men to command a troop on parade with the same intelligence as an Englishman who has passed through Sandhurst, and undergone a garrison class. We send him on picket or on reconnoitring duty; yet we offer him no educational advantages, nor do we hold out any prospects of promotion. The British officer obtains pecuniary prizes for linguistic proficiency, and secures professional advancement if he shows himself a master of military subjects; but, with the single exception of the six Aide-de-Campships to the Viceroy, Presidency Governors, and Commanders-in-Chief, no single staff appointment is open to the commissioned ranks of the Native Army. When once an officer has obtained the rank of resaldar or subadar he has no further hope of promotion. This is neither wise nor politic."
